Girl Provides Clew to 'John' As Lindbergh Faces Captive

Colonel, Disguised, Watches Suspect

'Don't Know if Jafsie Has Told All,' N. Y. Official Admits.

By Francis A. Jamieson.
(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Sept. 27.—From Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's memory of the ransom rendezvous and the recollections of a feminine swimming companion of Bruno Richard Hauptmann the authorities strove tonight to trace accomplices they believe Hauptman had in the kidnaping and slaying of the aviator's baby boy.

Increasing signs of a police conviction that several persons participated in the kidnaping were manifest as Col. Lindbergh, disguised, personally confronted Hauptmann in the office of the Bronx district attorney.

J. Edgar Hoover, of the Department of Justice, has indicated progress toward further arrests. Other authorities declined to discuss this phase of the inquiry.

For a short time late in the afternoon a new clew appeared in a report by Mrs. Katherine Maurer, of the Bronx, that her husband, John Maurer, had disappeared and that he had been acquainted with Hauptmann.

Then She Denies It.

This was discounted somewhat when Mrs. Maurer returned to her home from the prosecutor's office, saying it was "purely a domestic matter" and that neither she nor her husband knew Hauptmann.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of New Jersey State police, remarked that Harry Uhlig and Isadore Fisch, both friends of Hauptmann, had been customers at a store where the Maurers worked.

The name "John" has bobbed up again and again in the 2-year-old quest for the baby's kidnapers, for that was the name by which Dr. John F. Condon, the intermediary, knew the man to whom he paid a $50,000 ransom.

Schwarzkopf said authorities had "followed out everything" Dr. Condon had told them and "so far as we know he has given us everything he knows."

"No one will ever know whether Dr. Condon withheld anything or not," the police chief said in commenting on a published story that

7 Felons Flee Oklahoma Jail

Long-Term Convicts Dig Under Prison's Wall; All Still Free.

McAlester, Okla., Sept. 27 (AP). Seven long-term convicts, one of whom was a convicted murderer, escaped from the Oklahoma State Prison here before dawn today by tunneling under the north wall from the tubercular sanitarium, where they were patients.

All presumably fled in waiting automobiles. No trace of any of them had been found tonight but Warden Sam Brown expressed confidence they would be recaptured shortly.

The fugitives are Earl Williams, serving 30 years for robbery; J. P. Crowley, seven years for auto theft; Jack Berry, 50 years for robbery; 'Vern brothers, 20 years for robbery; Coney Coffey, 25 years for robbery; Jack Capps, 21 years for robbery, and Charley Points, serving a life sentence for the murder of J. D. Gates, Oklahoma City policeman, in 1930.

Warden Brown immediately ordered demolition of the sanitarium, built before his tenure of office. He said investigation disclosed the fugitives had burrowed since last Monday.

"The guard in the northeast tower should have seen them," Brown said. "He won't be a special guard any more."

Truck Kills Boy, 12, In Accident Here

Robert Stromberg, 12, of the 4200 block of Thirteenth street northeast, was killed instantly late yesterday when he was struck by a truck at Lincoln road and T street northeast.

Police were told the boy darted from behind two parked cars directly in the path of the truck, which was driven by Hugh Cook, 35, of Alexandria, Va.

Huge Meteor And Air Liner Play Sky Tag

13 Passengers in Ship Are Safe After Getting Thrill of Lives.

Oakland, Calif., Sept. 27 (AP).—A big air liner and a dazzling meteor flashed through the skies dangerously close to each other east of here early this morning, giving 13 persons in the plane a lifetime thrill.

So close did the meteor come to the plane that Arche Anderson, co-pilot, who was at the controls, swerved the ship in what he thought would be an effort to dodge the flaming visitor.

Some of the passengers saw the blinding light and cried out. Anderson suddenly realized it would do no good to attempt dodging a body moving so rapidly and flipped the plane back to its course.

Anderson said the plane was 7,000 feet up when he saw a dazzling light heading toward the craft.

Jack O'Brien, the pilot, was in the cabin. He said he felt the ship swerve and dived into the pilot's compartment just in time to see the meteor explode.

Lavon Mase, a truck driver, who saw the explosion and heard the roar of the aircraft's engines, telephoned police a plane had fallen in flames. Informed later what had happened, Mase said:

"If that was a meteor it was the biggest one I ever saw. It lit up the whole sky. I thought surely it was an airplane falling in flames because I heard the motors."

J. McManana, of Elko, Nev., a passenger, said:

"We were all puzzled when the ship went into a sudden bank, but none of the passengers showed fear."

City Proposes Truce to Free Sewer Funds

Will Make Every Effort to Speed Work, Please Ickes, Say Heads.

Every effort will be made by District officials to conform to the demands of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes regarding the proposed $8,000,000 loan for the construction of a sewage-disposal plant.

Admittedly stung by what they feel to be unjust criticism hurled at them by Secretary Ickes, District officials were restrained in their public comment.

"We are going to do everything we can to please the Secretary and carry the project through," an official said.

"I am going to do everything I can in this matter," another said. "Personally I believe the money could be much better spent for other things, but I am not going to be responsible for upsetting this.

"We have had numerous conferences with Secretary Ickes' assistants," another said. "I do not know what Secretary Ickes wants us to do. The whole board of Commissioners will wait on Mr. Ickes whenever he wishes us to do so, if that will help the matter. Perhaps the Secretary should confer a little more carefully with his assistants before he rushes into print with criticism."

Col. Sultan's Comment.

Col. Daniel I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, said that the District government would extend itself to speed up the proposed work schedule.

"I can't pledge beginning of the work this coming winter," the colonel said. "I can't say the work will be completed within the period the Secretary specifies. We are going to try to work out a program which will meet the Secretary's approval."

Hastening of the work will depend on the advancement of funds for hiring draftsmen, architects and other technical workers, it was said. These are required to put the sewage disposal plans in working shape, it was said. Secretary Ickes, Col. Sultan said, will be asked to

Shades of Daniel Boone! Mae West Hunts Indian

Hollywood, Sept. 27 (AP).—Mae West has telegraphed a request to Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, for aid in finding an Indian for her next movie—if possible, a direct descendant of the tribesman whose profile adorned the old pennies.

Stricken in Epidemic, 137 Workers Better

Los Angeles, Sept. 27 (AP).—One hundred and thirty-seven physicians, nurses and laboratory workers who were stricken in fighting the recent infantile paralysis epidemic are recuperating from the disease in a General Hospital ward here.

25 to 45 Pct. Basis Fixed For Margins

Latter Not Forced to Close Out Accounts Under-Financed.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Adopting the standard set by Congress, the Federal Reserve Board last night prescribed a sliding scale of between 25 and 45 per cent of the current market value as the minimum margin required in the buying or carrying of securities through a broker.

The board did not set any figure at which credit for marginal trading must be maintained after it is initially advanced and did not promulgate a rule which would make it mandatory for a broker to sell out a customer's account for inadequate margin. There was nothing in the rules requiring liquidation of existing accounts.

In prescribing rules for the handling of marginal accounts the board took as liberal an attitude as the act would permit, and attempted wherever possible to give the regulations some degree of flexibility in order to meet special circumstances or unforeseen contingencies.

Restrictions Ordered.

In order to avoid wholesale liquidation of accounts undermargined at present, the Reserve Board decided to place such accounts under restrictions, rather than require adjustment. Under the restrictions, the broker is forbidden to permit the customer to further weaken the account by withdrawals of cash or securities.

Under the law the board's marginal requirements become effective next Monday, but because of the delay in promulgating the rules, the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission issued an order exempting until midnight October 14 all security trading, with special exceptions, from the new regulations.

The Securities Commission also exempted until the same time all securities from the requirement in the law making it unlawful for any broker to deal in securities which have not been registered with the commission or fall under exempted securities, except those securities for which a registration has been denied.

To Reject Other Pleas.

So far the only security denied a temporary registration was an $8,000,000 Brooklyn, Manhattan Transit Corporation bond issue, but Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the commission, announced that before the week ends the commission will reject several other applications for registration.

He said all security exchanges in the country had filed applications either for registration or for an exemption from the law. All applications for exemption have been temporarily granted for 60 days, pending hearings. All registrations have been accepted, except that of the New York Mining Exchange, a New Jersey association. A hearing on that exchange's application has been set for tomorrow morning.

Mr. Kennedy explained that today and tomorrow his commission

Fascist Riot Threat Draws Chicago Police

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Police were called late today to prevent possible friction between a large group of anti-Fascist students at the University of Chicago and 300 Italian students visiting Chicago.

George A. Works, dean of students at the university, phoned the police after a number of the demonstrators marched on the International House, where the Italians are staying.

RFC Offers Loans to Aid Mortgagees

Jones Will Buy Stock in Trust Companies Now in That Business.

Purpose of Expanded Credit Is to Make Sound Market.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In a further effort to stimulate the durable goods industry and to create "a sound mortgage market," Chairman Jesse H. Jones yesterday announced that the RFC is prepared to go into partnership with trust companies that specialize in mortgage loans.

Opening wide the vast coffers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation after a visit to the White House, Mr. Jones offered to buy preferred stock and capital notes in existing companies and to promote new agencies that will engage in the mortgage loan business.

As this newest move to expand credit was launched with President Roosevelt's approval, on the other side of the White House Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau urged chairmen of the industrial advisory committees of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks to hasten the handling of industrial loan applications.

It was a special meeting of the chairmen, given unusual significance because of the slowness with which loans have been made under the $280,000,000 fund authorized by the last Congress. Less than $2,000,000 has been loaned to date, although commitments were said to amount to about $10,000,000.

In a formal statement that closely followed his conference with the President, Mr. Jones said that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation wants to encourage a system of mortgage trust companies with the view of reestablishing, "by private capital and private enterprise, a sound mortgage market."

The procedure by which the corporation proposes to further this purpose is identical to the R. F. C.'s purchase of preferred stock and capital notes in banks. In addition, however, the R. F. C. stands ready for "additional lending" where necessary to relieve present mortgage conditions.

Mr. Jones said that the proposal, which comes after several ineffectual moves by the R. F. C. in this direction, will round out the Government's activities in the mortgage field, already covered as to homes and farms. He explained the objectives of the plan as follows:

First, to provide mortgage money for new construction with a view to increasing employment and stimulating structural material markets.

Second, to enable distressed owners of mortgages, whether whole mortgages, split mortgages, or mortgage certificates, to borrow reasonably upon these mortgages at fair interest rates, and not to be forced to sell at sacrifice prices.

Third, to enable borrowers to refinance mortgages where the value and/or income of the mortgaged property, and the ability of the borrower to meet interest and

Power Current Kills Car Barn Electrician

John Parrott, 32, of the 3500 block of Hartford place northwest, an electrician's helper, was killed yesterday, when he touched two high tension wires at the Capital Transit Co.'s car barn, 2411 P street northwest.

Fellow workers snapped off the current and called the Fire Rescue Squad. An Emergency Hospital physician pronounced Parrott dead. His body was taken to the District Morgue.

Dowdy Capitol Is Spruced Up For New Congress' Arrival

Miss Freedom will be standing atop a renovated Capitol when Congress gets going again in January.

Dating from adjournment last summer, a program of painting, redecorating, elevator installing and reconditioning, plumbing overhauling and general improvement such as has never been equaled since the British raid in 1814 has been under way. As a result, it wouldn't be surprising if many Congressmen—assuming some of them return after the November elections—fail to recognize the old place.

More than a half million dollars is being spent on elevator replacements and repairs alone. Part of this sum will be expended on the Senate and old House Office Buildings' elevator service, as Architect David Lynn explained yesterday, but attention is chiefly being paid the Capitol lifts.

Ten new ones are being installed in the Capitol, replacing the same number of antiquated elevators which have been in use from 26 to 40 years. They will have every safety gadget (the elevator accident of several months ago is still a subject of conversation), be capable of a 400-foot-a-minute speed and be the last word in handsome appearance.

Stepping out of these ultramodern elevators, you're going to find yourselves in glistening corridors leading to cloakrooms and lobbies which have been handsomely painted. Correspondents have received special attention—the Senate Press Gallery has been repainted and touched up and the House Press Gallery has not only been repainted but equipped with rubber tile floors.

Painting sufficed for the cloakrooms, lobby, gallery walls and washrooms on the Senate side. The Senate subway also was repainted.

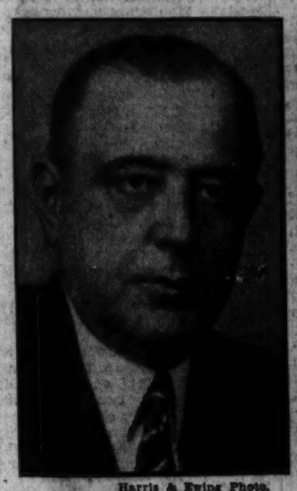

On the House side, paint jobs were prescribed for cloakrooms, gallery walls, lobby, washrooms and committee rooms.

The same treatement was accorded both refectories. Skylights have been cleaned, the Statuary Hall has a new copper roof, the Capitol roof has been repaired and all rotunda windows washed.

But the most painstaking task was polishing up the 47 chandeliers. Each prism had to be cleaned separately. Eight workmen were busy 2½ months on this job alone.

President Alters Set-up After Resignation of Administrator.

Extension of Leave Is Granted Counsel

Changes in Emergency Committee Made by Amendment.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

President Roosevelt appointed an administrative board for NRA yesterday and delegated to Donald R. Richberg's industrial emergency committee the function of determining recovery policies.

The administrative agency, to be known as the National Industrial Recovery Board and to assume the duties of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, resigned, includes:

Clay Williams, tobacco manufacturer, of Winston-Salem, N. C., chairman of Secretary Roper's Business Advisory and Planning Council and former member of the NRA Industrial Advisory Board.

A. D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet and former NRA division administrator.

Leon C. Marshall, deputy assistant NRA administrator, member of the old National Labor Board and former Johns Hopkins University law professor.

Walton Hamilton, chairman of the NRA Advisory Council, member of the Consumers' Advisory Board and Yale University law professor.

Two Advisers Named.

In addition, Blackwell Smith said, acting NRA chief counsel, and Leon Henderson, NRA research and planning director, were named ex-officio board members without a vote, the former as legal adviser and the latter as economic adviser.

The reshaped industrial emergency committee will consist of Mr. Richberg, as director; Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins, Farm Administrator Chester Davis, Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and the chairman of the administrative board, to be elected by members of that agency. Davis and the administrative board chairman will be the only new committee members.

Stephen Early, of the White House secretariat, said the President was pleased with the work of Col. George A. Lynch as executive head of NRA in the absence of Johnson and that the administrative board could, if it saw fit, retain Lynch as administrative officer. In that event, his leave of absence from the Army would be extended.

It was emphasized that the President retained authority to approve all new recovery policies in the future before they finally become effective. Hereafter he probably will keep in even closer touch with NRA.

Third Division Later.

The new appointments, contained in separate Executive orders, represented the future legislative and executive branches of the recovery machinery. The third and final grand division—to deal with judiciary and enforcement issues—will be set up later, perhaps under the Department of Justice.

Observers considered it significant that Richberg was named to

Treasury Used To Aid Politics, Says Senator

Vandenberg Warns G.O.P. in Michigan of Huge Vote Obstacle.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 27 (AP).—Asserting that the coming election "from every viewpoint * * * is the most important since the Civil War," Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, told the Republican State convention here today that Republicans confront "an opposition with the greatest campaign chest in all political history—to wit, the Treasury of the United States."

"We confront," he said, "an opposition which, with the greatest army of press agents ever hired at public expense, adroitly covers up its greater errors by well-managed emphasis upon the lesser achievements with which it is rightly credited and which it would be absurd to deny."

Senator Vandenberg said "the battle with depression is less favorable with America today than with most of our foreign neighbors who have played less bravely with patent medicines," and added: "We create more problems than we solve. There are more unemployed than ever. We are living on our own fat—and the fat is running lean."

"Private business," he said, "must resume. There is no other way. It can not resume—it can not create jobs for workers and consumers for farm products—in the face of handicaps I have sketched. It can not resume in the face of persistent threats of Government competition. * * * It can not resume—certainly it can not make a long range plan—so long as extrordinary and anti-

Johnny Turns Real Tarzan, Throwing Lupe Into Taxicab

Newark, N. J., Sept. 27 (AP).—Lupe Velez and her husband, Johnny Weissmuller, staged another of their family squabbles at the airport here today as they arrived from the West.

The trouble began when they chose different taxis to take them to New York, and ended when Weissmuller performed in his best Tarzan manner by seizing his wife and forcing her into the cab of his choice.

He did not accomplish this, however, until Lupe had a chance to exercise her temperament by screaming and tearing his hair. Johnny revealed a temper, too, throwing a polo coat to the ground. The coat was forgotten as the couple drove away.

Poll-Parrot Gossip-Mongers Are Denounced by President

Cites Rumor That Three Cabinet Members Are About to Resign.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt, asserting that the American people "have both feet on the ground," tonight slapped severely at "gossip mongers who invent tales." He cited as an example the roundabout rumor today that three members of his Cabinet were to retire immediately.

Making one of his first addresses in a month, Mr. Roosevelt spoke by radio to the fourth annual Women's Conference on Current Problems, sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

"We, as a people, are less inclined to believe those who would create fear or encourage panic," he said. "More and more people are doing their own thinking. The number of poll-parrots in our midst is steadily declining, for which we must be very thankful. More and more men and women are looking up their own facts and forming their own opinions.

"I urge that every one of you consider and analyze the source and motive back of every report you read.

"It is with a very definite sense of gratification and thanks that I tell you of my conviction that our people have both feet on the ground."

The President expressed appreciation in what he termed an increasing interest by all people in "methods of improving the economic and social lot of our citizenry."

NRA Blocked In Demanding Firm's Eagle

Concern Seeks to Delay Action Until Labor Ruling Is Made.

Fighting to stave off the loss of its Blue Eagle, the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Co., manufacturers of shovels, tools and "other hand implements," of Parkersburg, W. Va., late yesterday obtained from Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District Supreme Court, a ruling requiring the NRA to show cause why it should not be prevented from lifting the Eagle pending adjudication of labor troubles.

Through its attorney, Edmund M. Toland, the company said that, employing 500 persons, it had acceded to and lived up to, the requirements of the NIRA. Nevertheless, last month, the National Labor Relations Board "purported to assume jurisdiction over an alleged controversy between * * * the company and certain of its employes," and a few weeks ago a hearing was held, it was set forth.

As a result, the company was directed to furnish, within five days, a list of its employes so an election might be held to determine what "person, persons or organization the employes wished to represent them" for the purpose of

Shower Further Boosts 'Rainiest' Month Mark

A sudden shower deluged Washington for half an hour yesterday afternoon, bringing the total rainfall for September to 15.98 inches, far above all previous monthly records. Yesterday's rain measurement was .42 of an inch.

The maximum temperature yesterday was 87; recorded at 3 p. m., a few minutes before the shower. The minimum was 66, recorded at 4 a. m.

Today the District will experience typical early autumn weather, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Skies will be fair and temperatures cooler.

A strike had been tentatively set for October 1. Terms of the proposals reported approved were not disclosed.

Richberg's Rise Declared Blow To Trade Hopes

NRA Changes Regarded as Unfavorable, Says F. H. Neisser.

Editor's note: The fact that Donald R. Richberg and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins will dominate policy in the reborn NRA is enough to damn the new set-up in the opinion of leading New York business men, F. H. Neisser, NRA expert for the New York Journal of Commerce, asserts in the following article.

By F. H. Neisser.

New York, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The reorganization of the New Deal machinery effected by the President tonight in two Executive orders impressed business men more by the swiftness of the action than by the choice made.

Business men in many cases still had discounted reports that Donald Richberg and Secretary Perkins were to be the guiding powers of future Administration policy. They had hoped—although not expected—that the new NRA policy board would be made up of men fundamentally sympathetic to and thoroughly familiar with the industrial point of view.

Hopes Held Killed.

The appointment of Richberg as director of the industrial emergency committee has killed these hopes.

Furthermore, business men fail to see any one member of the committee itself, with the possible exception of Secretary Ickes, who would not be properly classified as part of the left wing in the Administration. There is little doubt in the minds of business observers that Richberg, Secretary Perkins and Relief Administrator Hopkins will decide the policy of the committee. They feel certain that this policy will be one directed toward strengthening the position of labor, the farmers, and as far as possible, consumers.

There is no member of the committee who appreciates that industry must live and operate profitably, if it is to purchase farm products, employ workers, and supply consumers cheaply.

Business men realize there was need for a better coordinating agency at the very top of the New Deal. If the new industrial emergency committee will do this, its creation represents a step forward. previous coordinating agencies, including the National Emergency Council, of which Richberg is secretary, have failed to do the job.

Difficulties Seen.

If Richberg and Miss Perkins will dominate the committee as is expected, the prospects for a better coordination of New Deal activities are undoubtedly more favorable than they were. There will, nevertheless, be difficulties, not because of personal animosities as recently, but because many of the recovery policies embodied in the various New Deal organizations are inherently contradictory.

In view of the type of New Deal policy committee thus created, the fact that two industrialists were appointed to the NRA administrative board, now to be known as the National Industrial Recovery Board, is relatively insignificant.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Threatener Insane

Varn Committed in Gotham for Writing Letters.

New York, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Benjamin Franklin Varn, 33, of Charleston, S. C., arrested last month under the Lindbergh law for sending threatening letters to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, was committed as an insane person today in Federal district court.

Varn, former machinist in the Naval Aviation Corps, was accused of demanding $168,000 from the President's wife, with threats of harming her three grandchildren.

The Lindbergh law complaint against Varn was dismissed on motion of the Federal district attorney's office. Varn was remanded to Bellevue Hospital.

Davis Talks Arms With Roosevelt

Preliminary Limitation Conferences Discussed.

America's Ambassador at Large, Norman H. Davis, talked yesterday with President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Navy officials about preliminary naval arms limitation discussions to be opened in London next month, according to the Associated Press.

After his two-hour stay at the White House, Davis said he probably would remain in the Capital until next Tuesday or Wednesday before sailing for London about October 10.

Once in London, Davis, British and Japanese representatives will plumb possibilities of an understanding for a world conference next year to continue naval treaties expiring in 1936.

Between You and Me

Soviet Trade Deal Meets Opposition From Hostile Mr. Kelley.

—By Raymond Clapper—

An awkward fumble upset trade negotiations with Soviet Russia, but the ball has been recovered on the 5-yard line. Everything is moving along now. So well, in fact, that Ambassador Troyanovsky is hustling back to Moscow immediately to find out exactly what the Soviets want to buy here and what they want to sell, and, equally important, how much of each.

The heavy-browed little ambassador was canny in his first big horse-trading job with the Yankees at the State Department. But he almost spoiled the deal by underestimating the influence of Robert F. Kelley, State Department Russian expert and a bitter foe of Sovietism.

Mr. Kelley has refused to visit Russia since the revolution, preferring to get his information from Russian newspapers and by interviewing returning travelers. He fought recognition for 17 years and was crushed when President Roosevelt sent for Litvinoff to offer recognition. But he was game. He has attended parties at the new Soviet Embassy, observing all diplomatic protocol. Still, he doesn't know when he is licked. He bided his time. It came when the Soviets pushed their horse-trading a little hard. Bargaining was abruptly ended with a curt statement issued by Acting Secretary R. Walton Moore.

The Russians were broken-hearted because they were only playing a little game and had another offer ready to throw on the table. The last thing they expected was that the door would be slammed in their faces. The door-slamming echoed badly in certain Administration quarters. Dr. Ray Moley, who had been forced out of the State Department, but who is closer to the President's ear than he ever was before, leaped in with a denunciation of "anonymous technical officials of the State Department who for so many years frustrated the establishment of normal relations between Russia and this country" and "seem now to be attempting to recapture their old position by a flank movement"—as he put in his magazine, Today.

Somehow Ambassador Troyanovsky gathered the idea that if he knocked, the door would be opened again. So, without standing on technicalities, he asked for an appointment with Secretary of State Hull, and prospects of an agreement revived quickly. Now, after a hair-breadth escape from disaster, he is going back triumphantly to Moscow to check with the Gosplan to see how many tractors, how much railroad equipment and what else Russia can buy here without cutting into production schedules of the Soviet industrial development plan.

* * * *

However, there's another little complication on the horizon that may bring NRA into a clash with the dogged Tennesseean in the State Department. NRA is investigating complaints that Soviet Russia is underselling three American producers of pearl essence—which is derived from fish scales and gives that pearly effect to bathroom furniture. The recovery act empowers the President to crack down on imports which undersell American articles made under codes.

One of the hardest tests of TVA's tact is in the moving of 93 cemeteries from the land which is to be flooded by the Norris and Wheeler dams—an area almost half as large as Rhode Island. Some wanted to run up monuments resting on floats above the present locations.

The job of selling TVA's ultra-modern ideas about electric stoves to the primitive hill folk in the Tennessee Valley was put up to Canadian-born Dr. Harcourt Morgan, who has been an educator in the South for 40 years, the last 15 as president of the University of Tennessee. He made agricultural extension addresses to audiences all over the South during that time and now when he goes back to them to ask their cooperation for TVA, they remember the help he gave them in trying to make a living from their farms. He is the "front man" for the South, while his two fellow commissioners, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, engineer, and Young David Lilienthal, attorney, handle the construction and battle with the power companies.

Recovery Orders Detailed

President Appoints New Board in One and Names Emergency Committee, With Richberg as Director, in Amendment.

President Roosevelt's Executive order creating the National Industrial Recovery Board follows in full:

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the National industrial recovery act, approved June 16, 1933, and to effectuate the purposes of said act:

1. I hereby appoint Clay Williams, A. D. Whiteside, Sidney Hillman, Leon C. Marshall and Walton Hamilton to serve as members of the National Industrial Recovery Board, which is hereby created to administer under my direction the provision of Title I of the National industrial recovery act.

Advisers Appointed.

2. I hereby appoint Blackwell Smith legal adviser and Leon Henderson economic adviser to said National Industrial Recovery Board. The legal adviser and economic adviser shall serve ex officio as members of said board.

3. 4. The board shall elect from its members a chairman and an executive secretary, both to serve at the pleasure of the board and to perform such duties as may be prescribed by the board, or by the President.

5. Any previous orders concerning the subject matter hereof are hereby modified and amended so far as necessary to make this order fully effective.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The President's amendment to an earlier Executive order, authorizing the industrial emergency committee to determine NRA policies, follows in full:

Test Prepared On Price-Fixing Power of NRA

Administration Calls for Mississippi Lumber Case Showdown.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 27 (A.P.).—The Federal Government today paved the way for a legal test of that provision of the National recovery act which authorizes the administrator to declare an emergency exists in an industry and to fix minimum price schedules.

The Government, through Evon Ford, Mississippi NRA compliance director, filed four petitions with Federal Judge E. R. Holmes, of the Southern Mississippi District Court, seeking injunctions to prevent delivery of lumber under contracts between Mississippi hardwood lumber manufacturers and the Fisher Corporation, Tennessee division of General Motors, at less than the cost of the protection price prescribed by the code of fair competition for the lumber and timber products industry.

The injunction petitions were prepared by the litigation division of the NRA, and are forerunners of similar ones to be filed against all firms participating in the Fisher order, Ford said.

Ford said injunction petitions against 58 other firms in 15 States, which participated in the order, will be filed "as rapidly as possible." He indicated the Mississippi petitions probably would be the first to be heard.

Shortly after the petitions were filed by Harry Bryan, legal counsel for the Mississippi compliance director, Judge Holmes issued citations order the four concerns named to appear before him at Yazoo City on October 10 to show cause why the injunctions should not be issued.

Fire Insurance Officials Freed

Government Drops Case in Connection With Firm's Collapse.

Five officials of the National Benefit Life Insurance Co., largest colored life insurance organization in the United States, were freed of criminal charges in connection with the collapse of the organization yesterday when Assistant United States Attorney J. Edward Burroughs entered a nolle prosse in the District Supreme Court.

Burroughs, in asking that indictments be dismissed, said the Government felt it had insufficient evidence upon which to go to trial. The company is now in the hands of receivers.

Those who were released from criminal charges of two years' duration because of the dismissal were John T. Risher, Daniel M. Gary and Mortimer F. Smith, who were accused of embezzling funds from the company, and Robert H. and Samuel W. Rutherford, who were charged with perjury in connection with the filing of a financial report with the commissioner of insurance.

The Rutherfords, once the controlling members of the company, were represented by Attorneys William E. Leahy and Edmund M. Toland. Robert H. Rutherford was at one time president of the organization, while Samuel W. Rutherford was chairman of the board of directors and secretary.

Harriman Urges Pact With Canada

Chamber Head Asks Hull to Seek Parley.

Secretary Hull was urged yesterday by Henry T. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, to open reciprocal tariff negotiations with Canada at the earliest possible moment, the Associated Press reported.

Harriman, in a letter to Hull, said business men of both countries were in favor of working out a reciprocal trade agreement. He said a joint committee, maintained by American and Canadian chambers, had recommended such a course.

"The widespread interest in both countries in restoring Canadian-American trade to its former levels," Harriman said, "has found its origin in no small part in the facilities now afforded for reciprocal trade negotiations."

Bremer Abduction Hunt Intensified

Search for Two Suspects Centers in Cleveland.

The hunt for Arthur Barker and Alvin Warpis, wanted for the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul, was being centered by the Department of Justice last night around Cleveland, according to the Associated Press.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan conferred yesterday with United States Attorney George Sullivan, of St. Paul, on the Bremer case.

Justice Department officials would not comment on a report from Cleveland yesterday that Karpis and Barker had been newly sighted there but fled when three women companions had been arrested. J. Edgar Hoover, investigative chief of the department, would not discuss the case.

draft all reports of the industrial emergency committee to the President. His influence, always great, assumed even larger proportions.

Also seen as riding the crest was Miss Perkins, who is known to have sided with Richberg against Johnson in conferences of the Administration high command on the reorganization program. With Johnson out of the picture, both Richberg and Miss Perkins will be in a better position to guide NRA policies.

As well as dealing with NRA policies, the Richberg committee will coordinate the work of all recovery agencies, including those concerned with relief, public works, labor and agriculture.

Richberg's leave of absence as NRA general counsel was extended indefinitely.

Up to Richberg Board.

The authority of the administrative board will be a far cry from the virtually dictatorial powers over industry exercised by Johnson during the first year of the No. 1 recovery unit. In fact, rulings of the board, under the order by which it was created, will be "subject to the general approval" of the Richberg committee.

One of the chief duties of the Richberg committee will be to draft for submission to Congress a bill to extend NRA after its expiration next June. That task is expected to be undertaken shortly.

As the death knell of Johnson's one-man rule was sounded, the bellicose general remained secluded in a New York hotel room writing the story of his colorful life.

Led in Hours Cut.

Two of the administrative board members, Marshall and Hamilton, formerly were associated with Brookings Institution.

It was Hillman who led the movement that brought an Executive order by the President reducing the cotton garment industry work week from 40 to 36 hours, effective Monday.

Henderson and Smith offered to resign several weeks ago after they figured in differences with Johnson. Both have been powers in NRA since the early days of the agency.

Concern Balks NRA Demand For Blue Eagle

collective bargaining as defined in Section 7(a) of the NIRA.

The company pointed out it was not required to, nor did it, submit to the board hearing. Toland asserted that under the authority of section 3 of the Federal Trade Commission act the Ames Co. was entitled to appeal to the "Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States to enforce, set aside or modify" the order requiring the production of the company rolls.

Despite the perfecting of this appeal, the company charged, it had been notified that the Compliance Division of NRA recommended the company's Blue Eagle be removed. The Compliance Division sent word it did not consider the appeal as staying the removal and indicated its intention of issuing the order.

The removal of the Blue Eagle will cost the company "many customers, jobbers and wholesalers," it was contended.

Pending Court Action.

Justice Adkins held the petition called upon the Government to show cause why the Blue Eagle should not be placed in "status quo" with the company, pending a solution of its labor difficulties before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the West Virginia District.

He indicated he would sign an order requiring the Government to stay temporarily its removal of the insignia unless attorneys representing the NRA agreed to let the "Eagle stay" until the court has an opportunity to thrash the matter out.

Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson informed Justice Adkins he would obtain the acquiescence of NRA officials to a temporary let-up in the move to remove the insignia. Justice Adkins then said he would issue a rule requiring the Government to show cause by October 5 why it should not be restrained from removing the Eagle pending the court solution of the labor troubles.

Toland said his client stood ready to accept and live up to the tenets of the NRA. However, he said, the company, because of its "intrastate" character, was not subject to the provisions of the NRA and "is not amenable to the provisions of the National industrial recovery act or of any code of fair competition insofar as the relations between itself and its employes are concerned."

This, he said, was notwithstanding that the company "had at all times endeavored to comply with, and has complied with the provisions of said recovery act and of * * * the code of fair competition for the tool and implement industry."

Georgia Arrests 5 More 'Radicals'

Troops Act Upon Order to End Textile Strike.

Atlanta, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Five more "radicals" were added to Georgia's secret prison today, but who they were or where they are remained as deep a mystery as the identity of the first 15 arrested Tuesday night.

The five were taken by National Guardsmen who are mopping up the disorderly centers of the State's textile area.

Adjt. Gen. Lindley Camp would only admit the arrests were made, as Gov. Eugene Talmadge, returning from a trip to Chicago, reiterated that where the guard went martial law prevailed. He said the five were "radicals."

Gold Standard Essential, Says Federal Board

Must Precede Recovery, Declares Advisory Reserve Council.

Chicago, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—A return to the gold standard must precede any real or permanent recovery, the Federal Advisory Council said today in a statement to the Federal Reserve Board and member banks.

The statement, agreed to at a meeting of the council in Washington September 18, was issued by Walter Lichtenstein, secretary, and was addressed to the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve Banks and each member bank of the Federal Reserve System.

The council expressed conviction that:

1. A return to the gold standard must precede recovery.

2. Currency of a fluctuating value is a deterrent to business.

3. A definitely stated program for balancing the budget is essential to restoration of business confidence.

4. The use of Government money in competition with private capital should cease.

5. The steadily mounting Government debt constitutes a dangerous threat to public credit.

6. The currency and credit supply now existing are ample for an expansion of business and that demands for currency inflation are without sound basis.

7. The history of inflation shows it ends in utter disaster for every class but one—the speculators.

"Further monetary experimentation holds out no promise of success, and the repetition of expedients which have repeatedly failed in this and other countries can lead only to disaster," the council said.

Insist Upon Sound Basis.

The council is composed of one representative from each of the Federal Reserve districts. Its members are Federal Reserve member banks in those districts. The last review of conditions and views on monetary policies was issued November 21, 1933.

"No real nor permanent recovery can be had, nor can be reasonably hoped for, until the country has been placed upon a sound financial basis, and such sound basis necessarily implies a gold dollar of definitely and permanently fixed gold content, with other forms of currency redeemable at all times in gold bullion in the amount so fixed," the council said.

"The council believed that joint or similar action by other important commercial nations is highly desirable and that such international action is extremely improbable on any other than a gold basis."

The council said it was convinced that a fluctuating currency will not materially affect the general price level nor will it adjust the discrepancies between the prices of different commodities.

Prices, it was said, fluctuate as a result of business activity alone and are not its cause. A higher price level, the council said, is beneficial only if brought about by increased business activity and accompanied by higher National income.

Business, the council said, is again in a position to function normally if it is given assurance of stability.

"A well-formulated and definitely stated program for balancing the National budget within a reasonable period is essential to the restoration of that confidence among business men and taxpayers, which is a prereuisite to the resumption of private enterprise on any considerable scale," it declared.

"The use of Government money in competition with private business is not only paralyzing to private initiatiev but epexrience has amply demonstrated that it is costly, generally inefficient, and that its disastrous effects reach far beyond the limits of the particular industry immediately affected."

Further debt expansion should be confined to the relief of unemployed and those in distress, and to a justifiable program of public works, the council said.

U. S. to Own Churches, Iowa Senator Fears

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, asserted tonight the Administration is proceeding on a program of land control "that in the end will include complete ownership and control of all land holdings, including churches."

Convinced, he said, there is a "definite Socialistic trend under the present Administration," the Iowan told a Republican rally audience here that churches, as well as individuals, would suffer.

To Study Ladder Again.

Schwarzkopf plans further study tomorrow of the kidnap ladder with Arthur Koehler, a Wisconsin expert, in comparison with tools and lumber from Hauptmann's garage.

An attractive vacation associate of Hauptmann's in 1932, Anita Lutzenberg, was questioned for several hours today about the summer swimming party which numbered several others. This was while Mrs. Hauptmann was abroad.

A friend of the girl, John Braue, appeared briefly at the prosecutor's office and then went home. He said he knew Hauptmann "fairly well," having met him in July, 1932.

Hauptmann was walking with a limp at that time, Braue said, but explained he had "varicose veins" when asked whether he had been injured.

"Hauptmann never did have any dough," Braue said of the suspect's spending habits, asserting that Hauptmann described himself as a carpenter who worked "here and there."

Questioning Held Significant.

When a morning of examination had ended at the Bronx district attorney's office, the importance of Miss Lutzenberg's questioning and that of other Hauptmann acquaintances was minimized by attaches, but it was regarded significant that Miss Lutzenberg returned after lunch.

"We always called him Dick," Miss Lutzenberg had said of Hauptmann as detectives studied pictures of her and the prisoner in a family album. "Everybody knew him that summer at Hunter's Island. All the girls liked him."

But in the party, she said, was a "mysterious John"—a man who seemed to have something on his mind.

"He almost never said anything," the girl commented on "John."

"John," she said was Dick's closest friend and Dick was the only friend John had.

Foley Doubts "Lone Wolf."

This keen attention to possible Hauptmann accomplices came during an afternoon in which Foley himself voiced the belief that it is possible Hauptmann himself could have been the man who went up the ladder to seize the baby.

The district attorney, however, indicated that he did not think Hauptmann was a "lone wolf" and that others undoubtedly were involved.

This coincides with the known theories of the Department of Justice which said while it was possible for Hauptmann to have been alone in the crime it was not probable.

In Germany, homeplace of Hauptmann, Chief Detective Otto Trettin of Berlin—known as the "ace" of the force—joined hands with the American investigator, Henry Johnson, to lend special assistance in their inquiry there.

The Bronx district attorney's office was carefully set this morning for Col. Lindbergh to scrutinize Hauptmann without the alien knowing of the presence of the father of the slain child.

Room Darkened.

Drawn window shades cast deep shadows into the room, both to aid the colonel's disguise and presumably to simulate the darkness of the April night in a Bronx cemetery when the fruitless ransom was paid by Dr. Condon with Lindbergh outside in his parked automobile.

That night the colonel caught a fleeting glimpse of a man believed to have been a lookout for the ransom receiver.

This man dropped a handkerchief to the ground as if he were carrying out a prearranged signal that Lindbergh had come with "Jafsie" to the rendezvous.

This morning, wearing black horn-rimmed glasses and a gray cap, Col. Lindbergh seated himself in the district attorney's office with 20 detectives. Even some of the latter were not aware of his presence.

The noted flier had driven to the prosecutor's office from Englewood, N. J., about 9:30 a. m.

He came through the prison entrance of the building and up to the room in a private elevator. Scores of employes inside the building knew nothing of his visit until it was over.

Views Suspect Ten Minutes.

Just ten minutes were consumed by the colonel's face-to-face study of the prisoner.

The unshaven prisoner was brought into the room unshackled. Several persons spoke to him that the colonel might hear the timber of his voice.

He was seated directly across from the district attorney. Col. Lindbergh was several chairs away.

Drawn and unkempt, Hauptmann gave no more attention to his appearance before the detectives than he had in the vigorous and prolonged questioning he has been facing for more than a week.

Col. Lindbergh did not speak while Hauptmann was in the room. His face gave no hint of his emotions.

"The purpose and actions of either the defendant or Col. Lindbergh," said Foley afterward, "will not be disclosed by any individual."

But the prosecution let it be known that the examination of Hauptmann was Lindbergh's wish.

Col. Schwarzkopf reemphasized today that Lindbergh has made it clear he will offer no interference in the progress of the case. This was in reply to reports the aviator had asked New Jersey officials not to try Hauptmann in that State.

From the unusual "lineup," Hauptmann was taken to his arraignment on extortion charges and held in $100,000 bail.

The arraignment on the indictment returned yesterday was a brief proceeding. Hauptmann spoke not a word.

Unshaven for two days, his face drawn and pale, the prisoner appeared more haggard than at any time during the week he has been in custody. Hauptmann's gray suit was wrinkled and baggy. His white shirt was open at the neck. He wore no necktie. He stood with head bowed.

Judge Lester W. Patterson, of the Bronx County Court, asked for quiet.

"The defendant pleads not guilty, your honor," said James W. Fawcett, counsel for Hauptmann, rising to his feet and speaking in response to an inquiry from the bench.

District Attorney Foley had asked that Hauptmann be held without bail

Counsel Insists on Bond

Fawcett said that the offense charged was bailable, citing statutes in point, and adding that Hauptmann had no previous felony record.

"We are able to raise $5,000 bail," continued Fawcett, "and in the name of justice I ask you to set bail in that amount."

Such a sum was termed inadequate by Foley, who immediately suggested bail of $100,000.

"Very well," said Judge Patterson, "let it be $100,000. I will fix it at that amount."

Fawcett interposed an objection, but was overruled.

"As far as the people are concerned," the prosecutor told the court, "we promise as speedy a trial of this case as will be consistent with the formulation of our evidence against the defendant."

No trial date was mentioned.

Hauptmann kept his eyes down as he was hurried from the courtroom to a prison van.

"Dismissal of the case in the district (magistrate's) court will be a mere formality next Monday and Hauptmann may or may not appear. The function of the district court is to hold for the grand jury or dismiss," said Judge Patterson.

Fawcett to Ask Dismissal.

Fawcett announced that he would go into court next week with two motions. One motion will be to dismiss the indictment on the grounds the facts are insufficient to sustain the charges, and the second will be for an inspection of the grand jury minutes.

At Trenton, N. J., Schwarzkopf and Attorney General David T. Wilentz conferred with Gov. A. Harry Moore. Wilentz reiterated it was unlikely extradition of Hauptmann to New Jersey would be sought this week.

"Are you awaiting further arrests before extradition?" he was asked.

"We are hoping for a continuance of further favorable developments," he replied.

"Has District Attorney Foley agreed to surrender Hauptmann on demand?" he was asked.

"We anticipate," he replied, "no difficulty in our relationship with District Attorney Foley. He is and has been cooperating with us."

Portions of the uprights in the Hauptmann garage were taken by New Jersey State police to be compared with the ladder used in the kidnaping.

Same Type of Pine.

The wood taken by Detective Louis Bormann, of the New Jersey State police, was said to be the same type of pine used in constructing the ladder.

Nails taken from the garage also were carefully preserved.

Federal agents are seeking a Mount Vernon (N. Y.) plumber, it was learned, to question him regarding his observations at the Hauptmann home when he did some work there recently. The plumber's name was not disclosed.

Authoritative sources said the police search of the Hauptmann home and garage centers about $25,000 of the ransom money in $20 notes. It was revealed that only six or seven of the $20 bills had been recovered.

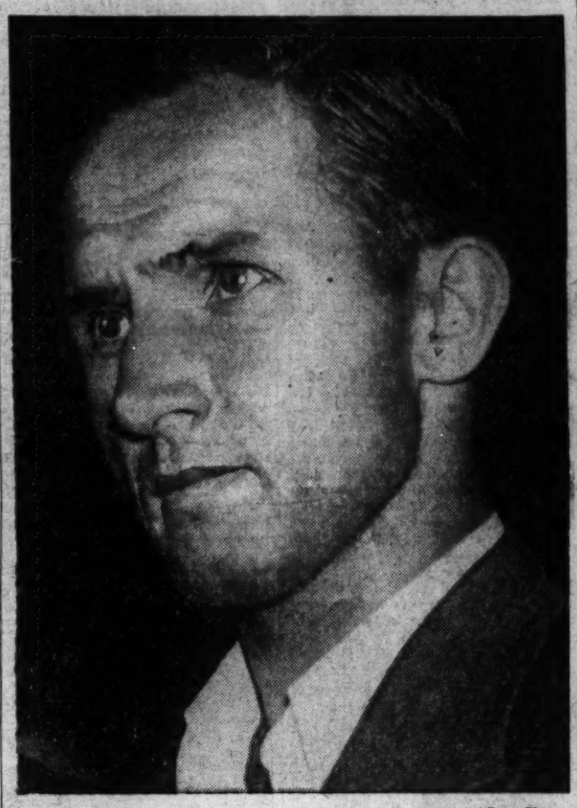

A high New Jersey official, who declined to allow his name to be used, said positively there would be no effort to have Hauptmann extradited before next week.

Two Women Questioned in Lindbergh Case

Mrs. Katherine Maurer (left) has appealed to District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, of the Bronx, to help her find her husband, John, who disappeared when Bruno Richard Hauptmann was arrested in the Lindbergh case. She said her husband was acquainted with Hauptmann. Anita Lutzenberg (right), attractive German girl, was questioned when it was learned she was a member of a picnic party with Hauptmann in 1932. She told of a mysterious "John," who attended beach parties with Hauptmann.

Mother Grilled With Brother Of Hauptmann

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Dresden, Germany, Sept. 27.—The mother and brother of Bruno Richard Hauptmann were questioned closely tonight by a New York detective and German authorities seeking further evidence linking the former German convict and war veteran to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Arthur Johnson, New York City detective assigned to the investigation, announced after several hours of questioning Fritz Hauptmann and Frau Hauptmann that "so far we have failed to establish any clew connecting Fritz with the kidnaping affair and we also believe that Fritz received none of the ransom money."

Johnson was aided by Dresden police officials and by Otto Trettin, one of the Reich's most famous criminal investigators, who accompanied Johnson here from Berlin today.

Johnson's chief mission was understood to be determination if any of the Lindbergh ransom money had reached Germany.

Grau Leaves Cuba To Escape Injury

Former President Flees With Family to Miami.

Havana, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Former President Ramon Grau San Martin fled from Cuba tonight to escape violence at the hands of political opponents.

Grau and seven members of his family departed on a Pan-American airplane for Miami.

After he had gone the executive committee of his political party, the Authenticos, issued a statement that it had urged him to leave the country at once because it had received reports he was in personal danger.

Relief Control Lost, Murray Blames NRA

Oklahoma City, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Gov. William H. Murray asserted today that control of Federal relief in Oklahoma had been taken from him "because I could not make speeches in support of the NRA."

Murray said Oklahoma lost a promised $500,000 relief grant two days after he declined to speak in support of the National recovery program. The Governor also declared he "had no confidence" in the promises of agents of the NRA, AAA or FERA.

Constant Booing Of Inmates Keeps Hauptmann Awake

New York, Sept. 27 (A.P.).—Constant booing by other inmates of the Bronx County Jail is depriving Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Lindbergh kidnap suspect, of virtually all opportunity to sleep, attendants disclosed tonight.

Hauptmann's fellow prisoners continually hurl taunts at him and he rarely has a quiet moment.

This was explained as the reason for Hauptmann's haggard appearance when he is brought to the district attorney's office or a courtroom. They said the prisoner's best opportunity for resting is between sessions of questioning.

would promulgate a series of preliminary regulations governing the permanent registration of securities until such time as the agency can decide on permanent rules. The latter will cover difficult accounting practices. They may not be ready for a month or two.

Other Regulations Held Up.

Regulations regarding short-selling, the function of specialists, floor traders, puts and calls and straddles will be held in abeyance until the commission completes studies it is making, Mr. Kennedy said. Meanwhile, the rules of exchanges covering these subjects will prevail.

Pending the information of rules limiting short-selling by the commission, the Federal Reserve Board withheld action on marginal requirements for short sales.

The Reserve Board limit on margains was only slightly stricter than rules now in force under the New York Stock Exchange. The 25 to 45 per cent margins permitted by the board, on the basis of security values at the end of July, figure out to an average of about 28 per cent, as against an average of 25 per cent under the practices now being followed.

In making its decision to follow the standard set by Congress, the Reserve Board had before it figures which indicated that in terms of market value two out of three stocks would be subject to the 25 per cent margin requirement; one out of four to a margin between 25 and 45 per cent, while only one out of 12 would be subject to the full 45 per cent requirement.

Cross-sections Included.

The survey included cross-sections of marginal transactions on the New York, Chicago and San Francisco exchanges. It showed that the majority of accounts were over-margined, even under the new regulation, and that the new restrictions would increase the undermargined accounts by only 2 per cent.

This does not mean that only 2 per cent of marginal accounts will be under the standard set, but that there will be 2 per cent more under the new regulations than now exist. It is estimated that one out of every six existing accounts are undermargined on the basis of the general requirements in vogue among brokers.

The new rules provide that a broker, without violating the law, may carry a marginal account regardless of reductions in the customer's equity resulting from changes in market prices or from the adding of such charges as interest and commissions, irrespective of whether the account was in existence on next Monday or was opened at a later time.

Members of exchanges and brokers, however, are left free to require additional security for the maintenance of any credit or to sell out any account when this additional security is not supplied.

20 Per Cent Requirement Fixed.

Marginal requirements for transactions between members of exchanges, brokers and dealers was set at 20 per cent, provided such accounts are arranged solely to carry accounts for customers. The same figure applies to credit advanced to distributors and syndicate groups. Arbitrage accounts are exempted from the requirements, except that a 2 per cent margin must be maintained.

The law makes it unlawful for brokers to borrow from any source except member banks of the Reserve System, nonmember banks approved by the board and others approved by the board. The board did not make any regulations regarding such loans by banks, but provided that nonmember banks might become eligible to make such loans by filing an agreement to observe the board's rules.

Emergency loans by brokers from any source are permitted under the rules, provided the borrowers immediately report the loans to the Reserve Board within ten days and agree to terminate the loans when the board decrees the emergency has ceased.

The regulations absolve from the penalties of the law any person failing to comply if such failure is due to "an innocent mistake, made in good faith," and if the mistake is promptly corrected. Regulations requiring submission of periodic reports on marginal transactions by brokers will be issued later.

Text of Rules Governing Margin Trading

'Creditor,' 'Account' and Other Terms Defined by Board.

Text of those regulations with the most general interest promulgated last night by the Federal Reserve Board to govern marginal trading in securities is as follows:

Definitions.

The term "creditor" means any member of a National securities exchange or any broker or dealer who transacts a business in securities through the medium of any such member.

The term "account" means any account (whether a "combined account" or a "special account" or any other account) representing any financial relationship between any creditor and any customer or any group of customers acting jointly.

The term "unrestricted account" means an account in which at any given time the adjusted debit balance equals or is less than the maximum loan value at such time of the securities in the account; and any account which is an unrestricted account at the beginning of business on any given day may for the purposes of this regulation be considered an unrestricted account throughout such day.

The term "restricted account" means an account in which, at the beginning of business on any given day, the adjusted debit balance exceeds the maximum loan value at such time of the securities in the account: Provided, however, That, if during the course of a day, as a result of the deposit of cash and/or securities or the sale or substitution of securities by or on behalf of the customer the maximum loan value of the securities in the account becomes equal to or greater than the adjusted debit balance, such account may be deemed an unrestricted account throughout such day.

The term "initial extension of credit" means any new extension of credit in an account or any icrease in the amount of credit outstanding in an account.

Section 3. Margin Requirements.

(a) General rule—No creditor shall make any initial extension of credit to any customer on any registered security (other than an exempted security) for the purpose of purchasing or carrying any security, in an amount which causes the total credit extended on such registered security to exceed the maximum loan value of such registered security. Except as specifically provided elsewhere in this section, the maximum loan value of any registered security (other than an exempted security) shall be whichever is the higher of:

(1) Fifty-five per cent of the current market value of the security; or

(2) One hundred per cent of the lowest market value of the security computed at the lowest market price therefor during the period of 36 calendar months immediately prior to the first day of the current month, but not more than 75 per cent of the current market value: Provided, That until July 1, 1936, for the purpose of this regulation, the lowest price at which a security has sold on or after July 1, 1933, but prior to the first day of the current month, shall be considered as the lowest market price of such security during the preceding 36 calendar months; and provided, that the lowest market price which could be used under the provisions of this regulation during any calendar month may be used during the first seven calendar days of the succeeding calendar month.

(b) Extensions of credit to other members, brokers and dealers—In a special account recorded separately, any creditor may extend credit on any registered security to any other member, broker or dealer in an amount not greater than the maximum loan value of such security, which shall be (except in the case of an exempted security) 80 per cent of the current market value of such security: Provided, that (1) such other member, broker or dealer is subject to the provisions of this regulation or has places of business only in foreign countries; (2) such credit is extended or maintained solely for the purpose of enabling such member, broker or dealer to carry accounts for his customers other than his partners, and (3) any credit extended or maintained by such creditor to or for such other member, broker or dealer for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities for his own account or for the account of his firm or any of his partners, shall not be included in huch special account and shall be subject to the other provisions of this section.

* * * *

(g) Current market value—For the purpose of ascertaining the current market value of a security at the time of and in connection with a purchase or sale of such security, the price at which such security is purchased or sold (whether or not as part of a substitution of securities or other transaction), shall be used in computing the current market value of such security within the meaning of this regulation.

For the purpose of ascertaining the current market value of any security in an account, at any time other than the time of its purchase or sale, the creditor shall have the option of using as the price of such security either the closing sale or the closing bid price for such security on the preceding business day, as shown by any regularly published reporting or quotation service used by such creditor (except that such bid price shall not be deemed to be the current market value of a security sold short).

In the absence of any such closing sale price, the creditor shall have the option of using either any such bid price on such preceding business day (except that such bid price shall not be deemed to be the current market price of a security sold short), or the price at which the last sale was recorded, if such sale occurred during the current or preceding calendar month, as shown by any regularly published reporting or quotation service used by such creditor. In the event that none of the prices above described is available, the creditor may use any reasonable estimate of the market price of such security.

(h) Lowest market price—The lowest market price of a registered security during a specified time means the lowest price at which such security has sold during such time on the National securities exchanges on which it is or has been registered (including such exchanges during that part of the specified time which preceded their respective registrations as National securities exchanges under the securities exchange act of 1934): Provided, that, if such security is a stock upon which there has been any stock dividend amounting to more than 10 per cent in any one calendar year, or any reduction or increase in the number of shares by calling in the outstanding shares and issuing in substitution therefor a smaller or larger number of shares, any price established before such dividend or change in number of shares shall be adjusted therefor. A creditor using a figure published as such lowest market price in any record published or approved by any National securities exchange, may rely on such figure for the purposes of this regulation.

Section 4. Extension and Maintenance of Credit.

Statutory provision—Recites provisions of subsection (c) of Section 7 of the securties exchange act of 1934.

(b) General rule—A creditor may permit credit to be maintained in any account in accordance with the provisions of this section, regardless of reductions in the customer's equity resulting from changes in market prices and/or from charges to the account of the customer permitted under Section 8(b) of this regulation.

(c) Transactions in unrestricted accounts.—A creditor shall not permit any customer to make in an unrestricted account any transaction or combination of transactions which would cause such account to become a restricted account, unless he demands, in accordance with section 4(e) of this regulation, additional margin in an amount sufficient to make such account an unrestricted account.

(d) Transactions in restricted accounts.—A creditor shall not permit a customer to make in a restricted account any transaction which, in combination with any other transactions made on the same day and together with demands for additional margin in connection therewith, results in any increase of the excess of the adjusted debit balance of the account over the maximum loan value of the securities in the account, or results in any net withdrawal of cash and/or securities: Provided, however, that a creditor may permit a customer to make any transaction or combination of transactions which causes the account to become an unrestricted account; and provided, that any substitution of securities consisting of a sale of securities in the account and the purchase of other securities, if completed within a period of two successive business days, may be considered for the purposes of this section as a single transaction occurring on the day on which the purchase occurs.

(e) Time when margin must be obtained—Whenever the creditor is required to demand additional margin in order to comply with this regulation, he shall demand the required amount of margin as promptly as possible and shall obtain such margin as promptly as possible in view of the established usages of the trade and the circumstances of the case and in all events before the expiration of three full business days (exclusive of Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, from the date of the purchase or other transaction on account of which such margin is required, unless, within such time such account is brought into conformity with this regulation by some other method: Provided, that, in exceptional cases, any regularly constituted committee of a National securities exchange having jurisdiction over the business conduct of its members, of which exchange the creditor is a member or through which his transactions are effected, may grant a further extension of time, not exceeding ten days, on application of the creditor, if such committee is satisfied that the creditor is acting in good faith and that the circumstances warrant such action: Provided, however, that, if the account be a restricted account, (1) in the case of a withdrawal of cash, the necessary amount of securities must be deposited on the same day; (2) in the case of a withdrawal of securities, the necessary amount of cash must be deposited on the same day, and (3) in the case of a substitution of securities (not involving a sale of securities in the account and the purchase of other securities), the securities substituted must be deposited on the same day that the securities for which they are substituted are withdrawn. * * *

Section 7. Accounts Existing on October 1, 1934.

(a) Old accounts.—A creditor may designate any account maintained by him at the opening of business on October 1, 1934, as an old account by making an appropriate entry in the record of such account prior to November 15, 1934, and such creditor may carry such account separately as a special account and maintain credit and permit transactions therein: Provided,

Credit Extension Beyond Security's Loan Value Is Prohibited.

That, in order to prevent the circumvention of this regulation, such transactions and the maintenance of such credit shall be subject to the provisions of Section 4 of this regulation: Provided, That the creditor shall not at any time permit the customer to make any transaction or combination of transactions in such old account which would increase the adjusted debit balance of such account above the amount existing at the time such transaction or combination of transactions is instituted: Provided, however, That, if such account is an unrestricted account on October 15, 1934, the creditor, at any time prior to November 15, 1934, may permit the customer to withdraw therefrom such account of money and/or securities as will not make such account a restricted account. Any account not so designated as an old account prior to November 15, 1934, shall be subject to all the provisions of this regulation.

(b) New accounts—Nothwithstanding any other provision of this regulation, a creditor may at any time permit a customer having an old account, recorded separately as above provided, to establish and maintain one or more new accounts shall be subject to all the applicable provisions of this regulation, except that they shall not be affected by the status of, or transactions in, the old account.

(c) Consolidation of old accounts with new accounts—At any time prior to July 1, 1937, a creditor may permit or require any customer to consolidate his old account with any of his new accounts and thereafter the consolidated account shall be considered a new account within the meaning of this regulation: Provided, That all old accounts shall be consolidated, liquidated, or otherwise disposed of on or before July 1, 1937.

Killing of 2 Men On French Train Linked to Scandal

Paris, Sept. 27 (AP).—Two "strange men" who boarded the train at Nice are sought for questioning in the mysterious shooting today of two gangsters linked by police to the Mariani graft case.

A porter on the Vintemille-Paris express discovered the bodies in a first-class sleeping compartment. The men were identified as Rene Beitlamine, an Italian, and Jean Alibert, a Frenchman.

The porter said the suspects boarded the train at the Nice station and apparently went to the apartment occupied by Alibert. They jumped to the platform as the train started. Police found a vial of white powder under the compartment berth. It was sent to a laboratory for analysis, as police suspected the men may have been drugged, then shot to death.

Investigators still were uncertain whether the case is one of murder and suicide or a double execution by agents of gangdom, but the victims were wanted for questioning in the Mariani case.

A police graft ring at Lille was uncovered Monday with the arrest of Police Inspector Mariani, who was alleged to have worked with gangsters who terrorized small shopkeepers.

Lone Holdout, ChicagoBanker Flouting FDIC

J. M. Nichols, Approved by Hoover, Dares Crowley to Show His Teeth.

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Banker J. M. Nichols, with a prized letter of felicitation from former President Herbert Hoover in his pocket, has dug in for a finish fight as the only holdout against the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The bell will ring for the start of the big bout any time after October 1.

On that day Nichols, president of the First National Bank of Englewood, a South Side community, becomes eligible to pay the Government's penalty for noncompliance with the deposit insurance plan. Every other banker who can come under the insurance scheme has subscribed.

But Nichols, asserting his bank is 100 per cent liquid and he'll keep it so, has engaged in a direct-by-mail battle with the FDIC to keep out from under its deposit umbrella.

For refusing to pay dues to the FDIC, and refusing to display insignia as a member, Nichols' bank may be fined $100 a day after October 1 for every window receiving deposits, and the Englewood First National, with four windows, might owe the FDIC $400 a day.

"What will you do?" Nichols was asked today.

"Not a thing," he replied, "except call them all a bunch of clowns. I just want this fellow Crowley (Leo Crowley, chairman of the FDIC) to show his teeth.

Ready to Fight.

"I've offered to thrash this out in Federal court. If I thought for a minute they could clamp down on me, I'd close down all but one window or quit accepting deposits at all." He said he had received "fan mail" about his one-man stand from bankers throughout the country.

"I even got one from Herbert Hoover," he said. "He wrote a fellow here in Chicago who sent him a clipping about one of my letters to Jesse Jones. Mr. Hoover said, 'Mr. Nichols deserves a reward for his real Americanism.'"

Nichols, in his preliminary conversations with FDIC officials, whom he has defied from the beginning, said he opposes deposit insurance as a tax upon sound banks to guarantee weaker ones. He said he regarded the scheme as an intention to "wreck all the banks and then take them over."

Baltimorean Named To Child Sanitarium

Dr. Leo V. Schneider, of Baltimore, was appointed yesterday to the post of resident physician of the District of Columbia Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md.

Dr. Schneider, who has been conducting tuberculosis clinics in Montgomery County, will assume the office October 1.

How Margin Rule Affects Securities

Under the Federal Reserve marginal requirements the maximum credit which may be advanced for the carrying of securities is whichever is the higher of (a) 55 per cent of the current market value, or (b) 100 per cent of the lowest market price at which the security has sold since July 1, 1933, provided the latter is not more than 75 per cent of the present market value.

Illustrations of how this rule will work follow:

In the case of a stock with a current market value of $100 which sold as low as $50 since July 1, 1933: Using the first option the broker could advance $55; using the second he could advance $50; consequently the maximum the broker could advance would be $55 while the minimum margin put up by the customer would be $45, or 45 per cent.

In the case of a stock with a market value of $100 which sold at a low of $65 within the period: Using the second option the broker could advance $65, requiring $35, or a 35 per cent margin, from the customer.

In the case of a stock with $100 value now which sold as low as $75: The broker could advance $75, requiring $25, or 25 per cent margin, from the customer.

Westerner Backs Flight To Set Distance Mark

Denver, Sept. 27 (AP).—Robert Sherman Ross, of Beverly Hills, Calif., announced today he will sponsor a flight of 6,102 miles from Honolulu to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, in an attempt to set a new airplane distance record. The flight will be nonstop, nonrefueling, point-to-point, he said.

Ross said the flight will be made by Murray B. Dilley, jr., of Kansas City, and Mounty G. Mason, of Los Angeles, Army lieutenants on leave.

Hunt Pressed For Slayer of Detroit Child

Former Inmate of Asylum and Wife Sought in Brutal Killing.

Detroit, Sept. 27 (AP).—Police tonight pressed a widening search for Merlon Ward Goodrich, former Ohio asylum inmate, on a warrant charging him with the brutal slaying of Lillian Gallagher.

The warrant was issued today. It accused the 26-year-old trap drummer of strangling and beating to death the little girl, whose futile efforts to sell chances on a punchboard for her school brought her to the door of the Goodrich apartment last Thursday afternoon, with only one sale to show for five hours of pitiful endeavor.

Yesterday, the day Lillian was to have celebrated her eleventh birthday with a party at her home, her body was found hidden in a trunk in the Goodrich apartment. She had been criminally assaulted before she died.

Since then, Goodrich and his 25-year-old wife have been sought—and reported seen in scores of places — throughout the Middle West.

Michigan officers pursued clews in Ohio and Illinois, but the principal search centered in Detroit, where, acquaintances told police, they were seen as recently as Tuesday. A number of apartment building managers told of calls by a couple resembling the Goodriches Monday night, and police believed the fugitive and his wife were seeking a hide-out.

In Norwalk, Ohio, the fugitive's mother, Mrs. Ethel Goodrich, said her son had been deficient mentally since early childhood. She expressed the hope he soon would be captured.

Hoover's Book Lashes at U. S. Regimentation

'Vast Casualty to Liberty if It Continues,' He Writes.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Herbert Hoover, in "The Challenge to Liberty," to be published tomorrow, declares the policy of National regimentation "is a vast casualty to liberty if it shall be continued."

The former President, in his first extended dissertation on public affairs since he left the White House on March 4, 1933, sounds this introductory note:

"For the first time in two generations, the American people are faced with the primary issue of humanity and all government—the issue of human liberty."

Many of the pertinent points in Mr. Hoover's book have been publicly discussed since their appearance in magazine form.

Most extended of all is the section dealing with regimentation and its effect on representative government.

Attack Is Vigorous.

Here, without mentioning by name either his successor in office or the Roosevelt Administration, Mr. Hoover vigorously assails "the affinities of the regimentation theory of economics" and "its impact upon true American liberalism."

These departures from traditional American policy, he writes, "can best be determined by an examination of actions taken and measures adopted in the Unted States during recent months."

"The first step of economic regimentation is a vast centralization of power in the Executive," Mr. Hoover sets forth. "Without tedious recitation of the acts of Congress delegating powers over the people to the Executive * * * and omitting relief and regulatory acts, the powers which have been assumed, directly or indirectly, include the following:

"To debase the coin and set its value; to inflate the currency; to buy and sell gold and silver * * *

"To levy sales taxes on food, clothing and upon goods competitive to them (the processing tax) at such times and in such amounts as the Executive may determine.

"To expend enormous amounts from the appropriations for public works, relief and agriculture upon projects not announced to the Congress at the time appropriations were made;

"To create corporations for a wide variety of business activity heretofore the exclusive field of private enterprise;

"To install services and to manufacture commodities in competition with citzens."

Price Fixing Cited.

Here, without once referring to the NRA and the AAA, Mr. Hoover enumerates further assumptions of power by the Executive in the field of these two endeavours:

"* * * to fix minimum prices for industries or dealers; to fix handling charges and therefore profits; to eliminate 'unfair' trade practices;

"To allot the amount of production to individual farms and factories * * *; to destroy commodities;

"To stop expansion or development of industries * * *;

"To establish minimum wages; to fix maximum hours and conditions of labor;

"To impose collective bargaining;

"To abrogate the effect of the anti-trust laws."

At some time or place, the former Republican President says, "all of these authorities have been used. Powers once delegated are bound to be used, for one step drives to another."

"Coercive Cooperation."

Concerning "regimented industry and commerce," Mr. Hoover says "in this mobilization there has been constant use of the term 'cooperation.' * * *

"At best," he continues, "it is 'coercive cooperation.' Free will and consent, the essential elements in cooperation, have not often been present.

"Ample evidence of coercion is found in the bludgeoning proceedings of many important code conferences, in the changes forced in some codes, from which there was no appeal or refuge; in the incitement to public boycott * * *

"All this," he writes, "is the most stupendous invasion of the whole spirit of liberty that the Nation has witnessed since the days of colonial America."

Politics and People

By
Elliott Thurston

Inasmuch as Herbert Hoover's "The Challenge to Liberty" (Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.75) made its first public appearance—though not in full—in the Saturday Evening Post, its emergence now in book form is anticlimactic. What Mr. Hoover thinks of the New Deal, the dangers he perceives to American "liberty," was made abundantly clear from the publication in periodical form. His views are shared by a great many thoughtful men, regardless of politics. He contributes nothing new to the discussion, and his presentation of his subject does not make easy reading.

The chief interest in his book arises not from its content so much as from the fact that the only living former President has spoken his mind after more than a year of silence. And the remarkable thing is that his pronouncement of judgment should not occasion more general interest. This may be another commentary upon the ingratitude of Republics. Or it may be that Mr. Hoover, despite prolonged silence, has spoken too soon.

Again, there inevitably is attached to him and hence to his utterance the question of whether he aspires to a political comeback. Had he first taken himself out of politics, so far as that can be done in words (stronger than "I do not choose . . ."), it is possible that his wisdom and his warning would receive more widespread, more attentive hearing. As it is, about all that might be said of the book has already been said, editorially, of the magazine articles.

* * * *

There may be differences of opinion over Mr. Hoover's political disinterestedness. Yet a reading of the book is persuasive evidence of Mr. Hoover's deep concern. He takes pains to emphasize that the perils which he sees in a regimented economy, however sugar-coated, are the concern of all Americans irrespective of old party faiths—that the fundamentals upon which both Republican and Democratic parties rest would be swept away if the country were to be plunged into Socialism or some other imported "ism," involving an end of liberty as he defines it.

And he defines liberty as "a thing of the spirit—to be free to worship, to think, to hold opinions and to speak without fear—free to challenge wrong and oppression with surety of justice.

"Under liberty," he adds, "the mind and spirit of men can be free only if the individual is free to choose his own calling, to develop his talents, to win and keep a home sacred from intrusion, to rear children in ordered security," and the citizen "must be free to earn, to spend, to save, to accumulate property that may give protection in old age and to loved ones."

Few will take exception to the many axiomatic statements—maxims, if not platitudes—set down in this book. Its appearance, not long before the election, unfortunately makes it seem more of a political utterance than the disinterested, considered judgment of a statesman who has held the highest office in the land, and is now moved by deep concern for the safety of the Nation.

If Mr. Hoover felt that he was sounding a rallying call for men of all political faiths he will be disappointed by the political response, at least. For the New Dealers retort that Mr. Hoover is seeing phantoms—if not visions of mending his own political fortunes. The Republicans, as a party, display an aloofness toward Mr. Hoover which proves, among other things, that they do not think the tide is swinging in his direction.

* * * *

Doubtless a more accurate, certainly a more charitable attitude than Mr. Hoover encounters in the political realm is that he was moved to speak out at this time by no other consideration than his fear for the future of the Nation. Referring to his 20 years of public service, he declares, "I should be untrue to that service did I not raise my voice in protest, not at reform, not at emergency actions, but at the threat of the eclipse of liberty."

The veteran Washington correspondent is bound to detect a reminiscent ring in Mr. Hoover's statistics recording the material gains, in home, electricity, telephones, radios, automobiles, &c., under a system of ordered liberty. There is amusing irony in Mr. Hoover's remark, apropos of the talk of the ruins of the old order, that some 23,000,000 automobiles are "running about in our 'ruins' at ever increasing speeds." And there is even a touch of pathos in his explanation that he did not invent—though he would have been proud to do so—the much-maligned phrase, "rugged individualism."

An omniscient man from Mars might have written this book and been hailed as a prophet or a Moses. As a prophet in his own land, Mr. Hoover's fate at the moment seems to be the proverbial one. And the hour is not yet ripe for a popular uprising, even if Mr. Hoover were prepared to lead it.

U. S. to Close Morro Castle Inquiry Today

Policies Are Defended by Ward Line Officials on Stand.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Federal Government's inquiry into the Morro Castle disaster, which cost 132 lives off the Jersey shore on September 8, moved toward a close tonight with the questioning of officials of the operating line.

Previous testimony that members of the crew were unfamiliar with their fire stations, that there was friction among the officers, radio men and others on board, and that Capt. Robert Willmott, late master of the Morro Castle, had expressed fear of the first assistant radio operator, were denied by two officials questioned today.

At the close of the day's session, Chairman Dickerson N. Hoover said the Department of Commerce Board would conclude its investigation tomorrow after hearing other Ward Line officials.

Regular Inspection.

Among other matters, the board heard from Thomas S. Torreson, marine superintendent of the Ward Line, and Henry E. Cabaud, first vice president, that:

Ward Line officers never were cautioned "not to be quick" in sending distress calls, and there never was any discussion among officers and line officials about salvage costs.

The ships undergo regular Government inspection while in port and the relations between inspectors and the company "always were clean."

Lifeboats were inspected in port, "not every trip, but very often."

Capt. Willmott, who died only a few hours before the fire was discovered, had not complained of an insufficient staff.

"In the Morro Castle," Hoover stated, "you have a very valuable property on a very hard run. I'd like to know what you did about the upkeep?"

Torreson replied that after each trip he and the port engineer asked the master and the chief engineer what repairs were required. Requisitions were approved immediately and the necessary work was done at once, he said.

Owners Pledge Aid in Reaching Textile Accord

Employers Want Hand in Code Changes, See New Board Unnecessary.

(Associated Press.)

The cotton textile industry last night pledged its cooperation to the Government in the steps required to carry out the terms of the peace plan which ended the recent strike.

Speaking through its Code Authority, it made it clear that the manufacturers expect to be consulted before changes in the code are made. It was added, however, that the industry considers unnecessary the appointment of a board to adjudicate labor disputes within its field.

With charges of discrimination against strikers already before the new board, the mill owners said they were in accord with President Roosevelt's request that all be reemployed except those who engaged "in lawless violence" during the walkout.

Immediate Action.

Meanwhile, the new board, already appointed, went quickly to work and promised immediate action on discrimination allegations. These were placed before it by Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers.

George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, after a call upon President Roosevelt at the White House, issued this statement:

"With respect to the recommendation that a textile labor relations board be appointed, the Code Authority believes the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board was as fair and competent as any personnel that could be chosen.

"As the Government now feels that it con improve on this machinery by constituting a new board, it is the desire of the Code Authority to cooperate now as it has in the past in the orderly handling of this matter."

The statement, issued after a meeting of the Code Authority, was the first expression of the attitude of the mill owners during nearly a week in which union leaders claimed sweeping victories from the strike and preferred the charges of discrimination.

The authority directed its committee on code amendments to request a conference with the President, at which code changes involved in the settlement would be discussed and "constructive suggestions" made.

Customary Procedure.

"It is our confident expectation that the Government will follow the customary procedure of obtaining the collaboration and assent of the industry or its representatives in the process of code amendment," the Code Authority said.

"In regard to voluntary codes, it has been the understanding of the Code Authority that such assent is requisite. In any event such a course follows directly from the spirit of partnership invoked by the President as the essence of his recovery program, which we are confident the Government is determined to preserve."

The statement noted with gratification that the Winant Board had "sustained the position" of the industry in reporting that "working conditions have been vastly improved under the code," and that "industry-wide collective bargaining with the United Textile Workers is not now feasible."

It also was pleased that the Winant Board had found that "the facts now available do not justify recommending any change in hours and wages." The authority offered its willing cooperation in a study of economic conditions which President Roosevelt has directed the Labor Department to pursue.

Ambler Praises Orange County Gifts to Bar

Hails Madison, Barbour at Bicentennial; Taylor Honored.

By Bart Sheridan.

Orange, Va., Sept. 27.—With Gov. George C. Peery presiding at the bicentennial meeting today of the Orange Bar Association, Judge Gordon Barbour Ambler in the principal address named James Madison and Philip Pendleton Barbour as the two most outstanding contributors to jurisprudence in the history of Orange County.

A marker to the memory of Gen. Zachary Taylor was dedicated this morning by the American Legion Post, No. 156. Catherine Taylor Robertson, great-granddaughter of the military leader, performed the unveiling rites. State Commander R. L. Insco, of the legion, outlined the history of Taylor's military and political career.

The bicentennial pageant, which thrilled thousands of spectators here at its two first showings, was given at a special matinee performance today in addition to the regular appearance. The pageant cast numbers more than 1,000 lineal descendants of early Orange County settlers. It will be presented again tomorrow night, it was decided today, and the celebration will terminate officially at the bicentennial ball. Reggie Childs and his Hotel Roosevelt Orchestra will play, it was announced today by officials.

Schedule for Today.

Three other events will take place tomorrow. A pageant at Palmyra Church at 11 a. m., will depict the rise and growth of Methodist churches in Orange County. Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, will speak. At Orange courthouse at 3 p. m., Edwin Erskine Hume, Virginia president of Society of Cincinnati, will discuss the aims and activities of the organization.

Dr. E. A. Jackson, Judge A. T. Browning and Judge H. T. Holladay will speak at the Nazareth Baptist Church tomorrow night at an interracial meeting.

The Bar Association ceremonies opened with an invocation by the Rev. H. J. Davis, pastor of Orange Baptist Church. Gov. Peery, taking the chair, commended the bicentennial committee on its fine record in the celebration. At the conclusion of the meeting, Gov. Peery and his party were entertained by Miss Jacqueline P. Taylor at her home at Bloomsbury.

Attired in a black robe once worn by his grandfather, Philip Pendleton Barbour, on the United States Supreme Court bench, Judge Ambler upheld the position of the legal profession as public benefastors and lauded the action of Philip Barbour in reversing recent decisions of John Marshall's Supreme Court that validated the National superiority over State superiority.

Ambler's Address.

"What would it have profited the English barons to win the Battle of Runnymede," he said. "What would it have profited the American colonies to win freedom unless the lawyers formulated and defined the principles of the new government and expressed them later in the Constitution?"

Ambler paid tribute to Madison by comparing him with the great lawgiver, Justinian. "As Justinian was to the Romans, and Solon to the Greek, so were Madison and Barbour in their influence on the jurisprudence of this State and Nation," he declared.

"The lawyers define the people's liberty, the lawyers fight to uphold the people's liberties, and they of all people know the true meaning of the statement that 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.'"

In commemorating the 150th anniversary of Gen. Taylor's birth, Commander Insco traced the life and history of the soldier-President. Attending the ceremonies was Miss Betty Staffer Taylor, a granddaughter of Zachary Taylor, who came here from her New Orleans home to attend the event.

Judge A. T. Browning, introducing Mr. Ambler, decried child labor as "homicide in industry," and expressed a hope for future leadership to have such labor abolished. Mrs. Ritchie J. Rowe, Culpeper, presented to Orange County at the meeting a print of Zachary Taylor and his staff at the battle of Buena Vista.

Epidemic Fatal To 100 Horses

Farmers in Leonardtown Section Alarmed as Disease Spreads.

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.). Farmers throughout St. Marys County are alarmed at the number of horses affected by spinal meningitis, which swept the whole of southern Maryland at this time last year, causing the death of 1,000 horses, and which is now raging again in this section.

More than 100 horses have died in the lower part of the county this past month and near Leonardtown they are dying at the rate of two or three daily. Veterinarians are working night and day treating sick animals, and experts from College Park are giving assistance free of charge.

Last year the disease was believed caused by a fungus growing on grass in the lowlands, but this year it is attributed to the bite of a special mosquito.

A serum has been used and has saved a number of animals when given in time. The disease is prevalent after a long wet season and all owners are warned to keep a close watch on their horses, it was stated.

Bridge Opening Due in Month Near Bremo, Va.

Work on Project Over James River Nears Completion.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Work on the Bremo Bluff Bridge across the James River at Bremo, on Route 15, 45 miles south of Charlottesville, will be completed and the bridge opened to traffic within a month or six weeks, according to Clyde Smoot, of this city, manager of the local affairs of the National Recovery Reemployment Service, who made an official visit yesterday to Bremo.

The bridge, which will join the counties of Buckingham and Fluvanna, is being erected at a cost of $195,000 from funds appropriated under the National recovery highway act. It has 23 spans and is 1,785 feet in length, with a 36-foot-wide driveway. The distance from the normal flow of water in the river to the bridge is 92 feet.

The structure extends over the top of the tracks of the James River division of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. At the south end it lands on a bluff one-quarter of a mile west of New Gaston, in Buckingham County.

Work on the project was started four months ago and has been pushed rapidly, providing employment for many of the unemployed in the two counties. All work has been completed for 800 feet from the high bluff on the north (Fluvanna) end, and workmen are now finishing the last 200 feet of the remaining floor section. The approaches on both ends have been finished and surfaced. All steel work has been finished, this crew having left the scene last week.

A crew of approximately 60 men is now at work on the project. About 50 per cent of the labor was procured from Fluvanna County, and the remainder from Buckingham.

General contractors for the work was the firm of Boxley Bros., of Orange, and the steel work was done by the Virginia Bridge & Iron Co., of Roanoke.

Manassas Gay For Dairy Fete Opening Today

Gov. Peery Will Crown Queen; Official Ball Held in School.

Manassas, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Manassas is playing host to the fourth annual Piedmont Dairy Festival, with its streets gayly decorated with flags, pennants and lights of many colors and with a holiday spirit in the air.

For the past week workmen have been busily dressing the town in its festival garb and the stage is set for the most elaborate and spectacular celebration in the history of the fete.

The festival was officially opened tonight with a ball in the high school gymnasium. Tomorrow morning the crowning of Miss Sheila Sultan as Queen Regina IV will be conducted by Gov. Peery.

In addition to the Governor, the festival will be witnessed by a host of other notables, among them Secretary Claude A. Swanson. The Fifth Reserve Marine Brigade will serve as guard of honor to the queen and her court.

Other prominent guests invited include former Gov. John G. Pollard of Virginia, and Representative Howard W. Smith, of this district.

At 8 o'clock tomorrow morning a caravan of 200 cars will leave Union Station in Washington to bring the official Washington delegation to the festival. An aeronautical exhibition at 10 a. m. will be followed by an aerial tour of the dairy region in the afternoon.

Led by the "Voice of Safety," Washington's white police cruiser, and flanked by a detail of men from the metropolitan police force, the street parade, a feature of the celebration, will get under way at 2:30 p. m. Sixty floats have been entered.

More than 2,000 northern Virginia school children will be in the line of march.

The school division will be led by the Alexandria High School and the Washington and Lee cadets, followed by the Boys' Independent Band of Washington.

A cup will be awarded to the school making the best showing in the parade.

As in former years, the festival is educational in character and has for its chief object the promotion of dairy products. This year it was written and directed by Miss Sue Ayres, rural school supervisor.

The cast of the pageant was chosen from the schools of Prince William County and has been in rehearsal for the past three weeks.

The huge stage for the pageant is set directly beside an old ivy-covered tower, located on the Portner estate, Annaburg, and is flanked by spreading trees.

Bleachers have been erected on each side of the stage and directly facing the stage boxes and reserved seats have been arranged.

Hospital Aided At Cumberland

City Votes $15,000 to Help Meet $30,000 Deficit in Revenues.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.). Memorial Hospital, which reported a $30,000 deficit in operating revenues for the last year, received financial aid yesterday from the mayor and city council, with passage of an order authorizing Commissioner of Finance Harry Irvine to borrow $15,000 from local banks. The money will be given to the board of governors of the hospital.

The hospital board had asked the board of county commissioners to contribute $15,000 to aid in making up the deficit, but David W. Sloan, county attorney, ruled the responsibility rested with the city, under the act of the Legislature authorizing the bond issue to erect the municipal institution.

The deficit was caused by the many charity patients treated at the hospital in recent [illegible], it was said.

Democratic Challenge Is Met by Keynoter of Convention.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP). Sounding the keynote at the opening of the Republican State convention today, Representative Clarence E. Hancock accepted the Democratic challenge to make the New Deal the chief issue in the campaign in President Roosevelt's home State.

The Syracuse Congressman ignored State issues and the internal strife in the party as he leveled an attack upon the Roosevelt recovery program, loudly approved by every speaker at the Democratic convention in Buffalo.

As the Republican convention swung into its official business, upState opposition to the nomination of Rbert Moses for the governorship crystalized into a demand upon F. Trubee Davison, leader of the group sponsoring the New York City park commissioner, that he withdraw Moses' name. The upstaters claimed Moses would be a weak candidate north of the Bronx.

A platform will be completed tomorrow and candidates for United States Senator and State offices named.

Calls for Party Action.

Hancock asserted " if we as Republicans, fail to meet the duty and responsibility to fight the subversive and destructive course of the New Deal, there is no justification for the further existence of the Republican party."

"There are millions of Democrats who feel as most of us feel," said the keynoter, "and will join with us in the fight."

Answering the question, "Why are people afraid to invest their savings in wealth-producing, work-creating private enterprises," Hancock said:

"No one knows when or how many times the President will cut the gold content of the dollar or cheapen it in other ways.

"The National credit is being drawn upon and wasted so recklessly that uncontrolable inflation, worthless money and universal ruin are not far distant unless there is a prompt change in policy.

"The new securities act is an obstacle to restoring employment and increasing jobs.

"The tariff act gives the President the power to destroy without notice hundreds of industries which depend upon protective tariff for their existence, whenever he deems it expedient to do so in the interest of other industries.

NRA "Expansion" Scored.

"The NRA was projected for the laudable objects of spreading work and maintaining decent levels of minimum wages, but to the accompaniment of an uproar of ballyhoo it has been expanded to give the Government control of hours, wages, methods of doing business, volume of production and prices.

"The Department of Agriculture, by virtue of the AAA and the crop control acts, may rise or lower the volume and the price of basic farm commodities as the professional staff of that department sees fit. Farmers are told what they may raise and how much."

Referring to what he termed was the uses of relief funds to build "a political machine," Representative Hancock asesrted:

"As the program of National Chairman Farley is revealed to us there is ample ground for suspecting the existence of a definite plan plan to crush opposition, to make so many people subservient to bureaucratic rule that there will be but one all-powerful party in the United States as there is in Italy, in Germany and in Russia."

League Backs Trade Freedom

Human, Property Rights Inseparable, Shouse Tells Borah.

(Associated Press.)

Jouett Shouse yesterday assured Senator Borah, Independent Idaho Republican, that the American Liberty League, Inc., advocates economic freedom as well as safeguarding of constitutional rights.

In a speech Borah said the league should include "economic freedom" in its program. Yesterday, Shouse, league president, said in a telegram to Borah:

"Your commendation of the American Liberty League in your * * * speech * * * is most gratifying and encouraging.

"I note you suggest that the league include 'economic freedom' in its platform and I agree that if this principle were not already a basic part of our program, then, most certainly, it should be added.

"The league's articles of incorporation include the declaration that it 'will teach the duty of Government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprse, to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired.'

"Furthermore, a declaration of principles adopted and made public by the league's executive committee on September 7 included the following paragraph:

" 'To us as a group and to the league as it will be presently unfolded in our intensive campaign of education, human rights and property rights are inseparable. * * *'"

N.Y. Democrats Hear Al Smith Belabor G.O.P.

'Happy Warrior' Praises Lehman as Party's Convention Ends.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP).—With Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland and the entire State ticket renominated, New York Democrats went home from their convention tonight to campaign for the New Deal and their candidates.

They adopted a platform which pledged the party in President Roosevelt's home State to unqualified support of the New Deal. The platform also emphasized the public utilities question as a major issue of the New York campaign.

The convention was one of the briefest in the party's State history, and one of the smoothest. All nominations were by acclamation.

Other Nominations.

Other nominations were:

Lieutenant governor—M. William Bray, Utica.

Attorney general—John J. Bennett, jr., Brooklyn.

Comptroller—Morris S. Tremaine, Buffalo.

Associate Judges (Court of Appeals) John T. Loughran, Kingston, and Edward R. Finch, New York City, a Republican.

Gov. Lehman, in accepting renomination, said that he was "proud to have been given the opportunity of again enlisting in the fight to carry on the program of good and progressive government," and that "no halt can be made in the march forward, lest the forces of reaction stem the tide and force it back."

An event to which the delegates had looked forward was the appearance of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who nominated Gov. Lehman. The "Happy Warrior" did not disappoint them. In "Al Smith" fashion of old he opened by belaboring the Republicans, particularly for opposition to the program of the Democratic governors. He charged them with fighting labor and welfare legislation, local government reform and with taking a straddling position on prohibition.

Praises Lehman.

When he mentioned prohibition there was tremendous applause. Saying the Democrats had buried prohibition "under the hat" since their last convention, he told the delegates "I wouldn't be a bit surprised to read the Republican platform tomorrow and have it say 'We commend the fulfillment of Republicanism for freeing the people from the bondage of prohibition.' "

He swung into praise of Gov. Lehman with a reference to President Roosevelt's governorship.

"Both Gov. Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman presided over the government of this State at a very critical period in our history," he said. "And I think we can, with great pride, throughout the length and breadth of the country, point to the two Democratic administrations that during that period are standing in the very front of human progress."

Her Hubby No Kin To Tin Pan Alley, He Gets the Air

His representations that he was a relative of a renowned song writer, that he stood shoulder to shoulder with the New Dealers, and that he would some day inherit a vast estate from an uncle were all false, Mrs. Evelyn M. Brall Harris, said in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Justice F. D. Letts awarded her an annulment of her marriage to Charles Harris.

Through Raymond Neudecker, attorney, the girl wife charged that her huesband married her in Baltimore June 19, 1933. After that she discovered many untrue statements he had made to her prior to the marriage, she said. She declared her husband was a user of narcotics and had tried to cause her trouble in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, where she is employed.

Mrs. Harris was permitted to resume her maiden name, and she was granted an order restraining her husband from molesting her.

New Deal Cost Is Staggering, G.O.P. Charges

(Associated Press.)

A threat to the Nation's financial stability in a public debt swelled to $33,000,000,000 by the end of this fiscal year was predicted yesterday by the Republican Senatorial and Congressional Campaign Committee in a pamphlet entitled, "Staggering Cost of the New Deal."

Quoting from President Roosevelt's 1932 campaign speeches in which he pledged a 25 per cent reduction in Government expenditures, the committee declares the Chief Executive ousted Lewis W. Douglas as budget director because he opposed "reckless expenditures" by "spendthrifts of the New Deal."

Douglas, who had pledged himself to balance the budget, resigned recently after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt.

The booklet, being distributed to G. O. P. Senatorial and Congressional candidates, follows the campaign handbook issued earlier in the week by the Democratic National committee. The latter praised the New Deal.

Senator Hastings, of Delaware, and Representative Bolton, of Ohio, are cochairmen of the Republican committee. They prepared the attack of fiscal policies of the Roosevelt Administration with the assistance of the Republican National committee's research bureau.

On the cover of the 23-page booklet, there is quoted a statement in Mr. Roosevelt's first campaign speech in 1932 at Albany, N. Y., which reads:

"Let us have courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits. Stop the deficits."

There are other similar quotations.

Pouring Out Millions.

Describing the Roosevelt Administration as the "most extravagant * * * in American peace-time history," the document says the New Deal spent $2.28 for every $1 it took in, "added 100,000 Democratic henchmen to the Federal pay roll," and was pouring out millions to peg the price of cotton, for relief activities and other purposes.

The committee says that during the fiscal year 1934 the "Roosevelt Administration went in the hole at the rate of $11,000,000 a day;" that when it came into power the public debt was $20,584,310,420 and on August 31, 1934, stood at $26,495,065,000. It also claims Secretary Morgenthau's recent estimate of $5,000,000,000 as the deficit for this fiscal year was "very conservative."

"It would be almost impossible," the Republicans state, "to exaggerate the menace to our National credit that is contained in the apparent indifference of the Roosevelt Administration to piling up new debts and creating additional deficits."

The booklet notes that when Republicans were in power the public debt of $24,051,687,728 left over from the World War was reduced to $15,773,710,250 in 1930.

Under the subheading, "Present Debt Policy Jeopardizes Nation's Future," it declares the public debt "will never be appreciably lessened during the lifetime of those now living, unless the people vote the New Deal type of spendthrifts and experimenters out of power and return the Federal Government to control of those who believe in and practice rigid public economy."

Wallace Urges Social Justice As U. S. Policy

Meddling in Government by Business Charged by Secretary.

(Associated Press.)

The alternatives of a Communistic or Fascist state or a government that looks upon itself "as a partner with business, labor, agriculture and consumers," were enunciated yesterday by Secretary Wallace.

Explaining his political philosophy in the current issue of Collier's Weekly, the Secretary of Agriculture made this his answer to those who object to "Government in business." Under present conditions, he asserted, there is too much interference by business with Government.

"A democracy worthy of the name," he said, must be guided by social justice and social charity—in other words, the greatest good for the greatest number.

"Reliance upon such rules is not the way of Socialism, of Communism, nor of Fascism. But neither is the way of the freebooter capitalists with their devotion to unlimited competition."

In his magazine article Wallace chuckled openly at the "new era theory of everlasting prosperity," which he said was voiced by Republican office holders prior to 1929.

"By 1925 we were well on our way upon the exciting road that eventually leads to destruction," he declared. "We saw security values rise higher and higher under the direction of men in control of wealth. All we needed was faith in the continued prosperity of the country * * *

"I am not so much concerned with the number of millionaires and the size of their individual wealth as I am with their power to influence the minds and aspirations of the young and to shape and misshape our industrial progress."

A necessity for changing the rules of Government has existed since 1920, he contended. Certain businesses "have always been up to their necks in Government," he declared, naming especially bankers and those who "from a world-competitive point of view are so inefficient that they would die without tariff protection."

"If the full truth were ever known about the way governmental influences has been used by great corporations, public indignation would know no bounds," he asserted.

Constitutional powers permit any one man, even so great a man as the President of the United States, to decide for himself, whenever he pleases, what shall be our tariffs, what shall be the value of our money, and what shall be course and nature of our Government activities."

It is "sheer suicide," Senator Vandenberg went on, "to persist in National price-fixing that leads straight to an insufferably high cost of living which already is gnawing at the family budget, or to raise up new feudal overlords at Washington who shall decide for every farmer what he shall grow upon each acre, and for every business man what he shall charge for service rendered—with jail as the final alternative—or to continue an anti-trust law repeal which fertilizes monopoly and crucifies little business."

'Stoop-Shouldered Man' Is Hunted as Aid in Kidnaping

A search for "a stoop-shouldered man" as an accomplice to the ransom taker in the Lindbergh kidnaping case last night occupied Justice Department agents, says teh Associated Press.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was reported in reliable quarters to have furnished Federal operatives this fresh description of the handkerchief-masked man who walked by his automobile on the night of April 2, while Dr. J. F. Condon, "Jafsie," was preparing to hand over the $50,000 ransom.

In addition to this information the Justice Department has been told that a woman, apparently of Latin origin, also had played a role in the ransom taking. Her part, however, was believed here to have been of little significance.

J. Edgar Hoover, hcief of the Division of Investigation, declined to amplify his statement that additional arrests were expected.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1934 C. M. Co. —Advt.

A Merited Rebuke.

President Roosevelt has rightly refused to give any explicit reply to a questionnaire addressed to him by the United States Chamber of Commerce, asking for a statement of policy on a number of highly important issues.

Obviously there is great need for a clear declaration of executive intention regarding such matters as budget balancing, currency stability, the relation of the Government to private business and other topics mentioned in the questionnaire. A revival of confidence necessitates removal of present uncertainties regarding the general plans and purposes of the Administration.

It is, however, an entirely different matter for an individual or a group to request the President of the United States to reply to a questionnaire, critical in tone, which seeks to obtain specific declarations on various issues calling for intricate decisions. It would be both unsuitable and indeed impossible for the President to respond to a challenge calculated to limit his discretionary powers along lines defined for him instead of by him.

The function of political criticism is to enlighten the criticized, not to substitute the views of the critics for those of the responsible authorities.

He Did Not Choose To Run.

If memory serves, Postmaster General Farley announced not so long ago that he did not intend to be a candidate for re-election as chairman of the Democratic State committee for New York. Since making this good resolution he has spent several weeks stumping the country in favor of a New Deal Congress. His soul is again flushed with political fervor. Arriving in Buffalo in an atmosphere of righteous partisanship, he has succumbed to the importunings of friends. He has been re-elected State chairman to serve until the spring of 1936. Like Oscar Wilde—in this one respect—he can resist everything except temptation.

If the title were not persistently associated with his name the public would seldom think of Mr. Farley as Postmaster General. In the present campaign his entire time and energy seems to be given up to politics. As chairman of the Democratic National committee, his duties are both numerous and exacting. As much may be said of the State chairmanship to which he has just been re-elected. In any other field than government the continuation of a two-job politician as the head of an immense business organization would be regarded as preposterous. But "Sunny Jim" seems oblivious to the impropriety of drawing a salary from the Federal Treasury for service rendered to the Democratic party.

Feeble efforts on the part of some officials to dissociate Government functions from politics are merely irritating as long as the Cabinet officer who has control over all jobs distributed under the New Deal remains the standard bearer for the majority party. Discussion of "planned economy" simply can not be taken seriously while active politicians direct the Government's largest business enterprises. It is easy to understand that Postmaster General Farley is "happy" to accept this assignment again. But his pleasure is not shared by those who hoped and at least half believed that the Administration meant what it said about divorcing administrative machinery from active partisanship.

A Price Recession.

After rising for six consecutive weeks, the index of wholesale prices of the Bureau of Labor declined 0.4 per cent during the week ended September 15. Other indices confirm these findings. The reaction is so negligible that it would have little significance if it were not for the fact that the current business situation is far from satisfactory and sentiment regarding the outlook for an early improvement generally pessimistic.

Otherwise the advance in prices which has occurred during the past year and since the low point of the 1933 crisis is decidedly impressive. Prices for farm products, for example, are 83.3 per cent above the low level at which they stood in the early part of last year, while the prices of all commodities have increased on the average 30 per cent since March, 1933. As noted recently in these columns, the relatively rapid advance in farm prices in recent months has almost closed the gap between agricultural prices and those of other commodities, measured on a 1926 basis, thereby eliminating a disparity which has been regarded as a major deterrent to business recovery.

From the point of view of the Administration, however, further price advances are regarded as essential because the price-raising program has a dual purpose—a correction of price relationships and a general advance of prices. Demand for restoration of the 1926 price level, for instance, is based upon a belief that much higher prices are required to bring relief to debtor classes, and to restore value to depreciated property and securities which may be held as collateral against loans at figures above their market value.

The benefits derivable from a general price rise based upon expanding demands for commodities and better adjustment of such demands to existing supplies is indisputable. Unfortunately, many people fail to distinguish between increases of this type and increases that are purely inflationary. So a recession, if at all pronounced or long continued, is likely to strengthen destructive demands for monetary manipulation as a means of bringing about further advances without regard to the state of business.

The Growing Deficit.

For the less than three months of the current fiscal year the Federal deficit amounts to more than a half-billion dollars. In other words, for every day since July 1 the Treasury has been going $6,000,000 in the hole. Emergency expenditures alone during the period from July 1 to September 24 amounted to $782,000,000, a sum not far short of the total revenue collected.

As these outlays were made chiefly by the FERA and the PWA, it is evident that the problem of budgetary balance is closely tied to that of the relief program. With demands for an expansion of emergency spending increasing, and with predictions that the numbers on relief rolls will reach a maximum figure next winter, the outlook for a balanced budget seems very remote.

There is, however, one encouraging development which holds out hope that fiscal reforms may come sooner than expected. That is the growing realization on the part of the public at large of the dangers inherent in our spendthrift policy. Demands for a balanced budget are being made with more and more vehemence, and retrenchment in public works and relief outlays is being urged with greater frequency as an aid to recovery.

On the other hand, a large body of public opinion still believes that the Federal Government ought to spend more, not less, in order to prime the recovery pump. The perennial contest between the spenders and the advocates of balance has reached a critical stage. Fighting on the side of those who urge spending as a matter of policy to stimulate recovery are those humanitarian instincts which wish to ameliorate immediate privation even by methods likely to make such privation far more widespread.

There is an abundance of evidence at hand to prove beyond contradiction that the scale of relief payments has frequently been excessive, resulting in the presence on relief rolls of many persons who prefer public aid to available private employment. Even if the coming months bring additions to the number of the idle, therefore, the relief agencies can greatly reduce the per capita scale of their expenditures by eliminating waste and cutting out excessive benefits. Furthermore, reduction in the scale of public works projects, which have provided only limited employment at high per capita cost to the Government, might well prove in the interests of economy. Direct relief is less costly than provision of jobs, and no more demoralizing if the job serves no useful purpose.

Substantial reduction of the deficit is, therefore, possible if the Government shows a determination to reduce the amount of emergency relief outlays and to seek new sources of revenue. But if the belief prevails that more rather than less spending is needed, the unwillingness of business men to make long time commitments will be enhanced by fear of a collapse of Government credit which would make resort to fiat money or other inflationary expedients inevitable.

A large part of the timidity that now paralyzes initiative would disappear if there were any assurance that the Government intended to follow a policy of retrenchment which would lead ultimately to disappearance of budgetary deficits. These are now mounting—it is worthy of repetition—at the rate of a quarter of a million dollars for every hour that passes.

The Intrepid Gold Bloc.

Representatives of the continental gold bloc countries are meeting this week in Geneva to discuss ways and means of expanding their trade with one another through preferential commercial agreements. They hope in this way to strengthen the defensive financial alliance which has enabled them thus far to survive a series of crises—internal and external—and to meet heavy drains upon their gold reserves, without abandoning the gold standard.

The present downward movement of the pound sterling and a recrudescence of rumors that the dollar may again be devalued have added to the anxieties of the gold bloc and doubtless increased interest in the proposed commercial accord. Although the volume of trade that might be affected by such agreements is not great and plans of action not yet defined, this conference indicates a renewed determination to fight any voluntary movement to abandon the gold standard. Certainly France can not be driven off gold involuntarily, since her reserves would enable her to withstand a prolonged drain.

Contrary to expectations, the gold-bloc countries have fought a gallant battle to preserve the integrity of their currencies against the demoralizing effects of instability in other parts of the world. The longer they resist the temptation to follow the bad example of others, the more opportunities they will have to appreciate the illusory character of the advantages that result from competitive devaluation of currencies. Thus the president of the General Federation of French Industries points out that the exchange premium which benefits the industries of countries with depreciated currencies is ephemeral in character, because prices will eventually rise at an accelerated rate in those countries which have abandoned the gold standard.

Eventually the nations that are now permitting their currencies to fluctuate in relation to gold will have to reach some agreement to stabilize. Nobody has yet suggested any effective substitute for gold as an international standard of value and a means of settling international balances. If the gold-bloc countries continue to resist assaults upon the gold standard, coming from within and without, the rehabilitation of disordered, fluctuating currencies will be accomplished with greater ease.

Passing The Buck.

The controversy between Secretary Ickes and the District Commissioners, over the proposed $8,000,000 loan and grant for a sewage disposal plant, strongly resembles a dog chasing its tail. In effect, Mr. Ickes' letter criticizes the Commissioners for delay and threatens to withdraw the tentative allotment for the sewage disposal plant unless plans are presented to him before January 1, or a satisfactory explanation can be given. But the PWA has not yet made funds available for the preparation of plans and the Commissioners can do little until such an allowance is forthcoming.

In the circumstances, charges of delay on the part of the local government in connection with this project are beside the point. The Commissioners were notified last June that their request for funds to build a sewage disposal plant had been tentatively approved. But the PWA did not submit a contract for them to sign until the middle of this month. Preparation of general plans began soon after the PWA indicated its intention to make the loan.

The local director of sanitary engineering, however, has a small staff and no funds to hire extra help. Furthermore, design of a sewage disposal plant is a highly technical undertaking beyond the capacity of the local engineering department. It is impossible, therefore, to complete the detailed specifications and designs until funds are available to hire expert consulting engineers. As Col. Sultan has aptly said, he would face a jail sentence if he spent on this project District funds appropriated for other purposes.

If the PWA had placed funds at the disposal of the Commissioners last June, contracts for the preliminary work—for which plans are already available—would now be in the advertising stage. But instead of thus facilitating the fundamentals the PWA has engaged in petty haggling with local authorities over details with which it has no real concern. The District and not the Federal agency should determine what length of time is necessary for construction of this plant, if technical blunders and waste of money are to be avoided. As in the case of selecting a site for the adult tuberculosis hospital, Secretary Ickes has attempted an unwarranted intrusion upon local prerogatives.

An important principle is thus at stake. The Commissioners have indicated a willingness to satisfy the demands of the PWA so far as practicable. But the ultimate responsibility for expenditure of this $8,000,000 rests upon their shoulders. It is their unquestioned duty to safeguard the interests of District taxpayers against any demands for unwise haste or unwarranted expenditures.

When Secretary Ickes comes to understand that most of the delay to date is due to procrastination within his own organization, he will doubtless decide to withdraw arbitrary demands and untimely threats.

Food For Thought.

Unmindful of the gondoliers' songs, musical invitations to view the glories of Venice, radio biologists from all over the world have cloistered themselves in the city once ruled by doges, for the purpose of exchanging views upon the effects of mysterious waves emanating from things animate and inanimate. One day was devoted to the lowly onion, which, according to Prof. S. D. Misra, of India, sends forth M rays, useful in treating pharyngitis and nasal catarrh; and he cited instances where necklaces of onions were worn to cure colds.

Men, as well as women, should welcome the discovery that virtue lies in wearing a vegetable as well as in the eating thereof. As long as man can remember he has had placed before him a sickly looking, dark green substance and has been told that he must eat thereof, as it "is good for him." Now, encouraged by recent discoveries, he can roll uncooked spinach into small balls, which he will carry in his pockets, whence radio waves will shoot into his body and cure what ails him.

As for this discovery concerning the onion, a housewife of 50 years ago will tell you that the vegetable was used by her in the sick room, not to cure disease germs, but to absorb them. When the halves of an onion placed near a sick bed turned black she would declare that danger of contagion had passed. So it would seem that the energetic onion works both ways.

The trouble is that many a master mind is controlled by another master.

The most constantly revised opinion is the one a person has of himself.

All we know about planned economy is that whenever we plan it something always comes along and upsets our plan.

It is usually the case that the person with a closed mind has an open mouth.

The "Relief Racket."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With regard to the controversy between Commissioner George E. Allen and Hon. Jesse C. Suter regarding the "Relief Racket," commented upon on the first page of The Post of September 20.

It is unfortunate that a District official appears to know so little on a subject concerning which everybody else knows something. I have no children in the public schools; nevertheless I deplore the lack of provision and the squalid manner in which many of them are kept up.

It is an old official stunt to respond to a general accusation which everybody knows to be true by demanding specific instances. Commissioner Allen should know about specific instances himself, since he has the organization to learn about them. Within the past eight months I learned of one instance where a man on relief, whose wife was working, would not accept a job at $12 a week, because "he was a $16 a-week man." If Commissioner Allen desires the information, I will give him names, addresses and approximate dates.

Again, I suggest that if Commissioners were not appointive officers there would be less wise-cracking and sarcasm on the subjects of "lotteries, relief rackets and education."

Yes, We Skidded.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have a hard lot to deal with, an annoying crowd of critics; tinkers in statecraft, science, religion, what not. And yet you control an excellent newspaper, to which great praise is most justly due.

In your editorial of September 22, under the caption "Where Do We Go From Here?" however, we were amazed by your discussion of the definitions of woman and lady. You referred to Roget (the Thesaurus, of course), and that was good. But—what of this? You cited as an authority Daniel Webster! What could you have been thinking of—a dictionary? We can not let it pass. Perhaps someone, while you were out, supplied this in order to make the case more positive and convincing.

Still, that is not all. You go on to say: Webster says woman is "soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible." Now, was it not Shakespeare who put it in those words? Please give it another whirl and let us know how you come out. We regret this whole matter, and wonder why you didn't pass that editorial over to the "Strictly Speaking" sponsor for a check-up. Forsooth, we can see that person with hair standing on end, unless it's a permanent. So, where do we go from here?

Complacency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I, too, like The Post better than any other paper, but there are some things about it I dislike.

After once showing us what Bargeron, Hall and Morgan look like, why keep it up—why rub it in? If their reportorial stuff rates a bust photo, then the writers of your meaty, senseful thought-produced and thought-producing editorials rate a full-length portrait at the head of each editorial every day.

I am glad the writer of the "Post Impressionist" does not give his name; I am gladder he does not force me to look at his (complacent) phiz every day of the week—month—year.

So that betimes they keep in proud repair

As master-builders of the days to be,
Who, in the pride of helpful growth, declare
That still the Constitution contemplates
Not one great State whose grown-up sons demand
The coddling guidance of a steadying hand,
No snug retreat whose well-behaved inmates
Are each like each, but, as its framers planned,
A family of self-reliant States.

Definitions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post Impressionist may be interested to know that there is listed in the Washington Telephone Directory, a "Congressional Intelligence Incorporated—Albee Building." Chief Justice Marshall once gave his very famous definition of a corporation as "an artificial being, invisible, intangible and existing only in the contemplation of the law."

Now, that definition seems most pertinent at the present time in relation to Congressional Intelligence, but why not give the correct address as Capitol Hill rather than the dusky corridors of the Albee Building?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On reading The Post Impressionist column of September 21, about postcards, I wondered if the writer had ever seen the set of Washington postcards made by a real artist, Miss Lesley Jackson, reproduced in color and sold under the name of "Roundabout Prints?"

So far as I know, these are the only ones made from real paintings.

Pine Tree Warnings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The result of the Maine election is more of a warning than a portent. It is a warning to those of us who believe in American liberty and our rights under the Constitution that the insidious attempt to destroy our freedom may succeed unless true patriotism replaces mere politics. It is a warning that, despite all gestures to the contrary, the New Dealers push steadily forward with their deep-laid plans to enslave the American people with "social management" and perpetuate themselves in power. Nothing short of the most aggressive action will check this movement.

To patriotic Americans whose vision and courage have not yet been weakened by the New Deal, it is apparent that the country faces a crisis equal to, if not greater, than that of 1860—a crisis which threatens the very foundations of the Nation. Under guise of plans to introduce needed reforms and aid recovery, the Administration is attempting to achieve its real purposes by the use of methods that no genuine American should tolerate.

Never in the history of the United States have the responsible heads of our Government made such deliberate attempts to deceive and bulldoze the American people. To combat such moves, subversive of liberty, democracy and our Constitutional rights, vigorous methods must be used—methods inspired by patriotism, not by politics.

Progressive Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is encouraging to observe that Mexico, whose people for centuries were kept in darkness and superstition, where the education of the masses was an unknown quantity, has, under wise and progressive statesmanship, turned her face toward the rising sun. The rays of enlightenment are gradually permeating the dark places, enabling the people to rise to a higher plane, with promise of national greatness seldom attained by any nation under like conditions.

The free, nonsectarian public school is destined to do for Mexico what it has so nobly done for our own country—producing an intelligent and independent-thinking citizenry, whose minds are free to direct the actions of the individual—a citizenry a credit alike to themselves and to the nation.

Happily, the time has passed when progress can be stayed in Mexico, now rapidly taking her place among the leading nations of the world. Progressive people everywhere wish her Godspeed.

The Improvement in Agriculture

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested in Mr. Eugene Myer's signed editorial on farm prices, reprinted by the Kansas City Star. It seems to me he stated accurately the price situation as to farm products and interpreted their significance correctly. It has been rather amazing, the rapidity of the improvement in the farm product price situation during the last three or four months, notably as regards wheat, corn, hogs and cattle.

Since the dispersal of the surplus, largely due to drought so far as grains were concerned, and to some extent on hogs and cattle, it has seemed to me that agriculture has been approaching a situation that may develop into a considerable prosperity in another year or so, provided general business is not seriously dislocated by uncertainty with regard to unneeded restrictions.

It will take until next year for the higher prices for agricultural products to reflect themselves vigorously in purchasing power of farmers and consequently in demand for goods that would put more people to work in industry. But if business is encouraged it would likely soon begin to anticipate the more favorable situation and would expand employment, thus stimulating the market for farm products.

This would strengthen farm product prices, would tend to keep prices of goods the farmer buys down to current levels and would maintain or improve the present relationship between the prices the farmer gets and those he pays. It is essential that this relationship be maintained or improved. If prices of manufactured goods go up proportionately to the gains in farm prices, the farmer will not be much better off than he has been, except it will be somewhat easier to pay his debts because he is getting in more dollars.

The Post Impressionist

Educative Washington.

Postoffice, Friday.

DAVIES, SR.—who has had an NRA job since last spring—says he thinks a father ought to be a regular pal to his son. But he qualifies this by adding that he ought, of course, to be an instructive pal.

* * *

"The father," says Davies, Sr. "should always stand ready to give his boy the full benefit of the parent's larger experience and wider knowledge. He should take the lad to instructive places and, in an entertaining manner, introduce valuable information into the conversation."

* * *

So, having established Davies, Jr., a few days ago, in Washington, Davies, Sr., proposed a trip to the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum.

"But what is the National Museum?" asked Davies, Jr., as they boarded their taxi to go to that fountain of education.

"You'll see. You'll find it very instructive. And anything you don't understand I'll be glad to explain to you."

"Why will I find it instructive, father?"

"Because it——Why, because there are so very many instructive things there."

"What things?"

"Everything that's there."

"What's there, father?"

"Is it a circus?"

"Of course not."

"Well, is it a zoo?"

"It's a museum. The National Museum is a museum. It's like the Smithsonian Institution."

"Didn't you tell me once that the National Museum and the Smithsonian Institution were together?"

"Yes."

"But if they are together, why have they got two names?"

"The one is named for a man called Smithson."

"And what's the other one named for?"

"Not for anybody."

* * *

"No."

"Oh." It was a disappointed "Oh." However, Davies, Jr., continued, a trifle more hopefully: "I suppose they're splendidly stuffed, though?"

"Splendidly."

"So it's one of those Washington places you were telling me about where everybody ought to go sometime or other?"

"Exactly, and often."

"How often have you been there, father?"

"Well, the fact is—— Why, here we are!" cried the relieved Davies, Sr. Of course, the taxi driver hadn't change for a dollar. "Junior, lend me a quarter, will you?"

Junior unbuttoned the belt of his raincoat. Then he unbuttoned his raincoat. Then he unbuttoned his jacket. Then he dug into its breast pocket and took out the comic supplement of last Sunday's Post, a pencil stub and the secret archives of a piratical society.

"Hold these a minute, will you, father?"

Davies, Sr., held them.

Davies, Jr., excavated his purse. He unhooked it. He poured its contents into his left palm, counted the contents—spilled the contents. After he, his father and the taxi driver had picked up the contents and Davies, Jr., had recounted it, Davies, Jr., slowly handed a quarter to his father.

"That," said Davies, Jr., "makes 53 cents you owe me. There was that other taxicab, day before yesterday, and the newspaper on Tuesday morning. Have they got any dinosaurs in this museum?"

So they walked a mile and a half across lots to find the building which, a policeman ultimately assured them, housed that prehistoric creature.

* * *

"Junior," said Senior as he covertly consulted a label while they hurried toward the dinosaur room, "these carvings here were made by the Aztecs. The Aztecs were a highly civilized race of doubtful origin, who——"

"But what I want to see is a dinosaur!"

"The dinosaur will wait. He's been waiting for several million years."

"But I want to see him, father . . ."

"There, Junior, on your right, is a giant squid."

"You won't forget about that 53 cents, will you, father?" . . .

"Anyhow, here we are at last, my son." Davies, Sr., was weary when he paused before a gigantic skeleton, but he waved an instructive arm. "Now are you satisfied? There's your dinosaur!"

"It is a dinosaur."

"I'm 'most sure it's a mastodon."

"Don't contradict your father, Junior. I am older than you; I guess I ought to know a dinosaur when I see one."

"This label says 'Mastodon.'"

"What? Then some mischief-maker's been shifting the labels."

"Anyway, I just now heard that guide over there tell those people it was a mastodon."

"Well, he's—he's wrong. At least, he's inexact. 'Mastodon' is the generic and popular name for all prehistoric animals. The scientific name for this species is 'dinosaur.' Now you've seen it. Let's get along."

"All right, father. But it does look lots like the pictures of mastodon skeletons to me. And, father, isn't there somewhere here where you can get change for that dollar before we take a taxi?"

Greatness or What!

IT OUGHT to suffice for even a big vanity that there is quite a discussion in Gen. Johnson's wake as to whether he is a great man or not. The very fact that there are some who contend the man is great and others to hotly deny it proves that he certainly left his impress upon us. And there is this point in favor of the argument that he is great: The saying is that all great men have great weaknesses. The general certainly had his. His intemperance of speech was probably the straw that broke the camel's back when his opponents got to gunning for him.

BARGERON

Yet I think it is one of the ironies of public life that the final onslaught in his case should have come from organized labor. The unions had to squall, of course. The textile workers were in a death grapple and all organized labor had thrown its strength behind them. In spite of what the leaders may say, the strike was not going to suit them. Industry seemed determined to fight to the last ditch and the history of strikes is that when industry takes this firm attitude the strikers do not win. Neither side wins for that matter, but particularly the strikers do not win.

With the unions' back thus against the wall, the statement of the general intimating they were in the wrong naturally enraged them. You could hear them scream a mile.

But now that it is all over and the general has gone, labor organizations should, in my opinion, send him a handsomely engraved testimonial expressing their appreciation of just what he did for them. They won't do it, of course, because so many of the leaders were caught napping and did not take advantage of the opportunity Johnson gave them.

This does not deny the fact that Johnson gave them the greatest opportunity they have ever had.

• • • •

It was there at the beginning of the NRA Johnson recognized the fact that industry was to be organized as never before. He insisted that labor should have the same right, and for months and months counseled the labor leaders to get out and organize the workers. If one will but look back to those early months of the NRA, in fact, he will recall that the whole emphasis was on labor, on the right of labor to organize. The picture of the NRA at that time, in fact, was two huge organizations, one of business and industry, on the one hand, and of labor on the other. So clearly was this picture drawn that there was considerable profound discussion as to whether the labor set-up should be by industry instead of by craft.

Of course, the Administration emphasis was, and for that matter still is, on labor. But it was Johnson who was doing the talking, who was creating the atmosphere for unionization of the country. It was not his fault that the labor leaders were unequal to the task.

Some of them moved quickly, notably John L. Lewis, of the miners. Lewis has his organization, as a result, back to where it was in 1922, after it had seemed that its disintegration was complete. Other leaders simply did not grasp the situation. By the time they moved they found many of the industries had organized company unions and were prepared to resist the federation with every ounce of their strength.

Johnson subsequently became less insistent in his support of unionization, too. I suppose he wearied of the struggle. His experience with the automobile and steel industries was enough to wear a man down.

This later phase of his administration of the NRA does not alter the fact, however, that at the outset, in the days of the great transition, so to speak, he lent himself fully to the sales talk of the organizers—that the workers really had to join a federation union to enjoy the wage increases that were being passed out.

Community Chest Plan Explained by Cogger

The work of the Community Chest was explained by William Cogger, a newspaper man and attorney, at a meeting last night at the Community Chest's "speech clinic" at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Other speakers were W. N. Freeman and Ray H. Everett.

An appeal for more speakers was made. At least 100 trained speakers will be needed for the annual campaign for funds, it was announced.

Ship Tragedies Laid To Sailors' Chivalry

'Passengers Must Not Know,' Is Motto of Sea; French, Recalling Fire Disasters, Build Huge Liner to Be Fool-and-Flame-Proof.

By Andre Vulliet
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Paris.

THE rapid spreading of fire on modern ships is not due to inadequate equipment, but to a lack of decision, usually caused by the observance of the principle—a motto for all shipping companies in the world—that passengers must not be alarmed until the last moment.

Such was one of the main points stressed by Gen. Pouderoux, head of the Paris Fire Department, and a member of the committee appointed to investigate the loss of the French ship Georges Philippar, the burning of which was in many respects similar to that of the Morro Castle tragedy.

The 17,000-ton Georges Philippar, the newest French ship on the Far East Line, on her return trip from Japan, was caught by a fire at 2 a. m. on May 16, 1932, 20 miles off Cape Guardafui on the African coast, just before entering the Red Sea. Half an hour later, the whole ship was ablaze and 40 persons out of 780 on board perished in the flames. Three days later, on May 19, she sank.

Because of the quick spread of the fire that seemed to have started in different points at the same time, many believed the disaster was of incendiary origin. Gen. Pouderoux made short shrift of such allegations.

He traced the cause back to a short circuit in a de luxe cabin.

"It is a fact," he said, "that in new electrical equipment, however carefully installed, the heating of certain sections is inevitable."

The heating of electric wires, often running for hundreds of feet under wood panels, accounted for the rapid spreading of the blaze, Gen. Pouderoux explained. Among other reasons for the disaster, he stressed:

(a) The conductibility of steel partitions which become hot rapidly all along the boat and caused their wood coverings to reach high temperatures.

(b) The inflammability of wood panels, paints and varnishes used for decorative purposes.

(c) The improper insulation of elevator and stair cases.

By laying particular emphasis on the purely human causes of the Georges Philippar's accident, Gen. Pouderoux pointed out those mistakes which, despite all modern installations, seem to make the safety of ships dependent mostly on the ability of their crews and officers. Pouderoux criticized:

(a) The delay in sounding the alarm.

(b) The confusion on the bridge.

(c) The improper organization of the crew, one part of which should have been exclusively devoted to looking after the passengers while the other coped with the fire.

(d) The closing of the safety doors, which cut some passengers from escape.

(e) Letting the ship turn in the wind, so that the smoke and flames were carried from stem to stern and from port side to starboard.

(f) The fact that the ventilation system was let function for 25 minutes after the fire had started, thus acting like bellows and blowing smoke and hot inflammable gas into every cabin.

THE Normandie, the largest ship afloat, now near completion at St. Nazaire, France, although not an all-steel craft, will have the most elaborate fire equipment ever devised.

Despite the numerous disasters of recent years, those of the Meunchen, Georges Philippar, Atlantique and the Morro Castle, where wood has proved so instrumental in the spread of fire, the Normandie still will have much of woodwork. But it will be fireproof.

"Such refined decoration as passengers are now used to and as competition compels us to give them," it was stated at the French Line, "is only possible with the use of wood."

"Every precaution will be taken," it was emphasized, "to make the woodwork, curtains and rugs as fireproof as possible by ignifugation. Lacquer tables, for instance, especially designed for the smoking room by one of the foremost French decorators, although art pieces, can not burn. They turn into ashes, but do not make any flame."

Partition walls, whenever covered with wood, will include a layer of asbestos.

The length of the Normandie will be divided in 13 water-tight, fireproof compartments. The electric units will be so installed that each will be independent. This, it is believed, will prevent a fire from spreading the length of the ship along electric wires.

As soon as any one compartment is in danger, its electric current will be cut off and replaced by oil lamps.

As in a theater, the large rooms of the liner, halls, parlors, dining rooms and the like, will be cut off from the rest of the ship by steel and asbestos curtains.

The detection of fires has been studied carefully. Here again, the boat will be divided in two sections, one in the front, one in the back, each with a complete detection and alarm system. Fire alarm posts will be scattered all over the boat and the alarm given to the central fire departments.

• • • •

SINCE the loss of the Georges Philippar, French boats must now have a regular fire department. It consists of a group of regular firemen, under the command of a specialized officer, all of them trained at the Paris Fire Department. Every hour, day and night, one of them starts from the bridge for a thorough inspection of the ship.

These firemen have their own living quarters. A group of them is always on duty. They can not be asked to do anything else. The Normandie will have two such organizations.

If, despite all these precautions, the situation gets bad, the passengers will have at least the satisfaction of knowing that the world is told about it. They will have six radio cabins to call for help.

One will be for long-wave radio, the other for short waves. Two cabins will be reserved for transatlantic telephone. The captain will have at hand, on the bridge, an emergency radio cabin with a range of 1,000 miles, not to mention a sort of super-emergency 300-mile range radio set that will work even though all the electric equipment on board gives out.

All together, the Normandie's radio cabins will use seven different antennae. Their protection from the fire will be greatly increased by the fact that they will be located separately on the upper decks. All of them, it is believed, could not possibly burn together.

The 75,000-ton giant liner, 1,000 feet long, is scheduled to make her maiden trip to New York next May.

Adjustment to World Brings Good Living

By Robert Quillen.

Neither the believer nor the unbeliever is wholly responsible for his attitude. Each is born with a certain type of mind, and neither learning nor experience can change it.

One is by nature disposed to doubt the supernatural; the other by nature is disposed to believe it.

If you have one type of mind, you can be wholly satisfied with the assumption that all things in existence were developed by the accidental combination of natural forces.

You can attribute all mysteries to "natural laws," and not even ask who made the laws. In short, you can believe that the universe "just happened."

If you have the other type of mind, you can not accept any theory of creation that denies the existence of order.

You believe—and you can not escape the belief—that some power planned the course of the stars and the arrangement of cells in a blade of grass.

To your mind it seems impossible that "natural laws" could exist without some power to conceive and enforce them. It seems impossible that the sun should hang in space without some power to keep it there. It seems impossible that certain chemicals in accidental combination should develop, without intelligent control, into anything as intricate and marvelous as the human brain.

You "know" there is order in the universe.

But there are millions, neither believers nor unbelievers by nature, who are troubled by their uncertainty and eager to learn the truth.

They can not compel themselves to believe, but they can ask themselves one question and find the answer sufficient.

Is there order in the universe?

If not, nothing matters except survival.

If there is order, there must be a power that maintains it.

If there is such a power, so omnipotent and so wise (call it what you will), then discretion, common sense and duty urge cooperation with it. Nothing in life could be more important.

And all must be well with those who do their best, within their natural limitations, to adjust themselves to the will of the director of the universe.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Down to the Sea.

"CUSTOMS," once wrote Disraeli, "may not be as wise as laws, but they are always more popular." England's great prime minister didn't mean that the way I am going to take it, when I say that a large and avid audience waits for this spanking big book chock full of the lore of navies—"Naval Customs, Tradition and Usage," by Lieut. Commander Leland P. Lovette, U. S. N. (U. S. Naval Institute, Annapolis, $3.75.)

THEO. HALL.

You don't have to be on the Navy list to enjoy it. For this "lucky bag," brimming with fact and anecdote about the sea, will hold the interest of anyone who has ever read Marryat, or heard of John Paul Jones, or even seen a man-of-war. Which, as you can see, leaves out scarcely anybody.

Commander Lovette tells about ships' bells and broadside salutes, side boys and church pennants, grog and the cat-o'-nine-tails, ward-room manners and burials at sea. You will find out how to respond to a toast to the King of England, and how to act when Davy Jones comes over the side and you are initiated into the "Ancient Order of the Deep"—the traditional ceremony of "crossing the line." Here also are little-known tales of our Navy—what John Paul Jones said to the captian of the Serapis when he handed back the latter's sword; how the son of President Tyler's Secretary of War was hanged at sea for attempted mutiny; how Admiral Beatty led the cheering of his British tars when the first American battleships joined the Grand Fleet during the last war.

• • • •

Take such a simple matter as port and starboard. Starboard comes from "steerboard" and that is the right side simply because the old Vikings put out their steering oar on the right. Such is the force of tradition. Larboard, the old name for port, was the "load board" of the ship. The British navy chose the word "port" to avoid confusion (followed by our Navy in 1846), taking it from the orders of the Portugese pilots on the Tagus River.

In most navies starboard is the "honor side." But the Portguese navy honors the port—because Vasco da Gama held Africa to the port when he doubled the Cape of Good Hope for the first time.

Any housewife, when she is looking at an apartment which she thinks too small, will say there isn't room enough "to swing a cat." This phrase had nothing to do with a yowling tabby, but meant room enough to swing the lash or cat-'o-nine-tails over the head. Dozens of other sea phrases are tracked down.

• • • •

And here, as well as all these little facts about naval usage, is stressed the proud tradition of our Navy. You may not know that "no U. S. man-of-war has ever mutinied or been in the hands of mutineers, while in other navies whole squadrons and fleets have mutinied—the Marine Corps has never experienced a mutiny of any description—the U. S. Navy is the only navy in the world that has in its possession a British royal standard taken by capture—the U. S. Navy has had but four fleet actions, but in every one it captured and destroyed every enemy ship."

No other book can make so clear what it means to be "a gentleman and an officer."

• • • •

William McFee collects his nautical essays of the last ten years in "More Harbours of Memory" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50). They are best when they talk of engine-room matters—the breaking of a propeller shaft on the T. S. S. Tahiti in 1930, or how the introduction of oil changed "the hairy ape," the man in the stokehold. They go, I think, a bit lush when he takes up the poetic aspects of the sea. But he does that seldom.

Mostly, he tells enthralling stories of strange captains and mysterious derelicts, of old ships which went to war and of the moods of a triple-expansion engine. England, America and Mexico are described by sea-going eyes. And he takes, in his preface, a marvelous bang-away at the parlor intellectuals who prate of the "age of machinery" and don't even know how to remove a sparkplug. Nothing exceeds the scorn of this one-time ship's engineer.

I don't know how you feel, but no one, not even John Russell (son of our own Charles Edward Russell who lives on I street), gives me such an itch for the South Seas as James Norman Hall. It isn't so much his writing novels about the H. M. S. Bounty with Charles Nordhoff—it's the kind of life he seems to be having in Tahiti while doing it.

Last year he set sail in a little boat for Pitcairn Island, where descendants of the Bounty mutineers still live. He had a pleasant voyage out, with the Med-to-Mum volume of the encyclopedia for company. He spent two amazing days on the island, and on the way back the Pro Patria struck a coral reef.

Nothing world-shaking, of course. But Mr. Hall (no relation, I'm sorry to say), tells about it all with an utterly contagious sense of aliveness, with such decorous gusto that you'd believe no one ever had such a fine time as he down there in the great South Sea.

I wouldn't trade my copy of "The Tale of a Shipwreck" (Houghton Mifflin, $2.50) for anything less than a passage to Tahiti and Mataval Bay.

RECOVERY

The battle is on! The big guns are trained! The opening shots are now being fired! HARPERS

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

Song to the Late Sir Thomas Lipton.

Oh, Sir Thomas, did you mourn it
From the sailors' paradise
When the wondrous ship Endeavour
Failed to lift the cherished prize?
In the sailorman's Valhalla
Could you look back through the mist
And behold the fleet Endeavour
Nearly make the winner's list?

II.

Were you watching Tommy Sopwith
When he made the ocean trip?
Was your spirit over Gosport
When they shaped the graceful ship?
Did you hover o'er the builders
To direct them as they strove—
Were you there among the aftguard
When she came to Brenton Cove?

III.

Did you see her first two races
As she left the foe behind?
Were you there upon the afideck
As a sailor unassigned?
Did you sense the struggle ending
After long and dreary years?
Was your voice among the voices
Recognized among the cheers?

IV.

When she first sailed forth to battle
With her white wings far from snug
Did you feel as did so many
That she'd lift the cherished mug?
Did you shout as she went skimming
Through the foaming, seething blue?
Did you toss your hat in Heaven
When the gallant ship came through?

V.

Could you feel the shrouds aquiver
And the topsails strain and shake?
Did you sense her lee rail under
As she gave the foe her wake?
Did you see her take the lead from
Swanlike Rainbow at the start?
Were you there each time she faltered,
Giving ev'ry sailor heart?

VI.

When she scudded through the whitecaps
Was yours once again the joy
That you knew on sailing vessels
As a man and as a boy?
Could you hear the curlews calling?
Did you note the gulls in flight?
Did you touch the hand of Sopwith
As he sailed with all his might?

VII.

Ah, Sir Thomas, you can't fool us—
You were there aboard the ship
With a smile for all the sailors
And a blessing on your lip!
There is darkest gloom in Gosport,
And where British sailors roam,
But we hear your fine voice booming,
"Well, we nearly took it home!"

Nautically Speaking.

Gen. Johnson has taken in his quadrilateral jib and resigned as skipper of the Blue Eagle.

The general is going away so the country can get a rest.

Well, he had his faults, but nobody can say he was a pussyfooter.

To Gen. Johnson.

When the outlook was the darkest
And the terror ruled the land—
When the battle was the hottest
You were there to give a hand.

When the Nation's knees were shaking
And the people seemed to flinch
It was you who gave the war cry
And who wouldn't yield an inch.

You were noisy and dramatic
And not easy on the ears,
But you didn't yield to panic
And you stemmed the public's fears.

So, a toast to you, old scrapper,
Roughneck fighter bold and firm—
For you called 'em as you saw 'em
And you didn't crawl or squirm!

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Today.

Nearly all great teachers and prophets and writers of moral force have told us that it is always foolish and often tragic to neglect today. Of all the poems Emerson wrote, this was his favorite:

Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days,
Muffled and dumb, like barefoot dervishes,
And marching single in an endless file,
Bring diadems and fagots in their hands.
To each they offer gifts after his will,
Bread, kingdoms, stars and sky that holds them all.
I, in my pleached garden, watched the pomp,
Forgot my morning wishes, hastily
Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
Turned and departed silent, I, too, late,
Under her solemn fillet saw the scorn.

It is like Emerson to teach others by the method of confessing his own faults and lost opportunities. He meant, of course, that every day was sacred, every day was an opportunity. We may spend it trivially and miss a kingdom. And every day is Judgment Day.

Emerson's famous contemporary, Thomas Carlyle, said much the same thing:

Here hath been dawning
Another blue day;
Think, will thou let it
Slip useless away?

Carlyle also said: "It is one of the illusions that the present hour is not the critical, decisive hour. Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows and feels that every day is doomsday."

The great Latin writer Martial said: "The Wise lived yesterday."

Republicans In Maryland Back New Deal

Nice, Formally Chosen as Party's Candidate, Raps Ritchie.

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Maryland Republican convention late today adopted a platform containing the claim that its candidates for State office would cooperate with President Roosevelt's recovery program more closely than has the Democratic nominee for re-election, Gov. Ritchie.

The action leaves both major parties in the State pledged to support the New Deal. Last week the Democrats adopted a platform praising the President's emergency efforts and pledging themselves to follow him.

The Republicans were harshly critical of the Democratic party's record in the State during the 15 years of the four Ritchie administrations.

Harry W. Nice, formally chosen the Republican nominee for Governor, condemned many actions of recent years and stressed what he called the State government's careless supervision of banks.

"The loss of these savings (of Maryland depositors) was not due to any lack of honesty on the part of those in control of many properly conducted banks of this State, but almost entirely to the mismanagement of those banks which have become known as political banks," he asserted.

"The management of these so-called political banks was discreditable in the extreme, and many thousands of their depositors were lulled into a false sense of security by the failure of the present administration to exercise, through its State banking department, the supervision required by law.

"The facts are such that we can not avoid the conclusion that the Governor knew, or should have known, their unsound condition. * * * The bank holiday declared by the Governor was largely for the benefit of these political banks."

Nice promised that if elected he would launch an investigation of the past banking situation, not only to improve the State's banking laws but also to "disclose the responsibility" for the failures of the past.

Acting, as required by law, on the vote of the recent primary election, the convention nominated Nice for Governor, former Senator Joseph I. France for the United States Senate, George Henderson for attorney general, Frederic P. Adkins for State comptroller, and Walter E. Quenstedt for clerk of the court of appeals. The speeches of nomination and the seconds required the major part of the afternoon.

Lawson State Chairman.

William P. Lawson, the choice of Nice, was named State chairman of the party to replace Galen Tait, who has led the Maryland Republican party for the past 20 years.

In his talk immediately after the opening of the convention Tait made it clear that he was retiring "involuntarily" and only because Nice insisted on "dropping the present pilot and taking on another."

"But," declared Tait, "there will be no embarrassment or division in the party as far as I am concerned."

Both the party platform and Nice, in his acceptance speech, asked Democrats to join with the Maryland minority party to defeat the "Ritchie machine."

"I shall be the next Governor of Maryland because the people have determined upon a change," said Nice. "The Republican party wages no war against the Democratic party. We need and must have the support of those Democrats, whose name is legion, desirous of bringing about a new order to dislodge a political machine which has grown up through a period of 15 years."

The platform censured what it labeled "the failure and unwillingness of Gov. Ritchie to cooperate with the President in his efforts to provide relief and aid recovery." It added:

"While we do not agree with some of the policies of the Federal Administration, believing that in many instances they represent a philosophy which is incompatible with American institutions and traditions, we feel that during this crucial period of distress no obstacles should be interposed by us to prevent, so far as is consistent with American institutions, the people of Maryland receiving the same benefits as have been received by other States. No satisfactory reason can be given why Maryland should not receive the same bounty extended to other parts of the country.

"We, therefore, await with patience and hope the result of the policies of the President to bring about National recovery and which we hope will afford relief to stricken people and avert further economic ruin. The failure and unwillingness of Gov. Ritchie to cooperate with the President in his efforts to provide relief and aid recovery have been apparent from the beginning of President Roosevelt's Administration and have frequently received adverse comments from the press."

No Wadin'

Rock Creek Is Polluted; Swimming Banned, Too.

Because Rock Creek is dangerously polluted by sewage, its waters were ordered banned yesterday to bathers and waders. Action followed a bacteriological report to C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, by the United States Public Health Service.

To samples of water were tested, one taken from the creek at Piney Branch and the othre at Pierce Mill.

"Due to the pollution of Rock Creek," said the health service report, "we would recommend that wading be prohibited in the creek." Accordingly, Finnan notified Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, park police, to halt the practice.

principal payments, will support the mortgage.

Fourth, to assist in the preservation and reorganization of distressed properties for the protection of mortgage bonds or certificates, including second mortgages and equities where the holder has a real chance of saving his property.

Looks to Private Enterprise.

Mr. Jones said he had no idea how much his organization would be called upon to provide, but that he did not expect it to run into many millions. Private enterprise should supply most of the money, he said, the RFC merely "priming the pump."

Mr. Jones, in his statement, said that "many mortgages that can be made by such trust companies can be insured by the mutual mortgage insurance fund * * * and to that extent will complement the activities of the Federal Housing Administration."

On the other hand, he continued, there are many kinds of property, such as apartment houses of over $18,000 value, office buildings, hotels and factories, which can not be insured by the Housing Administration, although "mortgages can be made upon them on a perfectly sound basis." Among those in this category he mentioned the Mayflower Hotel.

"It is the desire of President Roosevelt and the directors of the RFC, in this further way," Mr. Jones stated, "to assist business temporarily by providing mortgage money where it can be done on a sound basis and without cost to the taxpayer."

Dividends Permitted.

The trust companies in which the RFC proposes to buy preferred stock or capital notes will be permitted to pay, if earned, the same dividend on common stock as on the preferred securties, which will be 4 per cent—the same rate as now being charged to banks.

Under the plan, Mr. Jones further explained, one-half of the remaining net earnings, after necessary reserves have been set up, will be used to retire the preferred stock or capital notes, while the other half will be added to surplus and reserves.

"We would naturally expect them to charge a fair interest rate," he said in reply to questions. "Oh, not over 6; in most cases 5; in some cases maybe 4½ per cent."

Direct incentive for the proposal came, it is understood, from New York City, where, Mr. Jones said, Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, is endeavoring to set up a $10,000,000 mortgage trust company.

"Our Nation's greatest single asset is real estate," the RFC chairman said, "and just because a few big centers were overbuilt and many of the buildings improvidently financed, is no reason why real estate, or real estate securities, should be forever condemned."

Meantime, Secretary Morgenthau said that the report of Dr. Jacob Viner, Treasury adviser who is studying the strictness of bank examiners, will be made next week. President Roosevelt himself raised the question if the rigid restrictions of bank examiners was not stemming the flow of credit unnecessarily.

Private Capital Aids PWA by Buying Bonds

The PWA saw signs yesterday that private capital is beginning to give Uncle Sam a lift with the burden of financing recovery, the Associated Press said.

Records of the Public Works Administration showed that more than $45,000,000 worth of Public Works bonds have been bought by private investors.

Officials said that, with increasing frequency, private buyers are offering lower interest rates for the bonds than the 4 per cent of the PWA.

The officials interpreted this as a sign of loosening credit, and a feeling by private purchasers that security behind public works developments is sound.

Cabinet Shift Tale Is Spiked By Roosevelt

tended in person all of the sessions of the conference on current problems because of the wide field of human endeavor which it has covered and because of the distinguished group of speakers to whom you have listened. The world as a whole is making progress in meeting current problems, because the world as a whole realizes that the problems are new, and as such must be met with new answers.

"If you were to ask me, I would tell you frankly that the greatest achievement of the past two years in the United States has been the fact that the American people have taken, and are taking, a greater interest in, and have acquired a better understanding of, current problems affecting their welfare and the world's welfare than at any time at least during the present generation. That is a very heartening thought to all of us who believe in the republican form of government as carried into effect by majority rule.

"In every walk of life, in every part of the country, it has become a normal and an interesting thing when two or more persons are gathered together for them to talk over methods of improving the economic and social lot of our citizenry.

"More and more people are doing their own thinking. The number of poll-parrots in our midst is steadily declining—for which we must be very thankful. More and more men and women are looking up their own facts and forming their own opinions.

"We are learning to discriminate between news and rumor. As a people we put our tongues in our cheeks when a fact or a series of facts are distorted, no matter what motive is the cause of that distortion.

Small Attention to Tales.

"We as a people are less inclined to believe those who would create fear or encourage panic. We as a people pay small attention to those gossip mongers who invent tales, generally with a selfish objective behind the tales.

"You and I as sensible Americans know of daily instances which mar rather than help our efforts for calm discussion of current problems. Just for example, I cite one which occurred this very day. A rumor which started in Wall street, spread to Chicago, and came back to Washington for verification. The rumor was the immediate retirement of three members of my Cabinet—the Secretary of Agriculture and his Undersecretary, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury. It even went to the extent of announcing the name of a new Secretary of the Treasury.

"The origin of the report comes from what is politely called 'an anonymous source.' I urge that every one of you consider and analyze the source and motive back of every report you read.

"Fortunately the overwhelming mass of American people pay no more attention to this kind of rumor than I do. Today's story happens to be wholly untrue.

"It is with a very definite sense of gratification and thanks that I will tell you of my conviction that our people have both feet on the ground, that they are increasingly interested in the truth and increasingly interested in arriving at sound conclusions regarding our National progress in meeting current problems.

"For that reason I am glad to have this opportunity of sending my greetings to a gathering of intelligent men and women who know how to discriminate in making up their minds about the current problems of American life."

Chiefs Lauded By Roosevelt On Crime Drive

Convention Is Addressed by President Over Wire System.

No undertaking is more vital to the welfare of society at this time than the prevention and detection of crime, President Roosevelt said in a brief message to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, holding the final session of its convention in the Mayflower Hotel last night.

The message, delivered over the telephone to a hook-up of amplifiers in the hotel, commended the organization for "the cooperation which it is furnishing in the great movement which the agencies of government—National, State and local—are now organizing against the forces of crime."

"The social order can not exist," said the President, "except upon the basis of a respect for and observance of the law, and it is only when the people of a country are secure in their homes and in the normal activities of their lives from the depredations of the criminal classes that National progress can be maintained.

"This respect for law and this security are possible only when the administration of justice is entrusted to wise, upright, patriotic and courageous officials.

"It is of great importance that the International Association of Chiefs of Police shall press forward its vigorous efforts directed toward the elevation of the standards of police institutions and officials. Permit me, therefore, to wish you success in your great work."

The President's address climaxed the final day of the convention which saw Peter J. Siccardi, known as the "flying cop," elected president of the association in the last business session.

Siccardi, who heads the police force of Bergen County, N. J., was chosen by acclamation. In his speech of acceptance he announced that he would open a headquarters in Washington for the I. A. C. P.

Siccardi, so far as is known, was the first police chief to use an airplane to hunt criminals.

Maj. Brown Gets Office.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the District of Columbia police force, was elected sixth vice president of the association. Others elected are as follows:

Andrew J. Kavanaugh, Rochester, N. Y., first vice president; Leon V. Jenkins, Portland, Oreg., second vice president; George Reyer, New Orleans, third vice president; William J. Quinn, San Francisco, fourth vice president; R. B. Jordan, Richmond, Va., fifth vice president; George Black, Wilmington, Del., secretary; Edawrd J. Singleton, Watertown, N. Y., treasurer, and William M. Peterson, Winnetka, Ill., sergeant at arms, and Dr. Carleton Simon, of New York, criminologist.

In a resolution adopted at the final session, the association provided for the appointment of a committee of three to confer with motion picture executives to the end that the screen be used to encourage respect for law and order.

Another resolution recommended that all nations require applicants for passports to be fingerprinted. This was aimed at criminals who travel from country to country using forged passports. Col. McNeil Watts, of the American Express Co., told of 20 cases where international crooks had used the same passport.

President Roosevelt, Attorney General Cummings, and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice, were highly praised for their efforts to stamp out crime.

Approximately 800 chiefs, their wives and guests attended the evening banquet which closed the convention last night.

Among the entertainers were Will Rogers, Pat Rooney, Dick Powell, George O'Connor, Matt Horne and other acts from local theaters.

Albert J. Sardo, chairman of the citizens' committee in charge of arrangements for the convention, presented a radio to the new president, Chief Siccardi, in compliment to his work in adapting the radio for use in police work.

Earlier, Capt. Richard Mansfield, of the District police, in charge of the publicity for the convention, was made an honorary member of the association.

British Heiress To Quit London, Live on Island

London, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The simple life on a West Indies isle is the choice of Marion B. (Betty) Carstairs, noted international motorboat racer, who announced tonight she was renouncing civilization.

The pretty young heiress, twice a challenger for the Harmsworth motorboat trophy, said she has purchased Whale Cay Island in the Bahamas, and will sail Saturday to take possession.

Despite the fact that her income is reported to be about $5,000 weekly, Miss Carstairs said that she "can not afford to live in Great Britain any longer on account of high taxation and the cost of living."

Acts Acclaimed As League Ends 15th Assembly

Afghanistan Admitted as Member; Soviets' Entry Session Feature.

Geneva, Sept. 27 (AP).—The fifteenth assembly of the League of Nations came to an end today, its proudest accomplishment the induction of Soviet Russia into membership.

With Afghanistan, admitted at today's session, Russia helped offset the loss the league suffered when Germany and Japan withdrew, and the new blood infused into the organization moved President Richard Sandler, in his closing address, to say:

"The league reveals to us, in the aims it seeks to achieve, the grandeur and the loftiness of life."

Activity of Day.

A burst of activity as the slightly more than two weeks of deliberations drew to an end saw tall, smiling Ali Mohammed, the Afghanistan delegate, take his seat; the Aga Khan, of India hail the reawakening of central Asia; the Russian delegate, Maxim Litvinoff, press for permanent organisms of peace, and the assembly itself, in its final action, institute the long-discussed committee to seek an end to the sanguinary Chaco war.

Meanwhile, the League Council heard Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, say France will rigidly observe the conditions of the Saar plebiscite (to be held January 13 to determine whether the Saar shall be ruled by the league, France or Germany), but will "make sure they are carried out by others."

France figured in another significant event of the league's closing moments as she, with Great Britain and Italy, signed an accord reaffirming the necessity of maintaining the independence of strife-torn Austria.

Sandler remarked further that the assembly failed to examine "the grave problem of the steady increase of armaments."

The aga khan, in stressing western Asia's new determination to take an active part in world affairs, said the league "has been too Occidental, too representative of one race and one creed."

Attacks on Japan for her alleged dumping and low standards of working conditions came during sessions of the international labor organization.

Dutch and French labor leaders asserted low wages and inferior conditions of labor were harmful to the interests of Japanese workers and workers in other countries. The Japanese delegate defended his nation.

Efforts to get the proposed work of conciliating the Chaco Boreal belligerents under way came to naught again as the Latin-American group in the league failed to agree on the presidency of the conciliation commission.

Veterans Split Into 3 Camps On Bonus Issue

V. F. W. Demand for Payment of Cash at Once Meets Opposition.

By Robert C. Albright.

Organized veterans were split three ways on the perennial bonus issue last night, as legislative programs took shape on the eve of Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion conventions.

Throwing off the restraint that holds in check two other major veterans' groups, spokesmen for the Veterans of Foreign Wars flatly announced for immediate cash payment of $2,200,000,000 in adjusted service certificates.

Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, will cast the opening bombshell in the movement Monday at the National convention of the V. F. W. in Louisville, Ky., it was learned last night. The organization plans to follow this up with bonus resolutions.

Next month the Texas Representative will attempt to inject the issue in the American Legion's conclave at Miami, but legislative leaders of the legion, who successfully steered the bonus out of last year's program, insist he can't get to first base.

Fearful of Losing Benefits.

Both legionnaires and the Disabled American Veterans are fearful lest the Administration attempt to reverse benefits won last spring over the President's veto. They are shaping their program to hold what they've got, and bonus cash payment is not in the picture.

Meanwhile, the White House was silent. The President plans to say nothing on the veterans' issue until October 10, when he dedicates a new veterans' hospital at Roanoke. At that time there are those who believe he will say plenty, with a weather eye to the legion convention two weeks ahead.

Taking their cue from administrative trends last session, the Disabled American Veterans already are on record for "militant defense of equitable relief of those today handicapped by disabilities of war origin."

"We refused to include on our program any action looking toward agitation of the so-called cash bonus at this time," explained Volney P. Mooney, jr., National commander of the D. A. V.

While no class of veterans could use such money to a greater advantage than the war's disabled, we realize that such legislation in these times is most improbable and we desire to have no part in building up false hopes in the minds of those whose burden at this time is heavy enough."

Refuse to Concede Issue Dead.

Washington representatives of the Veterans of Foreign Wars refuse to concede the bonus a dead issue. They point to the House stampede to pass the measure last session, and claim they had 51 votes "promised" in the Senate when Congress adjourned.

Representative Patman, who will keynote their bonus sentiment in an address to be broadcast from St. Louis Monday, also is delegate to the legion convention October 22. He has slightly altered his last version of the cash bonus bill, providing a clause that he declares "will guard against inflation."

"I prefer the inflation features," said Representative Patman. "I think they would accomplish what the Administration is trying to do to keep money circulating. But if that is rejected I propose an alternative clause directing the Treasury to withdraw $2,200,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes now in the banks. The new bonus money would just offset that."

Doubt Issue Will Reach Floor.

Only 5 of the 48 American Legion departments are on record in favor of the bonus, legion executives said here yesterday. They expressed doubt the issue will come to the floor in Miami, even if the assertive Texan should make a fight.

The only bonus recommendations likely to result from the Miami convention, they insist, will be resolutions asking cancellation of interest veterans owe the Government for money loaned on service certificates.

Well up on the legion's probable program, however, is a universal draft law that would "equalize the economic and physical burden upon all the people" in time of war. A similar plank is slated for consideration by the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Louisville next week. Disabled American Veterans already have declared for the plan.

One controversial proposal the V. F. W. is sponsoring, and the other groups are not, calls for a uniform pension system, based upon length of service and disability. They argue such a comprehensive plan would reduce the volume of payments and cut the cost of administration 33 per cent.

A uniform system of pensions for widows and orphans of veterans, deportation of Communists, and "adequate" National defense also are slated for approval at Louisville next week.

Senators Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and Arthur Robinson (Republican), of Indiana; Representatives Hamilton Fish, jr. (Democrat), of New York, and Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, will address the V. F. W. at next week's convention.

If you feel low—
don't gamble

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

1 If your physical let-down is evidenced by lack of appetite... loss of weight... nervousness... sleeplessness... paleness... a tired feeling or lassitude caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... though, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

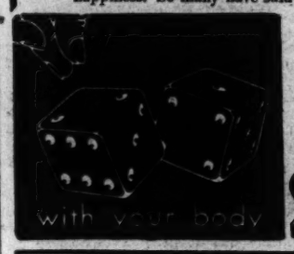

Make S.S.S your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetising food... sound sleep... and renewed strength.

2 Take a course of S.S.S. Remember, your present run-down condition may have been a slow, gradual process. Likewise, a reasonable time is required to rebuild full strength. S.S.S. is not a miracle worker—no rebuilding tonic is—but it is a scientifically proven and time-tested medicine. This is your guarantee of satisfaction. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring.

3 Moreover, S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood. This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilised... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

If your condition suggests a tonic... if you feel low... get a bottle of S.S.S.... take an appetizing portion just before meals. You will find it is truly a blood and body tonic. You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. S.S.S. is really an inexpensive way to better health and more happiness. So many have said— "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again"

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest that you gamble with substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Activities in September Greatest Since 1928, Records Reveal.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Home building activities in Arlington durnig this month equals any month during the building boom in 1928, it was revealed last night by the records in the office of the county manager. The records show a total of 20 permits issued for homes. The total amount represented by these permits is $92,961.

In addition to permits issued for new homes there were 13 permits issued for additions and improvements to existing dwellings amounting to $5,575 making a total of 33 permits issued representing an expenditure of $97,536.

Never in the county's history has there been known such a demand for homes to rent. Reports from all realtors show that there is not a day that there are no inquiries.

Both old and new houses are selling rapidly. In many instances homes under construction are sold before completed.

Miss Payne Class President.

Franklyn Payne, of Clarendon, has the honor of being the first girl to be elected president of the senior class at the Washington-Lee High School. Miss Payne defeated her opponent, Ashton Timmons, by a vote of 100 to 73 in the election held yesterday.

Other officers are Ted Brown, vice president; Dorothy Rynes, secretary; Robert Blake, sergeant-at-arms, and Ruth Smith, delegate to the students association.

Margaret Canady and Ellen Turner tied for treasurer. This will be run off at assembly today.

Legion Post Session.

At a largely attended meeting of Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, held at Clarendon last night, the newly elected officers were installed.

Membership, Noland D. Mitchell; post activities, Stuart Thomson; building, Howard Duckson; monument, Charles Richey; social and and entertainment, Charles Ranger; initiation and degrees, Herbert Hutson; bowling, H. W. Beattie; boxing, Joseph D. McDonnell; baseball and golf, Emery N. Hosmer; publicity, Walter Johnson; public utilities, Albert N. Jones; music, Lincoln Mackey; convention, Patrick R. Burke, and unemployment, George D. Ricker.

The commander also announces that new committees, Sons of the American Legion, service and Boy Scouts will be appointed at an early date.

There will be a special meeting of the executive committee next Wednesday night at the office of Dr. J. A. Boston in Clarendon.

Data on Traffic Hazards.

Appointment of a committee to gather data with which to support a request for the assignment of another traffic officer for protection of the children attending the Patrick Henry School at Arlington was authorized by the Arlington Citizens Association at its meeting last night.

It is pointed out that there is now only one officer stationed at the intersection of Columbia pike and Glebe road, a considerable distance from the school. The association says that there are at least 100 children who have to cross the intersection of Alcova avenue and Glebe road to reach the school without any protection. If the county police force is not sufficient the county board should provide another regardless of the county's finance, it was said.

County Board Session.

The county board will meet today at 10 o'clock to receive and open bids for construction of sections of the county sewerage system.

The Piedmont Chapter has aided 8 families and 28 children during the year by providing food, clothing, drugs, garden seed, housefurnishings and other necessities.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Vienna, Va., has named its president, Mrs. Thomas R. Moreland, and Mrs. W. W. Louk, as delegates to the annual State convention in Lynchburg next month.

A number of committee chairmen were appointed at a meeting last night in the school. They include Mrs. Pearl Mimsey, hospitality; Miss Louise Wine, program and entertainment; C. M. County Will Open Adult Education Classes in Montgomery to Start About Monday.

Adult education classes will start in Montgomery County, Md., about Monday, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, announced yesterday.

Faculty members will be selected following a conference of teachers Tuesday. Glenn H. Van Dorp, State representative in charge of the Federal funds for this work, will attend the meeting.

Reports indicate the most popular classes will be homemaking, reading, writing and spelling, commercial, vocational and music courses and junior college and post-graduate work in physical education. Frank E. Sutch, of Battery Park, will supervise the class work.

Firemen to Offer Prevention Advice

Volunteer firemen of Takoma Park, Md., will endeavor to offer a full week of instruction during fire prevention week, October 7-13, according to Chief Leo B. Moffett.

Addresses will be given by members of the department during assemblies at each of the local schools. Boy and Girl Scout troops will be instructed in prevention of fire and in life saving.

Lack of Water Supply Hampers Efforts of Firemen.

While the Upper Marlboro Volunteer Fire Department stood by, helpless for lack of water, an eight-room frame bungalow, home of J. Alfred Moore, near Clinton, Md., yesterday was destroyed by flames.

The firemen, arriving in the early stages of the fire, sought to draw water from a 40-foot well located in the yard. The well, however, was too deep for the suction apparatus of the fire engine.

Moore said his wife, Edna, his stepmother and his daughter were in the house when the fire was discovered. He was working in the field, several hundred yards away, when he heard their screams, he said.

Neighbors from nearby farms assisted in saving some of the furniture. The loss was placed at approximately $10,000. The fire is believed to have started from defective electric wiring.

While the fire burned, an airplane, attracted by the huge volumes of dense black smoke that could be seen for miles, caused a sensation by dipping perilously over the flames.

Officers Are Chosen By Parent-Teachers

William Brandenburg was elected president of the Germantown (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association at the annual meeting in the Germantown School. Other officers chosen are Eugene H. Waters, vice president; Rebecca Leaman, secretary, and Russell Lenhart, treasurer.

Committee chairmen include Mrs. Eugene Waters, program; W. O. Young, finance, and Mrs. Grace Dorsey, entertainment.

Hotel Planning New Attractions At Alexandria

Additional Facilities to Be in Readiness by November 15.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Charles E. Slagel, manager of the George Mason Hotel, last night announced the forthcoming opening of additional facilities.

He told of the opening, about November 15, of the Lee room, in the basement, extending under practically the entire ground floor, and designed to accommodate 300 diners. In this room will be held convention dinners, dinner dances, and private parties. On the mezzanine floor will be the Virginia room, operated as a night club, from afternoon until midnight, with an orchestra and buffet service. Beer and wines will be served, the Virginia statutes prohibiting the cocktail hour, which has become so popular in Washington.

The George Mason is a local institution, there being approximately 450 Alexandria stockholders. In the few years of its existence it has been the means of bringing many conventions to Alexandria. Mr. Slagel assumed the managerial reins a little more than a year ago.

Night Schools' Enrollment.

The success of the two "opportunity" night schools for adults in Alexandria is assured by the enrollment so far of 320—200 white and 120 colored. The schools will be operated with Federal funds, and will open Monday night, one in Alexandria High School building and the other in the Parker-Gray School. The hours for classes will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. every evening except Saturday, with the usual holidays. Registration will close tonight.

The enrollment for the business courses is already completed. Many are displaying interest in the mechanical drawing and art classes, and several in the course in public speaking.

Forget-Me-Not Sale.

George Washington Chapter, No. 8, Disabled Veterans of the World War, will open its Forget-me-not sale today, "Argonne Day," and continue through tomorrow and Monday. The proceeds of the sale will be used for the aid of widows and orphans, as well as the support of an efficient habilitation service for wartime disabled veterans.

The committee in charge of the flower sale includes Kemp R. Rush, chairman; Thomas Bellenger, of Alexandria; Maj. Monroe H. Blake, of Oak Crest; Mrs. Rose C. O'Hara, Barcroft; Walter Johnson, Falls Church; Mrs. Ruth B. Blinkhorn, Fairfax; Capt. John Devine, Clarendon, and C. C. Cumberland, Ballston. Russian Envoy Will Sail Home For Debt Talk Troyanovsky Hoping to Prevent Collapse of U. S Negotiations.

(Associated Press.)

Hoping to avert a breakdown of Soviet-American debt and claim negotiations, Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet Ambassador, will sail for Moscow October 3 for consultation with foreign office officials on a compromise proposal.

Troyanovsky during a conference with Secretary Hull and Assistant Secretary Moore yesterday informed the State Department officials that to review thoroughly the entire question, give his government a first-hand interpretation of the American position and obtain final instructions, he would go to Moscow on the S. S. Aquitania next week.

To newspapermen, Troyanovsky added that he hoped his Moscow visit would be of short duration and that he would return soon to Washington to continue the negotiations. It will be the Russian envoy's first trip home since his appointment here. Consequently, he will discuss several other questions with foreign office officials.

Troyanovsky's proposed visit, it was said, is a direct result of the State Department's flat refusal to accept Soviet proposals for an agreement, which included the granting of a cash loan and credit facilities to Russia.

In previous discussions, the United States agreed to scale down the American claims for $187,000,000 loaned to the Kerensky provisional government, $86,000,000 in defaulted imperial Russian bonds, and claims for property destroyed or confiscated during and after the Russian revolution.

The Soviet had requested a cash loan of $100,000,000 and an equal amount in credits.

Maryland Club Gardens Open Cabaret Soon

To Be Ready by Halloween; Cariocas Gain Speed at Madrillon.

By Kay Ware.

Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you'll want to be merry all over again.

Washington supplies the background.

The Lotus not only offers a show of five acts, but puts it on three times a day. With this stellar array to take care of, Bill Strickland remarks that it means more work for him and his Capitolians, but he is brightly enthusiastic over his duties just the same.

We've been missing the orchestra's skits lately. Complaints have been noted, and Al Notron is busily filling the void with humor. Al writes the words for the skits and has promised another series soon. He's working on them now, and says he has six completed.

Good luncheons and dinners. Dancing with both.

The owners of Maryland Club Gardens have been all up in the air with excitement. Their heads are whirling with mighty plans, and when they come down to earth they're going to bring a cabaret with them. The cabaret should be completed by the last of October; opening night on Halloween. Exterior will be Spanish, like the bathhouses. Interior very grand and glorious, but, as Mrs. Bowen says, "It's hard to make the inside of a night club typically Spanish."

The layout will have a dance floor in the center and three tiers of tables rising from it. This will enable all patrons to see the floor. A bar to accommodate about 40 persons will be another addition.

Get ready for a surprise on Halloween.

While this is going on, the Terrace is still open. When it rains, everybody comes indoors, gathers around the horse-shoe bar and forgets the weather.

Cariocas are faster and more furious at the Madrillon. The Blake Donaldsons never do it the same way twice. Says Mr. Blake Donaldson, "That carioca music does something to you. I just naturally find myself doing steps I've never done before."

This is the legend:

Spring, in Benares, sacred city of the Ganges. From the city comes the faint tinkle of silver bells on the feet of dancing maidens. It is the festival commemorating the romance of Krishna, the divine young poet-shepherd, and Rhoda, one of the maidens. All her life Krishna had adored the beautiful Rhoda, and now their marriage secures her earthly liberation, so that she, like Krishna, becomes a divinity, free from temptation and earthly desires. Together they sit and rule in the Temple of the All Knowing One.

This story, as told by Ramon, is the basis of a dance by Ramon and Ruth, now featured at the Shoreham. They saw it several times in India, and have brought the spirit of the East to Washington. Their imported Indian costumes are of gold and silver, hung with jewels. One set weighs 40 pounds.

Next Monday, the Shoreham opens indoors, with Bobby Sanford and Revue, numbering 25 entertainers. Second show will be presented by L. Gardner Moore.

October 8 will introduce a fashion show of no mean proportions. Rumors of negligees on display. Rumors of reservations for stag parties. More details later.

Leaves are beginning to turn. One or two trees in the heart of the city have grown orange with age.

One of the loveliest views of Rock Creek Park is from the Million-Dollar Bridge. When the frost has been on the pumpkin and Rock Creek trees as well, take a Sunday afternoon walk across the bridge. Like a swollen river, great waves of color stretch out on both sides of the white arches; greens, yellows, reds mingle and toss with the wind.

As if the Tavern Club wasn't enough, the Willard offers the Washington public another attractive rendezvous. On Saturday the Bamboo room will reopen, trumpets will blow and drums will roll. They're Johnny Slaughter's drums and trumpets, as you might have guessed.

Luncheon, cocktail and dinner hour, and supper dancing from 10 to 1 are on the program.

Rebecca Tarwater and Isham Keith, jr. (Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Car-r-r-lo!), will be there to entertain you on the opening. If you saw the Drunkard, you'll remember them. Whereupon a tear is dropped and a wreath laid on the grave. How we hate to see the "Drunkard" go!

Note: Bamboo plants were brought from the tropics to decorate the room.

Smart young men about town know the tastes of their lady friends. Furthermore, if their lady friends don't have definite tastes, smart young men say, "May I suggest Pierrette?"

Mrs. Downey had a flat tire once, and that is the reason she started the farm, Olney Inn. The tire went phit! just in front of the place, and she liked the location so much she decided to stay.

So will you, but don't depend on a tire. Dinner is a gracious event, food is excellent, flowers are fresh. Mrs. Downey's eye embraces every detail.

Rumors: Lafayette Hotel has another new room up its managerial sleeve . . . Gingham Club is hiring architects and decorators to remodel entire interior . . . Pete Macias is back from Chicago. Has he brought a lot of Heigh-Ho ideas with him?

If you go to the Italian-American restaurant on Eighteenth street, take a week-old appetite with you. You'll be expected to eat antipasto, soup (those wonderful thick Italian varieties), main course, salad, dessert, coffee and a glass of wine. The wine is a necessary part of the meal.

Price for all this is reasonable.

Minnie the Moocher is getting what she deserves. They've been putting her on trial at the Cotton Club, and if you hold a grude against Minnie, you'd better go around and see justice at work.

Everyone who hears the music at the Cotton Club will come away with a tune to whistle, a rhythm to tap and a song to try out on the piano. Entertainment at the club is breezy, novel and always getting somewhere very fast.

Another new place tries its wings. The Earle Tavern, on E street, opens to diners and dancers.

Additional shows—La Paree and its 15 "Sweethearts on Parade" . . . Club Michel, with Bobby Gillette and other stars . . . Barn, with guests who entertain . . . Loewenkeller, with singing and dancing Bavarians . . .

Some one at the Loewenkeller wanted to know whether Don Whitman was any relation to the Whiteman jazz king. Did he say yes? Or no?

Introducing the "Sandfordolls"

These ladies are only a small part of the beauties presented by Bobby Sanford at the Shoreham ball room. In addition there will be a large array of stars, features and fun. Beginning Saturday.

St. Louis Firm Ruled Guilty of NRA Breach

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday found the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., of St. Louis, guilty of violating the collective bargaining section of the National recovery act and directed it to withdraw all financial support from its company union, the Associated Press reported.

The company was found guilty of violating NRA's section 7 (a) "by failing to bargain collectively in good faith" with Wholesale House Workers Union Local No. 18316 and "by initiating, sponsoring and giving continued financial support to a company union, the Ely & Walker Employe & Management League."

make these funds available immediately.

The sum of $40,000, loaned by the PWA, already has been expended on a study of river pollution and sewage disposal. This survey was made at the instance of Secretary Ickes.

Under the plan recommended by the survey commission there would be expended during the first year $500,000. Two million dollars would be expended the second year, $3,000,000 the third year and $2,500,000 the fourth year.

Letter From Ickes.

In his critical letter to the Commissioners Secretary Ickes objected that this four-year construction program recommended by the experts was too long.

The District, Col. Sultan said, will speed up the work as far as it is wise and humanly possible to do so.

"We agreed with Secretary Ickes, of course, in his statement that the fundamental idea of the public works program is to put unemployed persons to work," the colonel said. "We are just as anxious to do this as he is."

"Construction of a huge disposal plant, however, is not a simple matter. It can not be compared with the construction of an $8,000,000 building. It is a very tricky and complicated affair.

"I am afraid that if we are pushed too hard we might be crowded into hurried decisions which experience might show were not the best."

Paul Welsh, president of the club, said Mr. Welles would speak on "My Experiences in Cuba." Classes at the university will be dismissed for the meeting, which will begin at 11:20 a. m.

Frank C. Walker's Leave Extended by Roosevelt

Frank C. Walker, former secretary of the National Emergency Council, said yesterday after a visit to the White House that President Roosevelt had agreed to extend his leave for several months more.

Mr. Walker relinquished his duties in June, planning to devote more time to his private affairs. He said yesterday that he is not yet ready to return to Washington and that, when he does, it will not necessarily be to his former position.

Chevy Chase Event Draws Society Here

Golf Matches Follow International Polo, Cup Regatta.

Hundreds in Gallery Watching British and American Players.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society has gone in for sports in a very big way during the last two weeks, with international polo, President's Cup Regatta, and, yesterday morning the opening of the Curtis Cup golf matches, which were played at the Chevy Chase Club.

Hundreds of spectators formed the gallery which set out to watch the matches between the British women's team and the American women's team on the links, which for days had been deluged by rains. However, with bright skies yesterday morning, men and women, in smart sports attire, set forth to follow the famous players.

All went well in the first half of the matches, after which the players returned to the club for luncheon; all still was well when they set out early in the afternoon for the second half. But a great, black cloud covered the sun, and for a few minutes it seemed that the rain would spoil the remainder of the day. Most of the gallery ran for the club porches, where they sat for the rest of the afternoon, but a goodly crowd of stanch golf enthusiasts withstood the shower and followed in with the teams.

Many Attend.

The Chevy Chase Club is always a pleasant place, and during the Davis Cup matches, which are always played on the club courts when the teams come to Washington, it is a mecca for lovers of sport. Yesterday, added to the club members who follow the games with interest were many spectators from other clubs, as well as those interested in seeing the British girls in competition with the American team.

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, who had entertained at a tea on Monday for the British team, was present to see his countrywomen off to a fine start, and other members of the embassy staff followed the matches through to the end. The Military Attache, Col. Maurice Fitzmaurice Day, an ardent golfer himself, was there, as were Mr. I. A. D. Wilson-Young, Third Secretary; Mr. A. F. H. Wiggin, First Secretary; Mr. J. H. Magowan, Commercial Secretary, squiring the attractive Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, who was a picture in a white silk sports frock with a Cossack turban of white silk.

The new Assistant Attache of the Embassy, Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, who has recently succeeded Capt. John Orr, with Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw, was there, the latter wearing a blue and white foulard frock with a wide-brimmed Panama hat, and nearby were the First Secretary, Mr. Philip Mainwaring Broadmead, with the Third Secretary, Mr. H. W. A. Freese-Pennefather.

Senor Padilla Present.

The Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, was escorting Mrs. Pearson Rust, who wore a white sports suit with a hat to match. Mrs. Sidney A. Taliaferro, like the true Scotchwoman that she is, followed the match from beginning to end, looking very smart in a homespun suit of soft heather shade with a small tailored brown hat. Sir Charles Ross, another Scotsman, spent the greater part of the afternoon with a group of gay and attractive people on the veranda, waiting for the players to return. Judge Chauncey Parker and his son, Mr. Chauncey Parker, jr., also remained on the veranda.

In the gallery were also Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Quinter, the latter wearing the white which was so prevalent yesterday among the women; Commander William D. Thomas, U. S. N., Mr. Henri De Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. William Meredith, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith, the latter in a black frock trimmed with white, and a small black hat; Mrs. Edward Raymond, who has recently returned from a summer spent at Rehoboth Beach, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley Simmons, Mrs. Henry Ravenel, in a tan sports frock with a small brown hat; Mrs. John E. Parker in light blue with navy blue accessories; Mrs. Bishop Hill, wearing a black woolen golf skirt and white silk blouse, and Miss Elizabeth Brawner, in a navy blue sports suit with a blazer jacket of blue and white checks.

Others in Gallery.

Mrs. Landra Platt, quite a golfer herself, wore cotton frock of bright blue and over it a knitted coat of pale yellow angora, and Mrs. Marshall Orme Exnicios was in white trimmed with touches of red. Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts were in the gallery, the latter wearing a knitted frock of pale peach color and a brown hat.

Also there were Mrs. Francis Martin Savage, wearing white; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, in shades of brown; Mrs. Chester Wood, wife of Lieut. Wood, U. S. N., in white woolens, and accompanied by her small daughter, Delight, who wore a smoked frock of white and lavender; Miss Laura Tuckerman, in a green cotton frock, and Mrs. Montgomery Blair. Miss Carolyn Houston Thompson was glimpsed in the gallery, as were Dr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford, the latter wearing a gaily striped sports silk frock; Miss Adelaide Henry, in beige and brown; Mrs. Mary McCain Smith, Mrs. Ormsby McCammon and Dr. and Mrs. Harry Carr.

Mrs. John C. Boyd, who has been visiting her son, Dr. John C. Boyd, in Boston, is spending a few days at the Hotel St. Regis in New York City before returning to her home in Washington.

Underwood & Underwood.

Mexican and U. S. Teams Greeted by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts at a reception yesterday afternoon at the Executive Mansion in honor of members of the Mexican Polo Team and the United States Polo Team who are participating in the International Polo Tournament. The reception was held indoors, due to the weather. There were about 100 guests, including the polo committee and a few additional guests.

Mrs. Roosevelt's next press conference will be held on Wednesday, at 11 o'clock, at the White House. Today Mrs. Roosevelt will meet with the women's committee of the Mobilization for Human Needs Conference, of which she is a member. This will follow the President's address to the conference on the White House lawn.

Mr. Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and his wife, who have spent the past few days in New York, where Mr. Roosevelt attended the first luncheon of the season of the Circus Saints and Sinners Club, have returned to the Capital and were seen lunching at the Mayflower with a party of friends yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt have leased a house in Leesburg, Va., for the coming season.

Also seen lunching at the Mayflower yesterday were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mr. Will Rogers and Mrs. Rogers, and the new housing administrator, Mr. James Moffett.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Strolling down Connecticut avenue yesterday morning, clad in my new fall finery (which with every step was getting heavier) I met another individual who vainly but foolishly had also pranced out in gay woolens. Being strangers we could not speak, but he cast an understanding glance at his own plaid attire and then at mine before he heeded the impatient tug on his leash and was on his way again.

Speaking of clothes, Margaret McMullen (now how does she get that flower-petal complexion?) has a very good looking new hat which boasts one huge eye-threatening quill. Now, just how long will it be before the stylists get really up to date and start pinning fountain pens on lapels and miniature autogyros on shoes?

Seeing Gerard Guilfoyle last evening reminded me of the recent "Soiree" which he was reluctant to leave. The prebreakfast hours had come and gone and I rather imagine that the milkman had long gone home and put the horse back in his stall, before the lingering laddie was finally persuaded and actually taken by the hand by Charlie McDaniel down the steps and shooed homeward.

Capital Younger Set Celebrates at Club

Last evening a group of debutantes and members of the Capital younger set celebrated what was for many of them the first week of school and gathered together to dine and dance at the Congressional Country Club, chaperoned by Mrs. Neitah King.

Among those present were Miss Silvine Clagett, of Upper Marlboro, Md.; Miss Margaret McMullen, Miss Margaret Speir, Miss Bette Hartz, Miss Betty Creman, Miss Mary Senate Howes, and Miss Mary Katherine Spinks, Mr. Charles McDaniels, Mr. Gerard Guilfoyle, Mr. John S. Nicoll, Mr. Robert Savage, Mr. John Cremen, Mr. Lewis Tarbet and Mr. Dave Smith.

Miss Letts' Debut Set for December

Miss Myers to Make Bow in Same Month.

Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts will present their niece, Miss Dorothy Haney Letts, to society at a reception at the Mayflower on December 22. Miss Letts is at present at the Connecticut College for Women.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers are making plans to present their daughter, Miss Louise C. Myers, to society this season, probably during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers, who were at their summer home at Watch Hill, R. I., for several months, are spending a few weeks at Union, Conn., where they have a country place which has been in the family for several generations. They will return to their home on S street the middle of October.

During their absence, their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill, have been occupying the Washington house, but are preparing to move to an apartment at 2633 Fifteenth street. Before her marriage Mrs. Hill was Miss Persis Myers.

Mrs. F. Frank Jaques has come from Des Moines, Iowa, and is at the Shoreham to join her niece, Miss Lucille Robinson, who is participating in the golf matches. Mrs. Jaques will accompany Miss Robinson to Philadelphia this evening and will remain for the women's National golf matches in that city beginning Monday, in which Miss Robinson will play. Mrs. Jaques and Miss Robinson will go from Philadelphia to Los Angeles for the women's Western championship matches, beginning October 22, during which Miss Robinson will defend the Western championship title which she now holds.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Jameson have motored up from their home in Roanoke, Va., and are at the Carlton for a brief stay.

Culbertson on Bridge

Deceiving the Defense.

When a Duplicate game is scored on a board-a-match basis, a 30-point overtrick very often is just as important as a swing of many more points in rubber Bridge. When you are playing, for instance, in a board-a-match team-of-four game, a difference of 10 points may be as good as 1,000.

Today's hand occurred in the preliminary qualifying round of the recent team-of-four tournament at Asbury Park, N. J. The South player, who was the Declarer at a game contract which was absolutely ironclad, succeeded in winning the board for his team by making five odd against the best possible opening lead by the opponents. He did this not by stealing a trick himself but by deceiving the opponents in such a manner that they did not take advantage of their opportunities.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♡	Pass	4♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

The crux of the entire play came at the very first trick—before the Declarer had played from Dummy. West chose as his opening lead the five of clubs, the top of a worthless doubleton. The Declarer did not quickly play a low card from Dummy as a great many fair Bridge players would automatically do, but instead stopped to think. At first glance it seemed possible that the five of clubs was a fourth-best lead. South soon realized, however, that if the lead were a fourth-best, West must hold the Ace-Queen-nine, as these were the only three higher cards which remained. Since a fourth-best lead from such a combination against a suit contract is almost inconceivable, South decided that the lead was almost certainly the top of a doubleton.

If this were the case, both the Ace and Queen were marked in the East hand and, in addition, there was the danger of a third round ruff. South knew that to get a normal or better than normal result on the board for his team he had to do something to prevent this ruff's materializing. After a few moments' hesitation he decided upon the winning line of play. He went up with the King of clubs in Dummy, and when East won with the Ace, he did not false-card from his own hand, but played the four-spot. With the Ten, eight and six of clubs concealed, South realized that East would most probably read his partner's lead as a fourth-best, and that this illusion would be further heightened by the play of the King, as the play of the King with the Ace and Queen both missing would seem to indicate that the Declarer held only a doubleton in the suit and was hoping that the opening lead was from the Ace rather than from the Queen.

Put yourself in East's position, seeing only the Dummy and the Opening lead and the Declarer's play of the four to the first trick. What way would you have of telling that your partner had opened a doubleton and the Declarer had four cards in the suit? East made his natural shift to the spade King, and the Declarer, by eventually finessing against East's club nine, was able to make all of the rest of the tricks but the club Queen.

At the other table the Declarer was not so astute and ducked the first lead completely in Dummy, hoping that the opening leader had led away from the Queen. The East player at this table knew then that his partner was leading from a two-card suit, or a three-card suit at the worst, and accordingly laid down the Ace of clubs and then permitted West to ruff the third round.

Feminine Charm Increases Steel Sales in Orient

American Business Woman Scorns Mannish Office Attire in China.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27 (AP).—An American woman who heads her own company, dealing in dainty articles as railway equipment, steel and airplanes, finds it unnecessary to grow "hardboiled" and wear masculine attire in order to be successful in business in the Far East.

Mrs. William Hosken was born in Kentucky, reared on a Colorado cattle ranch and educated in New York, which she calls her home. During the past 20 years she has familiarized herself with the Orient and Oriental business conditions and methods.

Sells Chemicals to Japan.

About half of her time is spent here, half in her New York office. In Shanghai she directs a staff of engineering experts, all men, and refuses to have another woman in the business.

Mrs. Hosken's company handles chemicals in and out of Japan; railway steel and rolling stock in Manchukuo; airplanes, road building machinery and engineering necessities in China.

The Nanking government is her principal customer in China and although Chinese officials are supposed to be able to drive a hard bargain, this thoroughly feminine woman knows when to strike hard for a plane contract or an order for machinery to build highways.

Despite strong competition from clever traders of other nations and her own countrymen, Mrs. Hosken gets her share of the Orient's business with foreigners. She predicts a bright future for American trade in the Far East.

Drawing Room or Office.

Mrs. Hosken's charming drawing room manner belies her business ability. But she is quite at home in her office, making no attempt to appear business-like.

"I find I don't have to wear tailored suits and mannish collars to make a go of my business," she says.

Fliers to Assist In Stricken Areas

California Women Aviators Plan New Squadron.

WHEN PLAGUES of peacetime—riots, floods, forest fires and earthquakes—descend upon the United States in the future a band of women fliers will be on hand to do battle. These fliers, about 40 in number, will assist relief crews in getting food, medicine, doctors and nurses into the stricken areas.

Plans for this new flying squadron were made recently by Mrs. Florence Lowe Barnes and Miss Bobbie Trout, veteran women aviators, of California. They have enlisted in the cause a woman doctor who flies, Dr. Emma McNair Kittredge, of Los Angeles. The majority of the members are residents of California.

Those who are training for the emergency work are taking courses in first aid so they will be able to land in any area—say, one cut off by a forest fire—with a medicine kit and a portable radio. Many of the fliers are experienced parachute jumpers.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Fermentation in the Colon.

THERE is a type of intestinal disturbance that is responsible for a considerable amount of body weakness, loss of tone, and "that tired feeling." The patient sometimes awakens in the morning with the expression, "I am as tired as when I went to bed."

In describing his symptoms the individual will relate that during the day there is a good deal of rumbling and gurgling in the abdomen. There is usually a sense of fullness, or a feeling that the abdomen is bloated. The bowels are free and move normally once or twice a day. When the rectum is emptied there is generally considerable gas. The material is frothy and sour in odor. There is rarely any mucus or blood. The patient usually states that his appetite is poor. Many complain of abdominal distress. Some will describe the pains as cramplike, and a few will associate nausea with abdominal pain. Occasionally the pain will come on after eating and may be mistaken for a symptom of peptic ulcer. The pain, however, is not constant but intermittent in type.

Treatment consists in restricting the use of starches and sugars by means of a diet such as that suggested by George O. Solem. The patient is allowed meat, fish, chicken, bacon, eggs, cheese, butter, cream, and gelatin preparations. Vegetables are confined to spinach, asparagus, lettuce, celery, Brussels sprouts, tomatoes, and string beans. One orange or half a grapefruit is prescribed for breakfast. Starches are limited to one slice of well-toasted bread with each meal.

If marked improvement is not noted after a week of dietary management alkalis in the form of calcium salts are given by mouth. The exclusion of starches and sugars must be insisted upon, as a single break from the strict dietary regime may be sufficient to reestablish the fermentative process within the intestine. After two or three weeks many patients will report marked improvement with the amelioration of most of the symptoms.

Occasionally, if the condition has been long established, considerable difficulty will be encountered, and in such cases the use of alkalis will need to be continued for months.

Young Harpist Contributes Tinkling Notes to Great Symphony's Throb

Sylvia Meyer Only Woman Member of Capital's Orchestra.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

IT'S A GOOD THING for Sylvia Meyer her mother picked up a funny little old harp instead of a zither in a musty antique shop 30-odd years ago. Otherwise Sylvia would probbaly be an accomplished zither player instead of a harpist in the National Symphony today.

The Meyers were living in Madison, Wis., at the time. Mrs. Meyer had an enormous fondness for antiques. When she discovered the quaint little harp she snapped it up at the bargain price of $2, thinking she might some day learn to play the instrument herself.

But before Mrs. Meyer got around to taking lessons, along came two sons and a daughter. The daughter was Sylvia. The three children kept Mrs. Meyer so occupied she gave up the idea of becoming a harpist. But she still thought it would be fine to have one in the family.

The Boys Escaped.

"I don't know how the boys escaped it," laughed Sylvia Meyer, tall and blonde as a goddess, yesterday afternoon at her home in Georgetown. "All I know is that when I was 7 years old the harp was literally thrust into my hands. Mother engaged a sister from Holy Cross Academy to teach me. The sister took one look at that strange instrument and then burst into laughter or tears—I don't remember which. You see, the thing had no pedals. It didn't even have a base, but mother had had it nailed to a board so it could stand alone. The sister convinced her it would be a waste of time to take lessons on that antiquated harp. Mother wasn't discouraged. In spite of her love for antiques she went out and bought a new and modern instrument."

And so Sylvia Meyer, only woman member of the National Symphony and only harpist in the orchestra, began her lessons. That was almost 20 years ago. As she sat in the mellow living room of the B. H. Meyer home at 3327 P street yesterday she recalled those first days with the harp; days when she was inclined to think herself a martyr if she practiced one whole hour. Now she thinks nothing of putting in six or seven.

Return of the Native.

For ten years she studied with the sister from Holy Cross. Then she returned to her native State, Wisconsin, and entered the State university there. She majored in geology.

"I don't know why," said Miss Meyer. "I certainly never had any intention of becoming a geologist. But it seemed a good idea to go to a university and take something. And geology really has been a help to me. In most of the classes I was the only girl. That prepared me a little for being the only woman in an orchestra of men."

The men in the Symphony are "simply grand" according to Sylvia Meyer, although they tease her rather a lot. But she's become accustomed to their referring to her harp as "the uke" and to their complimenting her on her virtuosity in a number in which the harp has been silent.

Calming the Conductor.

"Of course I can't help but hear a few things a nice girl shouldn't. But they do say Dr. Kindler has calmed down considerably since I joined the orchestra. So, perhaps, I'm a good influence after all. With her warm and easy smile Sylvia Meyer made it plain she doesn't take herself seriously.

The harp? Well, the harp is different. It has been her constant companion and most absorbing interest since she was 7.

Began Music Lessons on Two-Dollar Harp From Antique Shop.

"I feel as if it were a part of me now," she said quietly, soberly. Yes, the harp is a serious business with her. She actually suffered at a a vaudeville performance in Baltimore when a performer did tricks with the instrument.

"He had an elastic string in the bass and at intervals he'd stretch that string as far as it would go and then let it snap. The audience loved it. The performer was having a beautiful time. But I was miserable.

"Until fairly recent years no one took the harp seriously as a musical instrument," explained Miss Meyer.

Lavender Music.

"It was considered a drawing-room ornament and refined young ladies of good families were taught to play sentimental airs on it. The young ladies were usually dripping with lavender and old lace. So was the music they played. They would strike a chord and then hang on to it for hours while their fingers rippled up and down the strings in fancy scales that didn't mean a thing."

Salzedo, through his teaching and compositions, deserves most of the credit for making harpists into musicians, believes Miss Meyer. She studied with him for three summers. That was after she had been graduated from the University of Wisconsin and had attended Peabody Conservatory.

And it was Salzedo who recommended her to Dr. Kindler so highly she became a member of the National Symphony without ever going through a try-out. Previous to joining the Washington orchestra a year ago she had played with the Baltimore Symphony for three seasons. She is now a member of both organizations.

Strenuous Rehearsals.

"But the rehearsals in Washington are much more strenuous than those in Baltimore," she said. "I hadn't gone through many of them before I realized I would have to give up sports and devote all my time to the harp."

By sports she meant field hockey and basket ball. She enjoyed the latter so much she played on two teams, which worked out splendidly until the teams were matched against each other. Neither knew Sylvia was playing on the other.

"Both teams seemed a little disconcerted at first, but I straightened things out by declaring I would play with the group I had joined first," Miss Meyer explained blithely.

Revels Are Taboo.

Late Saturday night merrymaking went the way of hockey and basket ball after she joined the National Symphony.

"I soon learned I couldn't stay out late Saturday night and then be much good at a 9 o'clock rehearsal on Sunday morning," said Miss Meyer.

Opportunities for harpists are excellent in today's musical world, declared the only woman member of the National Symphony. The field is uncrowded and is widening its scope year after year. Even dance orchestras are using harpists.

Lessons in childhood have little value, in the opinion of Miss Meyer.

"Often girls are started out on the harp when they are too small to handle the instrument properly. It would be better for them to wait a few years. One of the finest harpists I've ever known didn't have a harp lesson until she was a young woman. By that time she was ready to plunge into the work seriously—and that's what counts."

What Today Means

"LIBRA."

IF SEPTEMBER 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

If you will anticipate on this September 28 the needs of family, friends or customers, which you can take care of without financial expense, or serious inconvenience, their appreciation may not only be gratifying, but also prove decidedly advantageous. In the buying, selling or handling of any sea products it might prove wise to be discriminating, as well as careful.

This day should prove auspicious for inspiration in writing, planning or preparing literature for any kind of campaign. There is an indication that you should receive some money within the next 24 hours and it might be well to use it judiciously. Discretion is called for in matters relating to self indulgence and lavish expenditures.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in love affairs, should be very careful regarding making promiscuous promises, unless certain they can be fulfilled.

If a woman and September 28 is your natal day, you should be able to look forward, with a contented mind, to the months intervening between this birthday and your next one. There is the possibility of a great deal of good occurring. There should be an abundance of love in your life.

The child born on September 28, when it becomes old enough to understand, must be taught not to be gullible, for having a very trusting nature, it might be easily imposed upon. Sweet and well mannered, it should be very popular.

If a man and September 28 is your birthday, you may save yourself money and do better in business if you are a little more skeptical regarding the sincerity of strangers in business matters.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a problem and need a little outside help, and because I think your advice is timely and to the point, I am turnnig to you.

I am a young man of 23 who came to this city last winter. I have a good job, am a good conversationalist and I think I can say, without flattering my ego, that I have a pleasant personality.

I met a girl last spring who appealed to me very, very much. We went to dances, had dinner together and generally disported ourselves like any young couple looking for a little enjoyment in life.

* * * *

I never attempted to kiss this young lady in all the times I was out with her, until recently. This summer, on two distinct occasions, she boldly stated she would like to have me kiss her, yet I didn't, principally because I was afraid. Balanced against this are two other occasions when I did attempt to kiss her and she refused me. She seems entirely too cold now for me. She is very reticent and when I ask her why, she refuses to answer me.

* * * *

I have met her mother and father and they seem to like me and more or less look upon me as a prospective son-in-law. They have good grounds on which to base such supposition, because I do have serious intentions. That is, I did, but now I'm not so certain. If she going to be so cold and refuse my affections, most certainly she will be unsuited to me as a wife.

* * * *

Now, here is what I would like to have cleared up: 1. Why did she want to be kissed at one time, and at another refuse me? 2. Is it my fault—it probably is—and, if so, how can I go about remedying the damage? 3. If she refuses to tell me the reason for the sudden reticence, how can I go about finding the cause? 4. Would you suggest finding other interests? This last would be very hard for me to do, but if it is the best course, I think I could go through with it. Give me some help. KHAYIAM.

Lamentable Suitor.

DEAR KHAYIAM: Several reasonable suppositions, all more or less interlocking, immediately suggest themselves as explanation of the girl's seemingly contradictory conduct.

In the first place, your sorry lack of gallantry, courage and romantic technique, as displayed by your twice-repeated failure to kiss her when so requested, must have been a painful bruise to her ego and to her emotions.

Your second refusal was enough to cause any sensitive, love-smitten girl to retire, bitterly wounded, into a protective shell of coldness which it might take many years and a more accomplished Lochinvar than yourself to batter down.

* * * *

In the second place, having finally and desperately clutched the courage to salute your lady love in the manner suggested by her and approved by tradition, you very likely discharged the sentimental obligation in the blundering and clumsy fashion of the beginner.

Yet I hasten to interpolate that no matter how inexperienced, in actuality, a girl in love may be with regard to the technique of romance, she intuitively recognizes and responds to the address, however unpracticed, which bespeaks essential delicacy and tenderness; and as intuitively rejects and evades the cruder, more sensual overture.

* * * *

Thirdly, the exchange of the first kiss of budding love is more or less proof of the pudding. It may please, or it may not. It is a telling test of the potential physical compatibility of a man and a girl thinking in terms of matrimony. If it doesn't tauten and strengthen the tie that binds, then the assumption that the two are fundamentally unsuited, immediately invites itself.

* * * *

Now, to dispose of your questions in the order presented: 1. Woman's immemorial answer, "Because——" would explain as well as any other words the reason why she at one time wanted you to kiss her; probably and principally because the innocent urge to that experience is part and parcel of any young girl's affectionate interest in any personable suitor. As for why she later refused your kisses; it could be injured pride, a suspicion that you hold her in lowered esteem by reason of her frank bid for them, and a resultant distrust of the sincerity of your demonstrations; dissatisfaction with your technique, or even a dawning dislike of you.

* * * *

2. I think it is your fault. The best chance of remedying the situation is to have a frank talk with the girl. Tell her why you didn't kiss her at first—because you were afraid; and why, if you are clear in your own mind, why, you eventually overcame that fear.

3. One method of finding out the cause is to make such a clean breast of your own reasons for failing her at a psychologically significant moment, that she will be moved to an exchange of confidence with you. If this fails to unlock the secret, you will have to resort to time, patience, and tactful courtship of a rather more subtly aggressive nature than you have employed in the past.

* * * *

4. If, after analyzing your own very obvious shortcomings in your role of Romeo to this girl's Juliet, and doing your level best to overcome them you still find her cold and unresponsive, I would suggest your looking elsewhere for heart interest. M. H.

Designs Constructive Program for Youth

Underwood & Underwood.

An intuitive, accurate, spiritual measuring stick is the modern girl's best safeguard in meeting life, thinks Miss Anne Sarachon Hooley, above, president of the National Council of Catholic Women.

By Elizabeth Young.

WHEN THE MODERN girl steers the bark of her individual destiny out into the sea of life, pitting her untried navigator's skill against the lashing waves of unconventionality, the new, uncharted freedom, the overhanging clouds of economic insecurity—what compass can she trust to guide her to safe harbor?

"Only the measuring stick of spiritual and material values which she carries within herself; a measuring stick whose accuracy is determined very largely by the social, educational and religious training she has received since infancy in the home, in the school, in educational and recreational centers," Miss Anne Sarachon Hooley, president of the National Council of Catholic Women, said yesterday.

Based on Practice.

Miss Hooley's pronouncement is not based on theory. For 12 years she has been training and placing college girls in secretarial and executive work in the business and professional worlds. Director of three Nationally recognized secretarial schools of her own in the West, Miss Hooley's responsible post as head of the N. C. C. W.—to which she was elected a year ago—is strictly an extra-curricular activity.

An engaging person is Miss Hooley, whose pictures don't half do justice to her fascinating poise and quiet vivacity; her smoothly coiffed black hair, limned with silver about the face; the smartly simple sophistication of her costume and grooming. She has a husky, boyish voice and a delightful laugh. She is humorous, tolerant, wise.

She came here Wednesday from Kansas City to wind up plans for the opening Sunday of the N. C. C. W.'s fourteenth annual convention, which will be in session September 30 to October 4 at the Mayflower Hotel, where she is stopping.

Crowded Calendar.

Conferences, dinners, luncheons crowd her calendar for the next ten days. An insistently interrupting telephone failed to ruffle her composure as she discussed the obstacles and pitfalls which beset the pathway of the modern girl.

"The girl who stands on the threshold leading from school or home into active participation in life today is facing a much more difficult and tempestuous scene than did the girl of 20, or even 10, years ago," she said.

"She sees problems we didn't see, because they didn't then exist, at least not for the more fortunately born. But today they exist for all: the problems of how constructively to use the new leisure; how to find occupational or professional opportunity; how to treat with the widely accepted new standards of social unconventionality; how best to recreate in one's self, from time to time, the spirit of joy, the appreciation of beauty, the devotion to service, which makes for personal serenity and stability—in other words, how to meet the challenge of the almost limitless field of diversions.

"The girl denied occupational opportunity is the one most in need of wholesome diversion," Miss Hooley explained.

"And wholesome diversion necessarily embraces activities other than simply sports. She must exercise her mind and her spirit. Cultural and educational pursuits must be provided her. It's never enough to condemn certain offerings, to point out certain omissions, as paving the way to deterioration or destruction.

"A constructive program, bridging any lack, must be created. And for the past year a committee of the National Council of Catholic Women has been working on such a program. It will be up for discussion at the Tuesday afternoon session of the convention.

"What are its high points? Offhand, I should say the high points will be, first, emphasizing the necessity of each community, from the smallest hamlet to the largest city, setting machinery in motion to take care of the social and cultural needs of its youth; and, second, the presentation of a general plan for establishing such activity. The plan will follow a pattern which will lend itself to adaptation according to the specific problems, the specific resources, of a given locale."

Mothers' Demand.

Surprisingly enough, it is not the educator, nor the welfare leader, nor the philanthropist, who is the prime mover behind the modern demand for a safer world for youth, Miss Hooley has observed.

"It is the mother—the woman in the home," she said. "At least, it is so in the realm of Catholicity. She knows the sustaining power of religious faith, the fundamental security which derives from a thorough education in spiritual, esthetic and social values, and she would create a community life which complements the life of the home."

Fashion Interest Of Russian Women Noted by Native

That is the report Irina Skariatina, born to the Russian nobility and exiled by the revolutionists, brings back from a vagabond tour of her native country.

"The Russians today are a rejuvenated race," she says. "In the workers' districts we found people tanned and healthy. They wore light clothes and there was a try at fashion that wasn't to be seen when I was there two years ago.

"The girls have permanent waves. They use lipstick. This summer they're going in for dresses with little puffed sleeves. It's all such a contrast with the coarse, styleless clothes they wore two years ago.

"They're girls that have evolved from the plow to the factory. Often you can't tell them from the tourists."

PILLAR TO POST

MISS HELEN HICKS, the golf professional, is stealing the show at the Chevy Chase Club, where the women's international matches are being played. Heads turn to follow everywhere she goes and she is pointed out as the girl who earns $75,000 a year playing exhibition matches and selling golf equipment.

* * * *

The former National champion, who sacrificed her amateur standing for an amount equalling the salary of the President of the United States, is not overlooking any opportunities to do business.

* * * *

Recently two young men from the Chevy Chase Club, who had been dazzled by this youngster with the curly black bob, invited her out to dinner. Before the evening was over she had induced them to buy two new sets of golf clubs.

SIR RONALD LINDSAY, the British Ambassador, beamed upon his countrywomen, who are here to capture the Curtis Cup, at tea in the embassy the other day, and personally helped them to cream and sugar.

* * * *

Miss Doris Chambers, the captain of the British team, had stage fright at the prospect of speaking over the radio, and testified that her team would much rather step up to a tee in a championship match then face the microphone. Asked what she intended to say to the radio audience she answered that she "hadn't the foggiest idea."

* * * *

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, who has won more honors in golf than any other one woman but was forced to relinquish the game because of the advent of three babies, is the nonplaying captain of the American team.

Asked if she were as excited in this tournament as in the former five matches in which she retained her title as National golf champion, Mrs. Collett Vare replied she was even more excited, because she did not know which play to follow or where to go, so interested was she in everything her team was doing at once.

THERE'S REALLY no necessity to import golf stars to thrill the galleries at the Chevy Chase Club when they have Gen. H. P. McCain to entertain them. He is past 80 years old, tall, angular and with a profile resembling that of John D. Rockefeller, senior.

* * * *

He stepped up to the tee after the British stars had passed in a practice game, and knocked a ball as far as any of them did, and aimed as accurately. His daughter, Mrs. Emory Smith, proudly boasted that his score was regularly under 85.

* * * *

Mrs. Howard Leroy is going to train for the next championship matches so that she will be in better condition to follow them. For nearly a week now she has been trotting over the course at Chevy Chase both morning and afternoon, watching the practice games and the real match yesterday, when she confessed herself more thrilled than when she saw Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen play.

In the evenings she has been going to parties the tournament gave an excuse for, and she is beginning to feel the strain.

Fluffy Cream Gives Velvety Finish to Skin

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A VELVET dress for the skin! The idea catches one's fancy. It originated recently when a young beauty scientist spoke of one of her creams in this way.

"Now out of this jar," she said, "comes a velvet dress. Just a little one for the face!"

What did come out was a fluffy substance looking for the world like cake icing. After it is dotted over the face it should be spread on with a piece of cotton saturated with water. Almost immediately it becomes a smooth, glowing part of the skin. It has a soft, velvety finish that is lovely even before the rouge and powder are applied over it. When they are smoothed over this foundation they're on to stay, at least until they're washed or creamed off.

Because of its permanent qualities business women find it an ideal foundation. If they apply it in the morning they may rest assured it will be hours before thais make-up needs retouching.

It comes in a jar which contains quantity enough to last ten months. The price is very reasonable.

Back Scratching in Again.

There's something a little bit pagan about the bamboo "back scratchers" displayed in a local shop. There's probably something a little bit pagan about back scratching, too. But nevertheless dozens of customers drift in and out of the shop, tarrying just long enough to put their 25 cents on the counter and leave with their purchases.

It's really a long piece of beautifully carved bamboo finished off at one end with a six-fingered hand.

Mittens for Shoes.

A shoe mitten is a very necessary convenience for travelers. Shoes fit into them very compactly so they may be packed in a small space, and be trusted not to soil the other contents of the valise.

Just recently a downtown store got in a new batch of them, all soft knitted little shoe mitts in black, green, and brown. They come three pairs to a box, $1 for the complete set.

Earrings Are Comfortable.

Clip-on earrings are still going strong. According to a young woman behind the counter in the jewelry department of a downtown store the majority of shoppers ask for the clip-on variety.

Some of the most attractive styles are patterned after the old-fashioned wedding ring. A round band of ebony, gold, silver, or a double row of bright stones fasten very coyly to the lobe of the ear. They fit quite closely and yet aren't a bit uncomfortable.

Doubling in Brass.

The stand is set on the floor and the tray either lies sideways in the manner of a fire screen or is pulled upward to act as a small coffee or cocktail table.

Now a Lap Desk.

The conveniences of a lap desk can scarcely be listed. If you're sitting in a soft easy chair and feel the urge to write it's a very nice thing to reach over for your little desk, place it on your lap, and scribble away to your heart's content.

Back in what is commonly called "the good old days," ladies and gentlemen frequently owned such conveniences. But, as a usual thing, they were made out of wood and were a trifle heavy for the fragile ladies of that era.

Now that the old custom is back again a local store comes to the fore with some lap desks made of a lightweight composition. The sloping top piece is covered on the outside with a blotter. When it's raised there is a roomy interior with a tray for pens and pencils, and a separate compartment for envelopes and writing paper.

This handy little item costs only $1.

Purses for Evening.

Perfectly lovely little seed pearl evening purses are especially priced for the time being at $1. They look as though they would cost several times that, and very probably they will when the special is over.

There are two styles. One opens envelope like with a flap that snaps down on the side. The other fastens with a zipper across the top.

They're completely covered on the outside with tiny little seed pearls interspersed with an occasion crystal bugle bead. Inside they are lined with soft white fabric with a silvery sheen.

Dolls for What-Nots.

As one looks at the display in an 8th street store she half expects to hear the catching refrain of the "Wedding of the Painted Doll." Except in this case it should be "Dresden" doll.

Row on row of charming little Dresden figures stand side by side, dressed in their China lace and taffeta and silks as though they were gathered for some auspicious occasion.

They make charming little ornaments for knick-knacks and corner what-nots—and are very reasonably priced.

The Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

Sausages need not be slighted when they appear on the dinner table. Although classified as a breakfast meat, the family is sure to treat them with respect when they deserve it.

Here are ways to prepare sausages that will make them an excellent supper dish:

Baked Apples Stuffed With Sausage.

Use six good-sized tart apples and one cup of sausage meat. Scoop out center of apples, leaving thick shell and cut all pulp possible from core. Chop this and mix with sausage meat. Refill apples, heaping filling and bake at 400 degrees F. until apples are tender. Serve with baked or fried potatoes.

Sweet or white potatoes are also very good stuffed with sausages.

Sausage in Blankets.

Make rich biscuit dough, roll thin, cut with large cookie cutter. Fry sausages and, while hot, roll one link in each disc of dough. Bake in moderate oven.

Sausages With Macaroni and Mushrooms.

This is really a company dish. Cook two cups elbow macaroni in salted water until tender. Drain and line casserole bottom. Remove the links of sausage from a carton, allowing at least two sausages for each serving. Place the sausage links in the casserole, then sprinkle with one-half cup chopped canned mushrooms and pour over macaroni in casserole. Bake in 350 degrees F. or moderate oven 40 minutes.

Sausage With Peas.

8 pork sausages
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup water
½ cup peas
4 eggs

Cut the sausages in pieces about 1 inch long and brown them in the frying pan. When well browned, remove from the pan, pour off all the fat except one tablespoon, add to it the flour, and when browned, add the water. When the sauce is think, put in the pieces of sausage, the peas and beaten eggs. Pour into a baking dish, set this in hot water, and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until the eggs are set.

Society Moron-Coddler, Charges College Head

Society has been coddling morons while starving the intelligent and has neglected those with the divine spark while lavishing money and training upon pinheads, according to President Cutten, of Colgate University.

"We have taken better care of the idiot than we have of the genius and while we thought we were being kind we were only being stupid and petty," said President Cutten in his annual convocation address.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Sam Cresson, who lives in the London suburb of Sandywayes, has been found dead; suicide because of financial reverses is indicated in a note he leaves. His banker, Huitt, says he has made large withdrawals, suggesting that he was being blackmailed. Huitt has been annoyed by a young man named Tyssen, a newcomer to the village, who asks for information about the dead man's affairs; he says he is collecting material for a novel. Pauline and Anthony Sarson, also residents of the village, see Tyssen at night on the golf course, making remarkable shots; he denies being an expert. Meanwhile, Huitt is invited to dinner with Lord Milbank. The other guest is Sir Julian Bott, London financier, who refuses to develop Milhaven's concessions because he plans to start a new company which will require all his financial resources.

ANTHONY SARSON, racing his motor bicycle and sidecar through the scented darkness that night, slackened his speed as he caught sight of a small but brilliant light almost immediately ahead of him. He was on the rough byway skirting the north end of the wilderness, a near cut from the country house where he and Sybil Cresset had been dancing.

He leaned toward the girl. He could only just see the outline of the slim, white-clad body. Even her lazy eyes were partly veiled with sleep.

"Hanged if I know," he replied. "It's that light straight ahead that's bothering me. I have never seen a vehicle of any description along this lane in my life."

She sat up. They were going quite slowly now.

"It's one of those new spotlights," he continued, "fixed a little higher up than usual, I should think. My God! Here comes the searchlight," he went on, as the whole byway was bathed in brilliant illumination. "Shade your eyes and see if you think there's any trouble, Sybil. I have to keep my head turned away."

Headlight Approached.

They went on slowly. The headlight, as they approached, was turned out again, as though it had fulfilled its object—to blind the oncoming intruder.

"It's a huge car," the girl announced, "but I can't see a soul. There's plenty of room to get by. It seems to be pushed a quarter way into the hedge."

Anthony jammed on his brakes. The figure of a man had loomed up out of the darkness.

"What's the matter?" the former inquired. "Are you in any trouble there?"

The mysterious figure did not reply for a moment. He wore motor goggles with flaps, a peaked cap and a dark uniform which appeared to be that of the county constabulary.

"Have you lost your way?" he asked gruffly. "I understood this was a private road."

"Well, it isn't," Anthony explained. "The private road doesn't begin until you pass through the gates of the Golf Club a hundred yards farther on."

"But this lane only leads to the Golf Club," the man persisted suspiciously.

Help Refused.

"Not at all," Anthony objected. "There's a rough way through a gate to the right there, to Sandywayes village. You could not get your car down, but it's all right for my machine. That's where I'm going, if you want to know."

The motorist stepped back.

"Get along with you then," he enjoined shortly. "Sorry I stopped you. I thought you must have lost your way."

"What are you doing up here?" Anthony asked with not unnatural curiosity.

"That's my business," was the abrupt response.

"Is anything the matter with your car? I'm a bit of a mechanic."

"Nothing whatever."

Curiosity was rather a family trait of the Sarsons, and the young man possessed his full share.

"But what are you doing on this road?" he persisted. "You can't have come from the Golf Club at this time of night, and it doesn't lead anywhere else."

"You get on home and mind your own business, unless you're looking for trouble," was the menacing retort.

"Seems to me it's you who are looking for that," Anthony observed, as he remounted his bicycle.

Threatening Gesture.

The man drew his hand from his coat pocket, into which it had stolen a moment or two previously. His gesture was threatening. Anthony was almost inclined to swear, when he recounted the episode, that he was holding something black and ugly between his clinched fingers. Sybil called up from her seat in the sidecar.

"Anthony, please go on," she begged. "It's not our business, anyway. I'm getting nervous."

The half-seen figure of the night laughed jeeringly.

"The young lady knows something," he remarked. "Pass along while you have the chance, young fellow."

Anthony pressed down his foot and started the engine.

"Do you belong to the police?" he ventured.

"Maybe I do. There are 16 different branches of the force now, you know—flying squads and watching squads and intelligence squads. Anyway, I'm sufficiently near being a policeman to see that you get into trouble if you don't do as you are told!"

The engine began to roar and Anthony sped on. The waiting limousine was out of the radius of his own headlight and the darkness was too intense for him to see more than its outline, but he was able to satisfy himself that there was no indication of any passenger, no sign of any human being except the one who had accosted him.

Queer Business.

"That's a queer business," he observed, as he got off a few minutes later to open the gate. "What do you make of it, Sybil?"

"Don't ask me," the girl replied. "Just get away as fast as you can, please."

He turned obediently down the rough path which fringed the pine wood, past the two silent and stark bungalows down to the oasis below. When he reached the little cluster of houses, he sprang from his seat and stopped his engine. Even before he helped his companion out, however, he was peering up toward the road above. There were no signs of the car, no lights, no sound.

"Well, that is a queer business," he repeated in a puzzled tone. "What on earth do you suppose it was all about, Sybil?"

"I have no idea," she told him, as she took his hand and alighted. "I only know that I was getting frightened. The man was an inspector or something, wasn't he?"

"I thought so at first," Anthony replied. "He seemed to be wearing some sort of uniform. What on earth was he doing up there, though? No chauffeur and apparently no passengers. Where on earth could he have come from?"

"He might have come from London, if he was a member of the golf club and happened to have his key," the girl suggested.

Sybil Was Bored.

"It isn't very likely, and even if he had, what was he doing half hidden in the hedge, with all his lights out? One thing is quite certain—he didn't want to be seen."

Sybil was a little bored with it all. In another moment she expected a parental summons from one of the windows above.

"I am too sleepy to guess any more, Tony," she confessed. "Take me to the door—there's a dear. These bushes make me feel shivery."

Anthony, being a young man with the requisite amount of gallantry, and knowing very well what was expected of him, did as he was bidden and lingered for the proper length of time in the shadow of the laurel bushes. When finally Sybil had user her latchkey and disappeared, he closed the gate and returned to his motor bicycle. He wheeled it cautiously into the garage of his own house, and afterward retraced his steps as far as the white railings which bordered the common, and looked long and searchingly up toward the pine woods. There was still not a light anywhere to be seen, not a sign of any one stirring. He strolled down the lane, keeping on the fringe of the turf which bordered the common, so that his footsteps should not be heard, and looked longingly at the blank windows of the police station. Not a sign of light there.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Nothing the Matter With a Breakfast Party

Sunday again at Mountain House. Beautiful, bright, sunny morning. Everybody sleeping pretty late because there's nothing to do. But Bettie knows perfectly well that a lot of folks are going to pretty soon be hanging around and asking how long will it be before those corn cakes are going to be ready to be smeared over with honey. Yes, they have honey. Those bees that Blackie brought from Uncle Joe's house have been working mighty well, and so Grandpa has been able to take a lot of those little boxes out and put in some empty ones to be filled with more honey.

They all straggle out of bed, one by one, to ask about breakfast, but Bettie tells them all to go back and make up their beds and tidy up everything, and if they have time left over they can go out and sit in that beautiful sun till she calls them. And when Bettie tells folks what to do she doesn't just flint at it; she gives orders, and so everybody was in a hurry to fix his bed before Bettie called out that breakfast was ready. She didn't want to be tied up on anything else when the cakes and honey came on the table.

After a while—oh, such a long time, Benny thought—Bettie went to the door and said: "Now you may come and see if you can eat such cakes as I have made," and the nice, bready smell of the corn cakes was so strong that it nearly pulled those children over Grandpa, while they were trying to be polite by letting him go in first.

Let Blackie and Dr. Coon and the rest of the Creek crowd have their supper of ginger cake and cider. Let them have their big, cold, full moon. Let them have everything they can find down in their beloved low country, but they don't have anything better than a sunny fall morning in the mountains, with a cottage up on a lake full of fishes and turtles, and with the best cook in the whole animal kingdom piling nice brown corn cakes on the table as fast as a hungry bunch of grandparents and grandchildren can eat them and talk about how good they are. Even Howler, who had thought that the Creek suppers were just about the best that could be, had to tell Bettie that if anybody could make any better cakes and coffee than she, he hadn't run across her yet. That got him three more smoking hot cakes right off Bettie's griddle.

It was a lazy day in the mountains. The butterflies just flapped around from a beautiful purple flower to a yellow one, and didn't seem to know which flower to visit next, while even that busy little bee that we talk so much about just sooned around about half as fast as he does in the summer time, and didn't seem to care whether he found any honey or not.

Grandpa and Howler were sitting on the porch smoking their pipes and the children were on the see-saw when Jay Bird whizzed in.

2 Suspects Held In Still Ambush Of U. S. Agent

Proctor, Smith, Colored, Arrested in Connection With Thomas' Shooting

Two men were arrested yesterday in connection with the shooting of Federal Investigator Cyrus Thomas during a raid on a still last Tuesday near Forestville, Md.

Paul D. Proctor, 32, colored, of Forrestville, was taken into custody last night by Ninth Precinct police while he was walking on C street, near Eighth street northeast. He waived extradition and was taken to the Marlboro Jail.

None of the men would admit being near the scene of the crime, although Lieut. George Little, of the special investigations squad at headquarters, expressed the opinion that the arrests would virtually clear up the shooting.

Federal operatives said Thomas had been shot from ambush after he had placed one of the men under arrest. He was trying to place another under arerst when he was felled by a fusillade from the bushes.

Proctor, according to police, had been living at the home of Louis Gross, 47, colored, in the 1200 block of Maryland avenue northeast. Several persons at the house were arrested last night and were later released.

Earlier, Forest Smith, of Forestville, had been taken into custody. The police refused to disclose the name of a material witness who is being held.

Smith, with Wallace Armstrong and three colored men, John, Kelly and Edward Barnes, brothers, who were arrested Wednesday, were taken from the Marlboro Jail and hurried to Baltimore.

With them went a squad of approximately 15 Federal agents who had been brought from the Baltimore office of the Internal Revenue Department to engage in what is described as one of the greatest man-hunts in the history of southern Maryland.

All but a few agents withdrew from the scene of the still, 1 mile northeast of Forestville, which has been under constant guard since the shooting.

They declared, however, that they would continue a relentless search "until the case has been cleared." It was not made known whether one of the men under arrest did the shooting.

What action will be taken in Baltimore will depend largely on whether Thomas recovers, said Investigator L. J. Nay, who was at the still at the time of the shooting. Thomas is still in a serious condition at Providence Hospital, suffering from gunshot wounds in the abdomen. He allegedly was shot from ambush while arresting one of the still operators.

If it is decided to try the men on Federal warrants, a hearing will probably be given them within a few days before United States Commissioner J. Frank Supplee, Baltimore.

Meanwhile, Washington police, who connect the Maryland shooting with the shooting of Motorcycle Patrolman S. T. Creech, said last night there were no further developments from their angle.

Creech, who is recovering in Emergency Hospital from a gunshot wound in the shoulder, engaged in a gun battle with an automobile occupied by several men whom police connect with the still operators. Creech apprehended the automobile on Pennsylvania avenue southeast shortly after the Maryland shooting.

West Virginia Man Killed While Hunting

Point Pleasant, W. Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Sherman White, 31, was shot to death today while on a hunting trip. Melvin Myers, his companion, is being held pending the coroner's verdict.

Myers says his gun was discharged accidentally, the trigger probably having been touched by a bush as he turned on hearing a shot from White's gun.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

Don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co —Advt.

Kiwanians Hear Roper's Assistant

Dickinson Says Business Has Found Public's View.

Business today stands at the crossroads, the recovery program needs the business man and the Nation needs the recovery program, John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, told members of the Kiwanis Club at their luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Dickinson spoke on "The Progress of the New Deal."

"One of the greatest things that has happened in the last year and a half has been the awakening of business to the public point of view," Mr. Dickinson declared.

15-Year-Old Youth Pony Show Judge

Otto Furr, Jr., to Act at Purcellville.

Purcellville, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Otto Furr, jr., 15, of Middleburg, Va., whose knowledge of horseflesh ranks with that of experienced horsemen, will judge the ponies at the children's pony and pet show, which will be held at the Fair Grounds in Purcellville Saturday afternoon. Youngsters on this committee are Betty Lyon, Sandy Speer, Bonnie Graham, Frances Bell, Leroy Beans and Jimmie Blackwell. Eight pony classes will be shown.

Jack Thomas and Pershing Larrick will judge the pets. Entries have been made for all kinds of pets, including pigs, alligators, dogs, cats, chickens, rabbits, calves and bantams. A class for the oddest pet is listed. Prizes and ribbons will be awarded.

There will be races in kiddy cars and tricycles for preschool children and pupils in the first grade. These will be followed with bicycle, three-legged, sack and wheelbarrow races for the graded school children, and the pony show will close the day's sport.

Sight-Saving Classes Urged

Described as Urgent Need in District Schools by W. L. Watts.

Orange, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Developments of sight-saving classes is sorely needed in District of Columbia schools, W. L. Watts, executive secretary of the Virginia Commission for the Blind, said here today.

Mr. Watts stopped here to arrange the exhibit of the Richmond workshop for the blind at the bicentennial celebration. He pointed out that some activity in preserving the sight of weak-visioned pupils had been carried out to some degree in Washington, but that a far greater development is needed.

The sight-saving classes now in use in the public schools of Richmond, Norfolk and Roanoke give special aid to the pupils whose vision is sufficiently powerful to keep them out of sanitariums but not strong enough to give them full benefit of their school instruction, Mr. Watts said.

The most common eye weakness among children is myopia, a form of near-sightedness, the secretary declared. Persons afflicted with myopia, he continued, are usually the ones who spend most of their time in indoor activities with consequent eye strain. Treatment and prevention of excess eye strain is rendered by means of special "clear-type" books and adjustable desks in the classrooms.

Establishment of such classes, Mr. Watts said, would be an economy to the public school system because many students now carried for several years in the same grade could advance with their schoolmates if defective eyesight were corrected.

Virginia, With Only 3 Regulars Back, Faces Dismal Year on Grid

Tricky Plays Counted On By Tebell

Teams Suffering From Too Much Pressure From Faculty.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Sept. 27.—"Hold 'em, Virginia!"

That exclamation point isn't misplaced, either, friends. It will be absolutely necessary for the Cavaliers to hold 'em this season. Virginia is slated to operate chiefly within the shadow of its own goal posts during the coming year and the zenith of its hopes in major games are represented by a scoreless tie.

It is to be presumed that they are still paying off on touchdowns in Virginia as well as the rest of the Nation, and in that connection, the University of Virginia team is virtually physically bankrupt. Get the point?

Head Coach Gus Tebell may manage to get the ball into the hands of a couple of capable receivers, but battering it through or getting it around Virginia's own line is his problem, and the answer is defying the best coaching minds here.

Scholarships Taboo.

Football at Virginia is suffering from an overdose of the soft-pedal applied in high faculty quarters. The school heads have put scholarships so far out of reach of the athletes, only the wealthier lads can compete. Thus the stream of talent that finds its way into Virginia colleges finds no inlet at Virginia U. At the suggestion of spring practice, the faculty shudders with fear for its honor.

It has been thus for the last four years, during which football at Virginia has steadily declined. Cavalier teams that used to romp through the State opposition, with its State titles a foregone conclusion, are no more. The State's biggest college has been a push-over on the gridiron.

Tebell's 1934 team is comprised wholly of the graduates of Virginia Freshman teams of the last three years, and Virginia Freshmen teams of the last three years have the dubious record of winning the sum total of four games, which ought to give you an idea of the caliber of football they have been playing at Virginia.

Three Regulars Return.

Ousted Coach Fred Dawson bequeathed to Coach Tebell one regular 1933 lineman and two regular backs. And that 1933 team's record is not calculated to set the hearts of Virginia alumni and students aflutter. Last year Virginia was tied by Hampden-Sydney, beat Randolph Macon, lost a 75-to-0 game to Ohio State, lost to Columbia, Navy, V. M. I., Washington and Lee and North Carolina, tied V. P. I. and beat Maryland.

On Saturday they commence business for 1934 by taking on an inferior Hampden-Sydney team, and the next week they meet Navy at Washington, before plunging full into a schedule that brings 'em to grips with St. John's of Annapolis, Dartmouth, their three big State rivals, and Maryland and North Carolina.

Tebell long since has become convinced that if Virginia scores against a major opponent, it will be by the medium of a pass or a trick play. That Virginia line is big, but as green as the stadium grass. Thus he has had his squad experimenting with double and triple lateral passes, short passes over the line, reverse plays and end runs. Getting through that Virginia line is an idea he has virtually abandoned as hopeless.

Fryberger Counted On.

The one back that Tebell hopes his team may be able to shake loose is Phil Fryberger, a Duluth, Minn., lad who won his letter as a substitute last year. He is the shiftiest runner on the squad and packs virtually all of Tebell's offensive guns. A high-strung youth, Fryberger is always withheld from the starting line-up.

As his chief running mate, Fryberger will have Capt. Tommy Johnston, a big 200-pounder who last year specialized as a blocker. Johnston is a triple threat, but his ball-carrying is far overshadowed by his kicking and his passing.

With Virginia due to play a defensive game this season, it is Johnston's kicking that looms most vital to the team's success. Tebell is hoping that his captain's long boots will put the ball deep in the enemy territory after Virginia is forced to surrender possession.

Helpless in Open.

He has Spencer Berger, the 1933 full back, as another regular member of his ball-carrying quartet, but once beyond the scrimmage line, Berger, who is strictly a plunger, can gain few yards. In the open he is virtually helpless.

Garnett or Caldwell will be the fourth man in the back field. Garnett played six minutes last

Rommel and Bing Miller Lose Jobs With Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (Spl.). Bing Miller, veteran outfielder, and Eddie Rommel, former ace pitcher, announced today that they will not be with the Philadelphia Athletics after this season. Both have been serving as coaches with the team and acting as Manager Connie Mack's lieutenants on the diamond.

Miller began his big league career in 1921 in Washington. He was traded to Philadelphia the following January and has been with the club since excepting for the latter part of the 1926 season and 1927 when he was on the St. Louis roster.

Rommel's last active season on the mound was 1930 when he won nine games and lost four. He spent all of his major league career with the Athletics, coming to the club from Newark in 1920.

U. S. Women Golfers Tied By British

Van Wie-Glutting Are Held Even in Day's Feature Match.

By Dave Herman.

AMERICA'S feminine golf stars, heavy favorites to retain the Curtis Cup, were held to a draw by Great Britain's fighting team in yesterday's Scotch foursomes at Chevy Chase course in a renewal of the international matches born two years ago at Wentworth, England.

After a day of hectic and mediocre golf, in which a cruel rainstorm midway of the afternoon blasted all hopes of good scoring, the Yankee and British golfers broke even with 1½ points each.

In 1932, the Americans got off to a flying start in the doubles, but yesterday the British were equal to the occasion. The count now deadlocked, both teams will pin their hopes for victory on the sturdy shoulders of 12 golfers in today's singles matches, which will start at 1:30 p. m.

Van Wie Team Is Tied.

Perhaps the keenest disappointment of the day was the failure of Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, National champion, and Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey titleholder, to win from Pam Barton, 17-year-old British sensation, and Molly Gourlay, veteran of many a soul-stirring golf battle. After a ding-dong match, in which the fortunes of both teams shifted with kaleidoscopic rapidity, they finished all even on the eighteenth green, each sharing half a point.

Garnett played six minutes last

This was perhaps the most dramatic struggle of the three, with every shot on the last three holes being vitally important in the ultimate decision.

America's winning twosome was composed of Maureen Orcutt, the long-driving Englewood, N. J., star, who has both political and golf ambitions, and Mrs. L. D. Cheney, of San Gabriel, Calif., a former Western champion. They gave Uncle Sam 1 point by defeating Diana Fishwick, 23-year-old former British champion, one-time conqueror of Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, nonplaying American captain, and Wanda Morgan, a British star of note, 2 up. This match was sternly contested, the English golfers faltering on the fourteenth, fifteenth and eighteenth holes, after a hole-for-hole battle on the first nine.

British Take Match.

The British came over the top in the third and final match of the day when Diana Plumpton, English ace, and Mrs. J. B. ("Pat") Walker, of Ireland, who styles herself an "Internationalist," laid waste to the hopes of Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City, a three-time Western champion, and Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Iowa, present Western titleholder. Grabbing the lead early in the match, the British refused to yield their ground and turned back the Americans by 2 and 1 for their own point—a precious 1 point, believe you me.

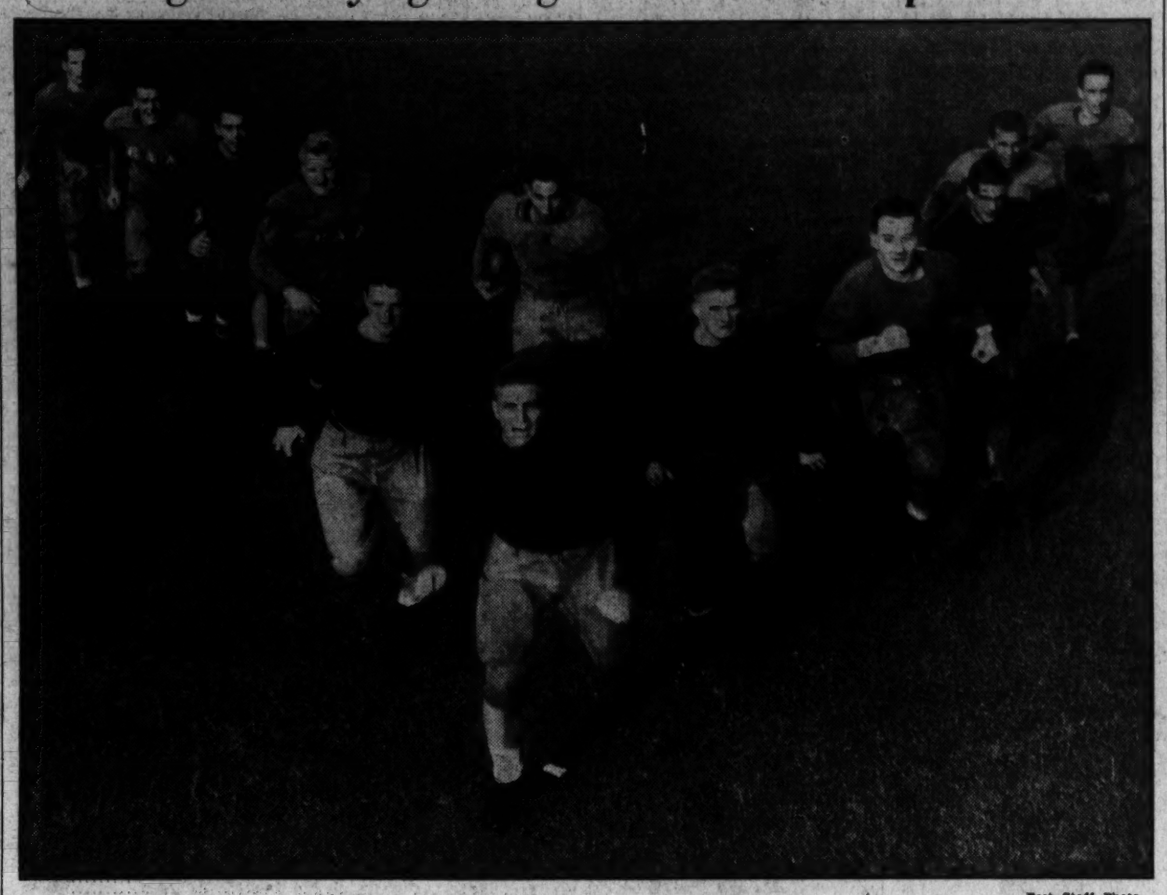

While a crowd estimated at 2,000 generously applauded the fine shots of the players from both teams, spectators could not wax enthusiastic over the scoring of the golfers for the entire proceedings.

In fact, the scoring was most disappointing. As fate would have it, Miss Van Wie and Miss Glutting matched the 89 for the 18 holes tallied by their British opponents, Miss Gourlay and Miss Barton, although the foreign twosome was a shot the better on the outgoing nine.

Miss Orcutt and Mrs. Cheney combined their efforts for a 45—41—86 against the 89 aggregated by Miss Fishwick and Miss Morgan.

When Miss Plumpton and Miss Walker ended their match with Mrs. Hill and Miss Robinson on the seventeenth green the situation as regards medal scoring was this: The Americans were out in 43, as against a 41 for the British; the Americans were 3 over for the next eight holes and the invaders shot the outgoing side in 41, were 2 up, and negotiated the next eight holes in 3 over par.

G. U.'s Varsity Held to 7-0 By Frosh

Gibeau Makes Only Score Late in Last Period; Hagerty Pleased.

PLAYING in ankle-deep mire, Georgetown's varsity yesterday eked out a 7 to 0 victory over the freshmen in a practice game on Hilltop field. The score is no reflection on the varsity's ability—you should have a look at the freshmen in action.

Don Gibeau, a little fellow with a lot of football in his system, lunged over for the only score of the game late in the fourth period. He made it in two tries—a 15-yard gallop to the 2-yard mark and an end run for the score.

Slim, slippery Franky Hashey, a half back of the Johnny Bozek type, backed the varsity up in its own territory throughout the first half and kept it there with as fine a brand of punting as one could hope to see under the unfavorable conditions. Hashey also reeled off a pair of 15-yard runs.

Hagerty Is Pleased.

Coach Jack Hagerty was well pleased with the work of his men, particularly that of the line men. Bill Downer, Frank Williamson and Mike Chappa sparkled on the defense, going through continually to smear plays before the ball carrier could get underway.

Joe Saverine, diving through center for gains of 8 and 10 yards; Chubby Parcells and Joe Meglin looked best on the offense. Meglin did not get going until late in the game when he tore off a brace of 25-yard runs that put the pigskin in position for Gibeau's touchdown runs.

Hagerty intends to work on plays and plays only from now until the season's opener next week with Mount St. Mary's. The squad emerged from yesterday's drill in good physical condition.

White Sox Slug Rowe, Beating Champs, 11-0

Detroit, Sept. 27 (AP).—The White Sox pounded "Schoolboy" Rowe and Fred Marberry all over the lot today and defeated the champion Tigers, 11 to 0, behind George Earnshaw's seven-hit pitching. The Tigers contributed five errors to their defeat.

Duke-V. M. I. Encounter Tops Conference Card Tomorrow

WITH many misgivings and some alarm, Southern Conference football teams, easing up on their heavy work yesterday, scanned ominous reports from rival training camps and awaited tomorrow's call to battle, the Associated Press reported.

Down at Durham Duke's Blue Devils packed their duffel in preparation for today's journey, by easy stages, to Lexington, Va., where they'll oppose an enthusiastic and optimistic Virginia Military Institute eleven in the first championship game of the season.

Whatever else the Devils may find in the 11 lads who start for the Cadets, they won't discover an inferiority complex. Depending largely on the same performers who a season ago took a terrific drubbing at Durham, Coach Bill Raftery has said, in effect, "They can't play but 11 men against you and you're just as good as they are." He's proud of his battle-scarred veterans, but frankly concerned about replacements.

Duke Brings Veterans.

Duke will bring a half hundred veterans and sophomores to Lexington, stopping en route this afternoon and night at Natural Bridge before proceeding on to the camp of the enemy.

If the Devils find the Cadets tough to handle the situation will be typical of what most other Southern Conference elevens will encounter. Washington and Lee, minus the services of 257-pound Tubby Owings, who suffered an ankle injury, will try to repeat at Lexington, Ky., last season's triumph over Kentucky's Wildcats.

Clemson's Tigers, none too impressive in their opener with Presbyterian College, will have had to go a long way to handle Georgia Tech's second eleven, and Virginia Tech will be distinctly the underdog in the battle against Temple's team at Philadelphia.

Wake Forest Strong.

Meanwhile, Carl Snavely, eager to make a good impression in his first game as coach of the North Carolina team, faced the exceedingly difficult task of turning back what appears to be one of the strongest Wake Forest elevens in years. The Tarheels, rated as one of the best teams in the conference, will be outweighed decisively by the Deacon's smart, veteran combination.

Slim Rosie Is Winner Of Chicago Feature

Jockey Derrell McCown rode Slim Rosie, which led the small field in the 5½-furlong contest from start to finish. L. M. Severson's Spicate was second, a head back of the victor. The Dixiana Stables' Hastinola finished third.

Slim Rosie went to the post public choice, and ran the distance in 1:09 1-5. Mutuels paid $5.56.

Terrapins Pick Line-up for St. John's

Lengthy Signal Drill Held; Scrimmage With C. U. Is Called Off.

ELEVEN good men and true—well, true any way—were selected yesterday to serve on the official reception committee for Maryland tomorrow at College Park. The committee is to welcome St. John's of Annapolis on its annual visit to Byrd Stadium. How welcome the Johnnies will be remains to be seen.

Maryland's starting line-up will read: Ennis and Buscher, ends; Birkland and Stalfort, tackles; Farrell and Simpson, guards; Andorka, center; Sothron, quarter; Nelson and Sachs, halves, and Gormley, full back. All are veterans with the exception of Andorka, Birkland and Gormley.

Coach Jack Faber sent the entire squad through another lengthy signal drill yesterday, foregoing the scheduled scrimmage with Catholic U. to avoid injuries. Another light workout this afternoon will end training for the initial conflict of the season.

Four former Washington high school stars will be on the opposite side of the ball when the teams face off tomorrow. Angie Lamond, and the DeLisio brothers, Ed and Leonard, attended Central, while Gordon Boucher prepped at Landon School. The Bay City eleven is stronger than it has been in recent years and Coach Tody Riggs, a Maryland alumnus, is not hoping for a close score, but an upset.

Riggs has veterans in the tackle, guard, center and full back positions. He feels Maryland has a decided advantage on his team in experience, but has voiced confidence in the rookies rounding out his machine. St. John's will go into action with L. DeLisio and Lee, ends; Lotz and Weeks, tackles; Boucher and Lamond, guards; Donohue, center; Bossert or Smith, quarter back; Wagner or Snibbee and Sutton, half backs; E. DeLisio, full back.

Errors Help St. Louis Score 5 Runs in First; N. Y. Fall Laid to Ott

FRANKIE FRISCH'S fighting band of St. Louis Cardinals chopped down the New York Giants' National League lead to a paltry half-game yesterday as officials of the circuit, for the first time in baseball history, completed plans for a possible pennant play-off.

While the Giants were idle, the Cardinals beat Cincinnati's tail-end Reds, 8 to 5, in the opening contest of their final four-game series. This seventeenth victory in their last 22 games left the Cards just 3 percentage points behind New York. Their standing follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
New York	93	58	.616
St. Louis	92	58	.613

Now the Cards can deadlock the Giants for the pennant if they win their three remaining games, while the Giants take their remaining two with Brooklyn. The final standing then would be:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
New York	95	58	.621
St. Louis	95	58	.621

Cards Score 5 Runs In First; Win, 8-5

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Cardinals whittled the New York Giants' National League lead down to a mere half game today by defeating the last-place Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 5, in a game which saw very little baseball of championship caliber. The Giants, who had an open date, were unable to defend their lead.

As a result of this combination of affairs in the keenest championship race in the circuit in years, the Cards have an opportunity to tie for the lead tomorrow, when they play the Reds again and New York has another day of idleness. That would put the ultimate decision up to the last two days of the season, when they both get into action again, the Giants facing Brooklyn and the Cards still encountering Cincinnati.

Errors Are Costly.

A "blow-up" by Gordon Slade, Cincinnati shortstop, right at the start was the deciding factor in today's struggle. The first three plays in the Cardinal half of the opening inning went his way and he made errors on all three of them. That gave St. Louis its first run and upset Paul Derringer so that he yielded three hits and the Cards had five runs before the inning ended. The rest of the way they had a fight on their hands to protect that lead, as Lefty Bill Walker wilted under a Cincinnati attack in the fifth and sixth innings and finally was removed when the Reds stopped just one run short of a tie.

At this danger point the cards came through with a counter-assault against Si Johnson which netted three tallies, the last on Joe

Giants, Idle, Attempt To Shake Off Jitters

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (AP).—Manager Bill Terry gave his skidding Giants a holiday today, hoping the lay-off would help them get a grip on themselves and shake off the jitters which are threatening to knock them out of the National League championship.

Today and tomorrow are open dates on the schedule. Then the official curtain will ring down with two all-important tussles with the Dodgers, Saturday and Sunday, at the Polo Grounds.

But instead of ordering his men to the park for fire drills, Terry told them to stay away from the arena and try to get their minds off their misery—if possible. Most of the Giants spent an uneasy afternoon around scoreboards as the Cardinals began their decisive four-game series with the Cincinnati Reds.

Bid Lead Fades.

Since the New Yorkers hit the toboggan three weeks ago they have dropped 11 of 21 starts and

Stegal Takes Place From Torfrida

Mrs. Heighe's Colt Up in Closing Strides to Win by Neck.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

HAVRE DE GRACE Race Track, Sept. 27.—Brown Twig, whose old man was Brown Bud, proved he is a chip off the old block today when he bounded over a field of the better 2-year-olds gathered at this course. The colt, the property of Mrs. R. H. Heighe, was a full neck ahead of G. D. Widener's Stegal which, in turn, led the Brandywine Stable's Torfrida, the favorite, to the imaginary wire.

The race had a Washington angle, in fact, a Washington Post, angle, for Brown Twig was expertly ridden by young Johnny Sullivan, son of the Capital A. A. U. official. Sullivan, a former Post carrier boy, rode as if he had Man o' War under him and came through with a masterful piece of timing to take the 5½-furlong test—clubbed the Old Dominion—in a beautiful stretch drive.

Twig Begins to Run.

With half of the distance covered there were few in the crowd who would have given a plugged nickel for Brown Twig's chances. He was galloping along in the second flight and against the rail at that. In the meanwhile, Airarix and Torfrida were occupying the spotlight. They staged a sizzling battle for the pace-setting honors which apparently Sullivan wished to dodge. After that pair had literally ran their tongues out, Sullivan turned Brown Twig loose in the stretch.

In a few quick leaps the colt dove between the tiring leaders, with Sullivan doing everything in the jockeys' finishing book. The three came over the line in wedge fashion with Brown Twig at the point.

Brown Twig's victory was anticipated and he closed a heavily played second choice at a $5.70 mutuel. He ran the race in 1:06 3-5 over a track that was termed "good" following a heavy afternoon downpour.

Cards Win

Held to Seven Hits.

In all four pitchers worked for the Reds and limited St. Louis to seven hits, all bu one of which figured in the scoring. The Reds belted Walker, Dazzy Vance and Tex Carleton for 13 less effective blows.

The first inning told the tale when Pepper Martin hit to Slade and the shortstop made a wild throw; Jack Rothrock dumped a bunt in front of the plate and Slade dropped Lombardi's throw to second; on Medwick's grounder Slade fumbled. Then Bill Delancey and Ernie Orsatti hit a pair of singles and Leo Durocher doubled to send home the fourth and fifth runs.

Little Tony Freitas took up the mound burden and limited the Cards to a single hit while Cincinnati brought the count back to 5-4, while Walker gave up two runs in the fifth, forcing one in with a balk, and let Bottomley open the sixth with a double. Hits by Lombardi and Comorosky and a pass brought in the two sixth-inning runs after Vance took the hill.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BACK FENCE, $6.10, $2.80, $2.40; COMMONWEALTH, $3.10, $2.50; COMMUNIST, $2.70.

BACK FENCE sprinted into an easy lead after breaking swiftly, saved ground when placed to a drive, then barely lasted to stall off COMMONWEALTH. Latter, very sluggish in the early racing, found racing room on inside when rounding the far turn, closed with a tremendous rush and was going much the fastest at the end. COMMUNIST weakened badly in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:22. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's br. g. (2), by Brown Bud—Zenodia. Trained by J. A. Boniface. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:06 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROWN TWIG, $5.70, $3.40, $2.30; STEGAL, $4.60, $2.50; TORFRIDA, $2.10.

BROWN TWIG, weakly handled early, was bothered midway of turn, luckily found racing room on inside and closed with a rush to get up in the last 20 yards. STEGAL improved his position on outside, then came willingly. TORFRIDA hung badly after taking command in the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; nonwinners at the meeting. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:51. Winner, W. R. Kirkpatrick's b. g. (6), by My Play—Xenora. Trained by P. Holman. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:49 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIMMY D., $10.70, $6.20, $6.20; RETRIBUTION, $8.20, $5.50; McDONALD H., $44.20.

JIMMY D. outran his field into the back stretch to assume a brief lead, met persistent efforts from FLUFFY LEE and held RETRIBUTION safe after moving clear. RETRIBUTION worked his way up slowly, was placed to a strong drive after six furlongs and came stoutly approaching the finish. McDONALD H. fought it out stoutly in final test. FLUFFY LEE made frequent bids, but faltered nearing the end. ARAB dropped back slightly at the final turn, came again and closed stoutly on the outside.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; nonwinners at the meeting. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:21½. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORVINE, $17.60, $8.40, $3.80; SUN WAY, $11.50, $4.50; PENCADER, $2.90.

CORVINE, sent into the thick of contention, held on stubbornly and just lasted to stall off SUN WAY. Latter showed improvement with blinkers added to his equipment, went strongly while in tight quarters in early stages, then fought it out strongly when drawing abreast of the winner. PENCADER crowded over on his field at final turn, but closed gamely after bothering POST BRIGADE. LOUIS MERRYMAN stopped badly.

Bostwick Four Defeated by Greentree

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP). The Eastcott and Greentree teams galloped through to victory in the first round of the National Open Polo Championship at the Meadowbrook Club today. Playing on International Field, Eastcott defeated Aknusti in a close match, 10 to 9, and Greentree ran away from the Aiken Knights, 10 to 1.

Cecil Smith, of the losing Western team, in the recent intersectional series, was in a scoring mood, counting nine goals for the Greentree, four while riding with Harold E. Talbott, jr., Gerald Balding and R. E. Strawbridge, jr. Pete Bostwick's Knights were unable to stem the fury of the Texas cowpunchers' hitting, Barney Balding scoring their only tally in the opening period.

Takes Big Lead.

Eastcott, with the two Hoppins teaming with C. V. Whitney and Stephen (Laddie) Sanford, took a commanding 9-to-4 lead over W. A. Harriman's Aknusti team at the half-way mark. Aknusti staged a strong finish, however, a rally in the final chukker just falling short of tying the score.

Eastcott will play the defending Aurora team in one of the semi-finals Saturday, while on Sunday Greentree will meet Templeton in the other. The final will be played Tuesday.

Giants Idle

tossed away six games of their seven-game lead.

Their faithful followers are convinced the protracted batting slump of young Mel Ott is the big factor in the rout of the Giants.

Ott has been skidding steadily since the middle of August. In the last four games he has been to bat 16 times without getting anything that resembled a base hit.

In the 37 games prior to August 17 Ott made 54 hits in 139 times at bat for an average of .388. These accounted for 42 Giant runs.

Only .243 Average.

Since that date the Giant outfielder has made only 34 hits in 140 trips to the plate for a .243 average.

Just whom Terry will select to do the hurling in the two jousts with the Dodgers remains a secret, but there are indications that Fred Fitzsimmons will start one contest, with the odds favoring Roy Parmelee, the most consistent winner for the Giants of late, for the other game.

Meanwhile, across the bridge in Flatbush, Col. Casey Stengel and his rollicking men are smiling sinister smiles and licking their chops in anticipation of knocking the New Yorkers off a couple of times over the week-end.

Play-Off Dates.

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, announced that if a play-off series is necessary to decide the pennant, the first game will be played in St. Louis Tuesday, October 2, and the next in New York the following day with the help of special train connections. If the series goes into a third game, it will be played at the Polo Grounds on Thursday.

Heydler also said in the event of a play-off, he will ask Commissioner Landis to postpone the start of the world's series at Detroit to October 5 or 6.

While all this was going on, both the Giants and the Cardinals continued to accept world's series reservations, just like nothing had happened.

4 Winners Ridden By Jockey Peters

All His Mounts Favorites at Rockingham Park.

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Sept. 27 (AP).—For the second time this week, Maurice "Moose" Peters, 17-year-old apprentice rider from Brantford, N. Dak., dominated the program of racing at this track as he kicked home four winners and a second in seven races today and increased his margin of leadership over Rockingham's current crop of jockeys.

All four winners were favorites.

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Havre de Grace Race Track, Sept. 27.

The Bennings horses just weren't there today. They ran here, there and everywhere. They were in and out of the money, but they did not visit the main pay-off station in any of the seven races. McDonald H., our show horse in the sixth, ran where we predicted at a $44.20 mutuel. However, we were blanked for the first time since the meeting opened. Tonight I called a meeting of the firm to see if something couldn't be done about it. Clocker Mike said that Trainer Joe's eyesight was failing and that he was giving the wrong identification of horses. Trainer Joe retaliated (pardon my Southern accent) by saying that Clocker Mike had sand in his speed watch. I thought a lot about both of them, but I'm doubtful if it matched what they said about me when they got together later in the night.

BILL.

First race—The Howe Stable's Nautch appears to be a standout in the day's opener. Runs best on an off track, but has enough to beat these on any kind of a course. The short distance should aid Soldier's Dream, one that backed up in the stretch last time out. Indian News was away poorly here the other day. A better break will put this one close.

Second race—Dornoch goes right back for the Bennings dough. He stepped off a neat 6 furlongs for us, and unless Toytime shows sudden improvement I believe we will cash a bet. Easter Herald, the half-miler, is sharp and might surprise with a money appearance.

Third Race—The Labrot entry of Little Dinah and Tool Box seems to hold strong hand in this sprint. Both are fit racers and either can take the purse. Last Time is a possible upsetter. Ran well at Detroit.

Fourth race—I must confess that I'm not ready to toss out Triangular. Clocker Mike insists that this is a race horse and one ready to win. This field is of the average claiming run and may be the spot. Squeeze Out and Our David for the other awards.

Fifth race—Chatterdoo is in such rare form that I'm stringing along, despite the fact that One Chance won impressively here the other day. A tight bit, but I'll take the top one. Pass Shot for the show end.

Sixth race—Steelhead drops back in his own class tomorrow. Must give weight to the others and will have an apprentice rider at that. However, we are dealing with a fit-and-ready horse. Cherokee Sal and Justa Teacher, both winners over cheap ones, are dangerous.

Seventh race—Xandra has won two out of three and finished second on the occasion. This daughter of Chatterton meets about the same brand here. We haven't seen Coventry Queen's real race. Worth watching. Shasta Star for the minor award.

Veronica C. Victor In Aqueduct Race

High Hand II. Is Second by Length and Half.

Aqueduct Race Track, Sept. 27 (AP). A featureless card was offered here today. Form players began the day in encouraging fashion when John J. Robinson, jr.'s Veronica C. and J. A. Coburn's High Hand II, split choices at 9 to 5, ran one, two in the 5-furlong opening dash. A length and a half separated the pair passing the wire, with Mrs. Payne Whitney's Insomnia a length farther back. The time was 1:00 2-5.

Both Veronica C., a winner at Saratoga in her last appearance under silks, and Insomnia were unfortunate in the running. High Hand II, fractious at the gate, rushed into command a few strides after the start and got clear in a jiffy.

Virginia

year when he was able to break into the line-up and Cardwell, a sub for two seasons, lacks speed and has showed little improvement.

Garnett doubtless will play quarter back. Tebell has no other choice as a result of his intentions to use Johnson as a running back this year because of the scarcity of ball carriers. Bus Male, the 1933 freshman quarter back star, is hurt and out for the season.

Thus, we arrive at the situation in the line. Virginia last year had three all-conference linemen. Ray Burger, a tackle; Gene Wager, center, and John Dial, guard. All three were graduated.

Tackles and Guards.

At the tackles, Tebell will insert Leonard Trell, a 190-pound New York boy, to pair with Andrews, a sophomore. At guards, Kenneth Morton and Alfred Seccombe, a Washington lad, are slated to start. Seccombe was a third-string full back last year and Morton a sub end, which indicates how Tebell is manipulating his line.

Because he is the only center on the squad, George Hallett, a 178-pounder from Newport News, gets the job.

Tebell brightens a bit when the subject of ends is mentioned. At one flank he will have John Leys, the Lynchburg boy who caught the long pass against Navy last year. On the other end will be Cullen Wilkin, like Leys a basket ball player and an excellent receiver. But Wilkin is not a power on the defense.

Draws on Reserves.

Tebell has already drawn on his reserves, even before the season starts. Male, his best quarter back prospect, was hurt; Gene Munger, a half back, is seriously studying music and writing and quit the squad; Harry Martin, a tolerable half back last year, was critically injured in an automobile wreck, and Jessie Stocker, an Episcopal boy who was sure of a guard berth, has transferred to the engineering school.

This lack of reserves was illustrated last year when the Cavaliers demonstrated that they were only a 5-furlong football team. Last season they led V. M. I. for three quarters; led Columbia for three quarters, and V. P. I. for the same distance before collapsing in the final period, through sheer lack of reserve power.

Tebell's reserve strength is even weaker than was Dawson's.

Virginia will operate this season from the unbalanced line and the single wing back formation. In his own territory, Tebell will run his plays from punt formation. In scoring territory, Virginia will use the single wing back from close formation. In other words, they won't use the single wing back from close formation very often.

Alexandria High Eleven Drives to 12-0 Victory Over Central on Muddy Gridiron

Twins Upset Champions Of D.C.

Fones and Shu Stars; Former Runs 45 Yds. to Touchdown.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—An inspired and determined Alexandria High School eleven today plastered a 12-to-0 defeat on a heavier Central High aggregation on the rain-soaked Baggett's Field here before a crowd of 600.

Lee Fones and Paul Shu, Alexandria's triple threat backs, scored the points for the locals. Fones' fleetness and brilliant broken field running coupled with Chu's consistent line plunges were responsible for the decisive points.

Alexandria had the ball in scoring position the entire first half. They failed to tally, however, because of the stubborn defense of the Central eleven and the lack of coordination between the line and backs running interference. The slippery condition of the ball also stopped the Twins on several occasions.

Twins Begin to Click.

Immediately after intermission the Twins' offense began to click. Paul Shu, Jack Varney and Ewald carried the ball to the 15-yard line. John Nugent, alternate back and end, placed the oval on the 2-yard line when he broke loose on a triple reverse. Shu picked up another yard on a line smash, Varney was stopped at the line of scrimmage by Bush and Kline, Central's right tackle and end. Shu then ripped through the line for Alexandria's first touchdown on the next play, sheer force carrying a pair of the opposing linemen with the husky back.

Central elected to receive and returned Capt. Fritter's kick to their own 35-yard mark. After a series of unsuccessful attempts to penetrate the Twin's line, Dunlop, All-District quarter back, punted to Alexandria's 35-yard line. Lee Fones returned the kick to his own 47-yard line.

Alexandria scored its second six pointer on the next play.

Fones stepped back in a position as if to pass, receiving the ball from Beach, center. Fones faked a pass and dashed around right end, out stepping the Central secondary and crossed the final stripe standing up. From the side lines it looked as if that he was bottled up by three Central players near the line. However, he side stepped two would-be tacklers and outran the third.

Richardson, all-high selection, received a twisted ankle while running interference in the fourth quarter.

After a few futile thrusts at Alexandria's impenetrable line, Coach Coggins removed his regulars from the fray. A new line, from end to end, and a quartet of fresh ball carriers were entered. The second stringers marched to Alexandria's 35-yard line by short passes and off-tackle smashes. Wooten's accurate tosses to Vermillion played a major part in this advance.

Central Is Held.

Beach and Noble were the bulwarks of the Twins' defense. They were ably supported by Robinson, Pullman, Saunders and McCewan. John Nugent played another brilliant game at end. Shu's Tarzan-like tactics in backing up the line kept the Central backs from breaking into the open.

Frederick Winner At Soccer, 3 to 2

Turns Back Middletown; Outplayed at Start.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Frederick turned back Middletown in the opening game of the High School Soccer League before a large crowd on Cadet Field, 3 to 2. The Frederick girls defeated Middletown lassies in the initial field-ball tilt, 14 to 2.

Middleton outplayed Frederick in the first period of the soccer game. The valleyites presented a better passing attack, but fell down in front of the goal. While the ball was kept in Frederick's territory three-fourths of the period, the county lads were unable to follow up their advantage at the scoring line.

Celtics vs. Elks.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—The Fredericksburg Elks and Celtics will wind up their series at Fredericksburg Sunday.

Each team holds two wins against the same number of defeats. A victory for either team Sunday will take the series.

Vincent Benson, hard-hitting first baseman of the Celtics, will be given the once-over by Manager Joe Cronin of the Nats and President Clark Griffith at the ball park Saturday. Benson is a dangerous hitter and brilliant fielder. The impression he makes Saturday will determine whether or not he will get a berth with one of the minor league teams with whom the Washington ball club has a working agreement.

Brewers Play Kann's Nine In Series

Department Store Must Win to Stay in Race; G.P.O. Protest Fails.

DUE to the intervention of the weather man yesterday, there still remain three contenders in the running for The Post Association interleague week-day championship, but one of these may be eliminated in this afternoon's series battle between the crack Heurich Brewers and the youthful Kann's Store nine, champs of the Department Store League. The game is scheduled for the South Ellipse at 4 o'clock.

Kann's must win to stay in the series, as the Storemen have already dropped a game in the tourney. Government Printing Office will face the winner of today's battle.

The Post Association advisory board dismissed the protest of Government Printing Office Team, which alleged it failed to receive notification from the umpire concerning the termination of last Friday's game with Heurich Brewers. The game was called in the seventh inning to permit the erection of temporary stands for the wrestling matches.

Semi-Pro Gridmen Plan Split Season

Four Teams Entered in National City Loop.

Teams in the National City Semi-pro Football League will play a split season, with the winner of each round meeting in the deciding game for the title, it was announced last night by Vic Gauzza, president.

At present the Marions, Seaman Gunners, Maryland A. C. and Palace, four of the strongest elevens in unlimited ranks, are entered.

An interpretation meeting on present rules and changes will be held Wednesday at the Naval Receiving Station's recreation hall.

Coast Guard Riflists Win Principle Honors at Quantico

COAST GUARD marksmen came out on top in the one-team match and two of the three individual matches on the card at the Middle Atlantic States high-powered rifle and pistol matches over the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., yesterday, the third individual event going to a marine. All were rifle contests.

The one-team match was the regimental team championship, in which ten six-man teams competed. In winning the match, the New York division team of the Coast Guard shot a score of 554 out of a possible 600 points, getting 273x300 at 200 yards standing, and 281x300 at 600 yards prone.

The scores of the members of the team were: E. J. Jones, boatswain's mate, first class, 97x100; M. N. Cobb, boatswain's mate, second class, 93; J. Q. Alligood, chief boatswain's mate, 91; M. O. Wilson, boatswain's mate, first class, 90; Paul Goulden, chief boatswain's mate, 91; Walter Morrison, chief gunner's mate, 92.

The Quantico Marines team placed second with 553, with the Fifth Marines, Fleet Marine Force, in third place with 538. The Thirteenth U. S. Engineers were fourth with 533 and the First Infantry, Virginia National Guard, fifth with 531.

The Marines' only conquest was in the Wimbledon Cup match, 20 shots at 1,000 yards. Gunnery Sergt. W. A. Lee, of Ward Hill, Mass., was the winner with 100x100.

M. O. Wilson, Coast Guard, took the Coast Guard trophy rapid-fire match, 10 shots rapid fire kneeling or standing at 200 yards and 10 shots rapid fire prone at 300 yards. He had 50x50 at 200 yards and 49x50 at 300 yards for a 99x100 total. A tight scrap developed for second place between E. C. Jones, Coast Guard, and Sergt. K. E. Harker, Marines, requiring two shoot-offs at 300 yards.

William G. Nicholson, Washington, was high civilian with a score of 86.

C. F. Collins, yeoman, third class, was the Coast Guard's winner in the Scott Trophy match, 10 shots rapid fire prone at 300 yards. He nicked the target for a 50x50 score.

An examination of the record books has disclosed that one new record was established in the matches on Wednesday when Paul Goulden, chief boatswain's mate, Coast Guard, turned in a score of 98x100 to win the Navy Cup match, 20 shots at 200 yards standing. The previous record was 97.

Tech High Favored to Win Championship in Coach Poll

By John R. Vosburgh.

WE'VE always thought it would be fun to quiz a school teacher, so just to make a good job of a life-long ambition we picked on several yesterday—taking the high school football coaches as the victims.

You may, or may not, know it but the coaches are teachers in their off moments, or maybe they are coaches in their off moments. Anyway they teach some of the time and coach the rest of the time.

But to get back to that bright idea of ours of making a teacher squirm trying to answer some complicated questions.

"Who," we asked devilishly, "do you think will win the interhigh series?" Whereupon we chuckled a villainous heh-heh-heh and settled back in our seats to watch the teacher-coaches squirm.

Now you may not think that is a very hard question to answer, but you ought to see those teacher-coaches trying to answer it. It was a very touching sight to watch them as they tried to think up the right answer.

Irving Coggins, better known as Bert Coggins, coach of Central High's interhigh champions, was trying hard to give a good answer. Coach Coggins throws many an examination in mechanical drawing at poor, defenseless students and watches them trying to give good answers.

"That is a very hard question," said Mr. Coggins, "a very hard question, indeed. It is very hard to tell who is going to win at this time of the year."

Mr. Coggins did not say that it would be much easier any other time of the year, so he put down the following answer:

"I pick Tech to win, Central to place and Eastern to show." Then Mr. Coggins went home.

Elmer P. Hardell—in other words, Hap Hardell—who as coach at Tech has had a virtual monopoly on the interhigh championship since the early part of the Coolidge Administrations was a little better prepared than Mr. Coggins.

"I pick Central, Western and Tech in that order," declared Hap.

After making sure that Elmer P. really meant Western for the runner-up, since Western has never got that far since it was built, we called on Chief Charlie Guyon, Eastern's roly-poly coach. Mr. Hardell, by the way, said he thinks Western is going to have a mighty fine team. You can take that for better or worse. There may be no little truth in it, at that.

Chief Guyon had not even glanced at Mr. Coggins' paper, he said, but answered right off the bat: "I pick Tech, Central, Eastern." At this, the chief was dismissed.

Coach Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, was a little more vague. "I pick Tech, Eastern, Central," said he. Then he explained that Eastern has potentially the power for second place. Then he added that he likes Central, but continued that Eastern may develop in fine shape, so the first answer was accepted.

Coach Dan Ahearn, of Western, visibly affected that Coach Hardell had picked Western for second place, came right back and picked Tech for first place. "Central should get second," he said, "and Eastern third."

This ended the class. The marks will be announced at the end of the season.

Canada May Vie In Cup Races Next Year

Possibility of Syndicate Entering 1935 Yacht Is Discussed.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Possibility that Canadian sportsmen may form a syndicate to challenge for the America's Cup was the subject of talk in yachting circles tonight, despite skepticism of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club members, who believe the effort would be too expensive.

The idea of a Canadian challenge was brought up by Commodore James W. Barnes, of the Royal Lennebeacasis Yacht Club, who expressed the belief that a boat built in eastern Canada, and manned by deep-sea mariners, would be able to lift the cup from the New York Yacht Club.

Canada last challenged in 1881, when the Atlantic was defeated, and shortly afterward the America's Cup committee ruled that no inland boat could challenge for the trophy. This was pointed out by the Royal Canadian as precluding any chance of building a successful challenger, since most of Canada's yachting is on inland waters.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 27 (U.P.).—United States yachtsmen made it two straight triumphs today in their team match series with the Scottish 6-meter boat sailors for the British-American Cup.

The Yankee quartet finished first, second, fourth and fifth for a point total of 24¼ to the Britishers' 12.

Despite the lopsided score, the race was far closer and more interesting than yesterday's. The breeze was moderate to fresh from the west, and in the heavier going the British yachts gave their foemen more serious competition than they were able to do in yesterday's light weather.

The Americans need only one more race to take the first leg on the new trophy, placed in competition by the British after the United States won on the Solent two years ago. The Americans are favored to make it three straight tomorrow.

55-Cent Admission Fee Fixed by G.W. For Football Game

In line with its policy of setting minimum admission prices for its athletic events, the George Washington University Athletic Department has listed the price of admission to the Shepherd game Saturday at Central Stadium at 55 cents, including tax.

There will be only one price and seats will be sold on first-come, first-serve basis.

A special offer of 25 cents to children 18 years of age and under also is announced.

Arlington A. C. Game.

An unusual attraction is promised for Arlington County fans Sunday when Arlington A. C. engages a colored all-star aggregation from the ranks of the leading semi-pro teams in Virginia. The teams meet in a double-header, starting at 1 p. m.

Owensville Seeks Game.

The Owensville baseball team seeks a game for Sunday with an unlimited nine. For final arrangements call Falls Church 818-F-12.

Concord Needs Game.

Preview of Next Year's Nats In Yankee Games Tomorrow

A PREVIEW of the 1935 Washington Nationals will be unreeled tomorrow and Sunday at Griffith Stadium, where the rejuvenated Nats write finis to their hapless season. A double-header tomorrow and single game Sunday with the Yankees conclude the campaign.

Sunday's will be more than an ordinary ball game. It marks the end of a long and colorful career as an active ball player for Babe Ruth, the idol of every kid. Ruth, though slightly under the weather with a Charley horse, will be at his familiar post in right field the full nine innings of the final game.

Freddy Sington, Jakes Powell, Reese Diggs, Orville Armbrust and Sammy Cohen, recent additions to the Nat roster, will be seen in action over the week-end. It is their first and last appearance here this season. Al Schacht, managing the club in Joe Cronin's absence, has nominated Diggs and Armbrust for Saturday's games, the first of which starts at 1:15 o'clock.

Navy Stresses Pass Defense In Practice

Squad Drills in Downpour; Probable Line-up Is Picked.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Working for the most part in a heavy downpour of rain, the Naval Academy squad devoted the larger part of the afternoon to defense against the forward pass, in preparation for its opening game here Saturday against William and Mary.

Still uncertain as to some of his starting players, Hamilton stated today that his probable line-up would have Bull and Dornin on the ends; Lambert and Cutter, tackles; Capt. Burns and Vogel, guards; Schaecht, center; Pratt, quarter back; Borries and King, half back, and Clark, full back.

Veterans Picked.

In making these selections Hamilton has picked his veterans in most cases, though not entirely satisfied with their work in some cases. Zabriskie, guard, and Robert Shaw, center, are on the injured list, and this probably kept them out of the first pick.

Bull was picked in place of Glennon, who has been doing exceptional work in practice, but was injured early in the week. There is some doubt as to whether Young Bill Ingram, back field ace of the Plebes, will be able to play against the Catholic University Freshmen. He has had a bad charley horse and has not practiced this week.

The Plebe-Freshman game will start at 1 p. m., the Varsity event at 2:15 p. m.

On the Sidelines . . .

By Edward J. Neil.

IN no game does success come to the player who has financial support as in amateur golf.

You will notice that I did not say "to the player who has money," for this is an entirely different thing. Even in golf, you know, there are successful poor boys, but they are subsidized just as surely as our intercollegiate football players.

It is unfortunate that more of our promising young amateurs can not find someone to pay their way in the tournaments. If all the 14-year-olds with sound swings were given a chance, there might be another set of names to write about today.

Consider the average poor boy learning to play the game. He learns by imitation, having carried clubs around day after day during his summer vacation and after school. If you will stroll around in back of the caddy house next Saturday afternoon, you will see some of the finest golf swings in the town.

It was not unusual several years ago for the clubs to set aside days when the caddies could play on the course, but even this has been denied the boys most places now. Consequently, they get no opportunity to develop a complete game. They master the short shot, because they can find a small plot of ground in which to whack away with a mashie niblic. But they seldom develop a long-iron game for the simple reason that when they do play they are forced to play on public courses where they get very few midiron second shots to the green.

Job, Not a Game.

Successful golf is a job, not a game. You must play often over championship courses to perfect a game good enough to get you near the top in amateur competition. And this costs money.

What chance, for example would a poor boy have of getting enough money to enter, pay his transportation from the Middle West to Boston and back, and his keep while playing in the amateur championship unless he got help somewhere.

Fortunately, there are many sportsmen who realize this and are willing to help promising youngsters either by giving them jobs that pay far more than they would normally receive, or simply by giving them money to defray their expenses.

Johnny Goodman was fortunate enough to find someone to help him in this way, and so was Johnny Fischer, the other poor boy of the U. S. Walker Cup team. But most of the others developed their games because there was enough money available in the family to give them a chance at leisure time and all the equipment.

George Dunlap is an example of this. He has practically lived on the courses of Pinehurst ever since he was old enough to trickle a ball off the tee. Lawson Little, the British amateur champion from California, has been at it ever since he can remember and so has Francis Ouimet and Jack Westland, other members of the Walker Cup squad.

College Golf Helps.

Intercollegiate golf helps to remedy this situation by giving many youngsters a chance to play the game on fine courses without cost.

This develops players like Bob Kepler, the Ohio State golfer, who gave George Dunlap perhaps the hardest fight of his life in the finals of the intercollegiate championship over the Olympia Fields course in Chicago in 1931. In this match, Dunlap was at his best and the margin of his victory in the 36-hole test was two great approach shots which trickled into the cup.

Kepler, since getting out of Ohio State has had to go to work and has had little opportunity to play. Hence, his comparative obscurity since this match with Dunlap.

Takoma Pin League

In Takoma Suburban League games rolled on the Takoma alleys last night Takoma Paint and Hardware took two from Takoma Sea Food, the Auto Glass Shop won two from Stewart Bros. Photographers, Pioneer Press did the same to Fritz Billiards and Happy Five to Stansbury Cafe.

Bazzuro Engineering Co. took all three from Gligo, York Auto Supply made a clean sweep over Southern Railway and Shaeffer Motor Co. whitewashed Brooks Shade Shop. Jerry Dwyer (Shaeffer) annexed individual honors with a 157 game and 402 set. York Auto Supply had high game and set of 634 and 1,734.

Virginia Tech Ready for Temple

Coach Redd to Start Team That Swamped Roanoke, 21-0.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—Fighting triumphs on gridirons north of the Potomac in days past are spurring Virginia Tech's eleven to a spirited bid for victory over Pop Warner's Temple team.

When the Virginians troop into Temple Stadium, at Philadelphia, Saturday, they will carry in mind the wins of yesteryear over such outfits as Army, Navy, Colgate and others. They will remember valiant fights of their predecessors against teams of Princeton, Yale, Cornell, Pennsylvania and other Eastern top-notchers.

So it is no wonder that Virginia Tech is planning anything but a supine, defensive battle with Warner's Owls. Not quite up to the Temple standard in man power, the Old Dominion boys carry, nevertheless, enough gridiron dynamite to give most of the big outfits a busy afternoon.

Head Coach Henry Redd plans to start the same team that whipped Roanoke College, 21 to 0, in the opening game last week. There is a chance that Duncan Holsclaw, veteran half back, will be well of an injury and will call signals. Big Tris Huffman, 220-pound veteran at tackle, may displace one of the sophomores who started last Saturday.

The starting eleven will average about 188 pounds in the line and 174 in the back field.

Kramer Leads Federal League

Weather Bureau Shortstop Boasts .500 Average.

Harry Kramer, shortstop on the Weather Bureau Team, was the leading hitter of the Federal League in The Post Association with an enviable batting average of .500 in 21 games.

Adams and Culloty, of Treasury Nine, Philips and Logi, of Government Printing Office, and Pearson, of Interstate Commerce, were other consistent sluggers during the season.

Adjutant General Office and G. P. O. Federals, sectional winners, will meet for The Post Association title in a three-game series, starting Thursday.

Seventh-Inning Stretch Not Lucky, Figures Prove

NEW YORK (AP).—The white light of figures reveals the illusioning fact that it really does no good to get up and stretch at the seventh inning. The old custom is not lucky at all, or at least it was not for the first 100 games played in the National League this season.

The figures on the hundred games reveal that there actually are five other innings in which more runs are scored than in the seventh.

More runs were scored in the first than any other, with the third running second, while there were fewer runs scored in the fourth than any other with the exception of the ninth, which is often only half played.

The old theory of the lucky seventh holds for the opponents of the Gaints, however. More runs have been scored against the champions in this frame than in any other, but fortunately, they have scored more runs in the first and according to the percentages are usually far enough ahead to allow one or two runs in by the seventh.

For the Cubs, the third is at once their lucky and unlucky inning. They have scored more runs and had more scored against them in this frame than in any other.

The Cardinals, too, score more runs in the third, but they weaken in the eighth.

Indoor Baseball Game.

An indoor baseball game will provide entertainment for the National Recreation Congress meeting here next week. The game will be played on Tuesday in the Roosevelt Gym between Morris Bealle's Victory Post Team of the American Legion and the Y. M. C. A., starting at 5 o'clock.

Western and Gonzaga in Grid Tests

St. John's, Washington and Lee Are Foes in Games Today.

IT'S full steam ahead for Washington's schoolboy football teams from now on. Six high and prep school elevens offer a busy two-day program starting this afternoon.

Including Central's game with Alexandria yesterday, it could actually be called a three-day program involving eight schools.

This afternoon at 3:15 Western High and St. John's Prep open their seasons in their annual battle at Western Stadium, while 15 minutes later Roosevelt plays its first game of the 1934 campaign with a veteran alumni team as the opposition, at the new Roosevelt stadium.

While these two games are being fought out, Gonzaga Prep, heavy choice to gain the prep school title, will be commencing its season against a strong Washington-Lee High team at Ballston, Va.

Central Plays Again.

Then tomorrow, Central, barely recovered from its tussle with Alexandria High yesterday, travels to Woodberry Forest, Va., for a game with Woodberry Forest Academy. It will be Central's second game in three days. Tomorrow will also mark Eastern's second game of the week. The Lincoln Parkers travel to Alexandria to meet Episcopal High, a team Eastern nosed out 7-to-6 last season. Tech is the only high school in the city not playing this week-end.

The Western-St. John's fracas stands out as the most attractive home game today. Both teams are somewhat unknown quantities. For St. John's, it will be the first step taken under the regime of its new athletic director and grid coach, "Hoss" Holbrook. Over 80 youngsters turned out for the St. John's team and things are looking upward at the little Catholic school which has been traveling in an athletic rut for several years.

Coach Holbrook's starting line-up today will find Regis and Pappadeas, ends; Horstman and Batchelder, tackles; J. Kirby and Sheehan, guards; Lanman, center; Simone, quarter; Schead and either Walton or Dunn half back, and Barrett, full. St. John's crack center, Knealy, is unable to play due to a bad cut over the eye received in scrimmage.

Ahearn Names Starters.

Coach Dan Ahearn of Western is starting Huck Wynne and Bucholtz at ends; Krause and Parker, tackles; Schleicher and Love, guards; Capt. Barney Sullivan, center; Hoskinson, quarter; Summberbell and Maloney, halves, and Hasley, full back.

Among the members of the alumni team facing Roosevelt are Ivan Koontz, Charlie May, Dutch Strosser, Frank Cavanaugh and, Jimmy Garner, all reliables of past Roosevelt teams. Coach Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, has announced a tentative starting line-up consisting of Kolius and Beamer, ends; J. Papanicolas and Witt, tackles; Sheehan and Baroni, guards; Considine, center; Saur, quarter back; Hill and Spivok, half backs, and Lyman, full back.

The Washington and Lee defense against Coach Orrel Mitchell's light but fast Gonzaga crew should furnish a bristling battle throughout. Despite a bad shoulder, Malcolm Newkirk, one of the best quarter backs in local scholastic football, is expected to start at his usual position today. Tom Kearns, Paul Grace and Jimmy Boyle appear to be the other likely back field choices.

Fred McCoy has one end berth clinched, while Phil Roach, Charles Merkle and Fresco Burns are fighting it out for the other. Gonzaga has been especially weak in its tackle material. John McCrae and Charlie Fenwick are the probable starting tackles, with Widmayer at one guard and Joe Tibidoe at the other.

The Eastern-Episcopal game tomorrow is a toss-up, but Central is a favorite to come back with a victory over Woodberry Forest.

4 Allegany Teams Join Soccer Loop

Two More May Be Added by Next Week.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—At least four teams will be members of the Allegany County Soccer League this season. Six clubs had representatives at the meeting at Frostburg State Teachers College last night, and there is a possibility that two more elevens may definitely join by next week.

Westvaco, Lonaconing, CCC Camp of Grantsville, Celanese A. A., Mount Savage and Teachers College were the organization represented.

Teachers College and Mount Savage have until next Monday to accept berths in the league.

Hugo Keller was renamed president and Raymer Ferrell, Westvaco, secretary-treasurer.

Boys Club Will Meet At Macfarland School

A mass meeting will be held next Monday night at Macfarland Junior High School for the purpose of permanently organizing a "Young Men's Community Club." This club was started last fall for boys, between 16 and 25 years of age, having an enrollment of 100 members, and it is expected that it will be increased to 500 or over.

The purpose of the club is to promote good-fellowship, athletic games, leagues in basket ball, indoor baseball, volley ball, boxing and wrestling and many other activities.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

"ANYONE who wants to do anything in radio is cordially invited to come up to WMAL," is the latest statement from Shannon Allen, WRC'S genial, energetic director of "Washington Airbreaks."

That invitation first was extended months ago, and, as a result, Washington has been treated to some very good local entertainment each Saturday night in a half-hour show at 10 p. m. from WRC. Even now graduates of "Airbreaks" are being auditioned for commercial shows, while others will go on N. B. C. Southeastern network starting Monday.

Recently 57 people crowded the stairs, filled every available space of WMAL's studios, where preliminary auditions are held each Thursday at 8 p. m. Shannon is still eager for people to come and be auditioned. All will be given a chance to show what they can do.

Sometimes strange things happen, however, when talent actually goes on the air. Those who show up "swell" in auditions, says Mr. Allen, "often blow up on the air, while others who do badly at auditions go over with a bang on the air."

Tomorrow night's show will feature the Ken Walsh trio and several soprano and barytone singers, many of them hold-overs from last week when Attorney General Cummings' speech canceled "Airbreaks." Programs are much livelier now since Allen is assured that "a darn good audience is listening in."

Incidentally, when the American Legion starts a series of hospital entertainments for disabled veterans on Monday with a different show every three weeks, the whole "Airbreaks" crew will be used. This will continue through the winter.

* * * *

THERE'S a decided punch with plenty of tense, edge-of-the-seat drama in "The Adventures of Jimmie Allen," a new daily serial aviation feature making its debut on WRC at 6:15 p. m. Monday. It's rare kid fare, and if you grown-ups have jumpy nerves we advise you to stay away from it.

The first episode, which we heard surrounded by breathless announcers in WRC's studios yesterday, shows Jimmie, a likable, 17-year-old messenger at an airport, in a desperate hand-to-hand fight with a rough-looking stranger who is trying to broadcast faked information to an airplane in flight. The plane carries a million dollars and must be saved from villainy.

Roaring plane propellers, vigorous, terse voices of airport attaches barking instructions about "No. 10 coming in from Dallas" and the general hub-bub of planes landing and taking off, make the atmosphere surprisingly real. The pace is fast. Voices drip with suspense and there is plenty of noise, sound effects and action. The episodes have been written by experienced aviators and the program proved a favorite on the Coast.

Even if it is an electrical transcription . . . we dare you to stay away if you hear the first episode.

LEE (BASS VOICE) EVERETT, WJSV's program director, has suspended his duties for the nonce as gatherer of barn dance talent, to become C. B. S.'s "Hollywood Movie Reporter." Starting Monday, October 1, at 9:15 a. m. on WJSV, he will reveal intimate and interesting data on the lives of filmdom's glittering colony.

"Greetings and salutations, all youse guys and youse gals. It's mighty nice to be back in good old Washington. We're wondering if our Texas tan will hold on until Old Sol gives us our next paint job out in California, where we'll be heading soon to begin work on our next feature, "One Night Stand."

"Good old Hollywood . . . where we had to change life-long habits by getting up early enough to see the sunrise . . . on my way to work at 8 a. m. I was the only guy on the street who wasn't carrying bottles of milk . . . where I learned about bridge in what might be referred to as Belshazzar's palace . . . some one grumbled something about playing for the usual 'fourth.' When I paid off, at 25 cents a point, I went right back to my hamburger diet!

"The great wide West . . . with its mountains . . . flowers and ocean . . . Oh! That wide beautiful expanse of water. Hollywood! Where they turned out in full dress, with Kleig lights and a parade for the opening of a hamburger stand. Hollywood! Where I learned you're not an artist until the camera catches the lines in your face . . . after which you become a character actor."

Thus far the ten-day meet being held here under sponsorship of the American Soaring Society has offered little in the way of excitement, as unfavorable wind conditions prevented anything except short test flights.

The same costume and the flag which Mrs. Smith carried in the pageant shortly after the close of the World War will be used.

The Transient Bureau, the Self Help Cooperatives of the Relief Administration and the Community Center Department are cooperating in producing the pageant.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

THE Civil Service Reinstatement League has joined in the fight against the impending dismissal of 1,800 employes at Internal Revenue under the McKellar rider to the emergency appropriation act. A mass meeting will be held at the Thomson School Tuesday at 8 p. m. at which Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell and H. B. Latimer will speak.

BAKER

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Government Employes is awaiting a reply to its protest which was filed with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Wednesday.

Under leadership of the Internal Revenue unit of the AFGE Lodge, No. 47, the doomed employes are launching a vigorous campaign of protest through their members of Congress back home.

Schaefer to Be Honored.

Michael D. Schaefer, Navy Department, retiring president of the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, will be honored at a testimonial dinner tomorrow night at the Hamilton Hotel. A varied entertainment program will follow the dinner, which is scheduled for 7 p. m. and will include:

Numbers by the Mildred School of Dance, consisting of unique dances by Janet and Helen Wolfe, daughters of Charles E. Wolfe, commissioner's office, Internal Revenue, and Dorothy Niedfeldt, daughter of Henry B. Niedfeldt, General Accounting Office.

Appointment of George H. Rycraw, president of Interdepartmental Lodge, No. 20, AFGS, as a member of the welfare advisory council, District Department, American Legion, has just been announced by James O'Connor Roberts, departmental commander. The appointment will expire in September, 1937. Rycraw is a past commander of the James Feese Europe Post, No. 5, and has also served as post adjutant. He is now secretary of the post's executive committee.

HARRY JOHNSON, National organizer for the National Federation of Federal Employes, is a visitor in the Capital, while Miss Matilda Lindsay, N. F. F. E. organizer here, has returned from a trip through the South. Both speak optimistically of Federal employe organization in the territories they have inspected (Mr. Johnson has been on an extendsive tour of the West). However, both organizers found great concern among Federal employes for the maintenance of a classified merit system—a problem that has the undivided attention of the N. F. F. E.

Miss Lindsay spoke at Johnson City, Tenn., where employes of the Soldier's Home had been removed from the merit system, and the Veterans' Hospital at Oteen, N. C. Mr. Johnson was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Commerce branch, Local No. 2, last night, when he called attention to the inroads on the merit system being made by the Administration in the field. On the other hand, he reported, general membership gains for the NFFE, particularly at St. Louis and at Chicago, where unions have doubled.

Miss Ann O'Neill (*), Legal Division, State Department, is one of the most active feminine workers in Government service. Among her various assignments was attending the Montevideo conference. Miss O'Neill has worked on many important cases involving international law, including the assignment of counsel for America in the United States-Sweden arbitration case, dealing with the detention of three ships under the Swedish flag during the World War. It was a $3,000,000 case and she won it.

You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Ben Bernie and other acts; screen, "Charlie Chan in London"); or to Loew's Palace (second week of Fredric March and Norma Shearer in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"); or to Loew's Columbia, Helen Twelvetrees and Washington's Donald Woods in "She Was a Lady"),

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m., Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Election Tonight.

The District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, will meet at 8 p. m. today at the Hamilton Hotel to elect new officers. La Rue Tanner, Internal Revenue, and Ira Scott, Veterans' Administration, are running a neck-and-neck race to succeed Michael Schaefer, Navy Department, for the presidency. Supporters of both are confident of victory. However, it appears that Cecil Mears, Panama Canal Office, a dark horse in the race, holds the key in the warmly contested campaign. All three are prominent in employe activities. Mears has a wide sphere of influence and took a leading part in the recent AFGE convention. Tanner is president of the Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, the largest in the District, and piloted several important resolutions through the convention.

Scott, president of the Veterans lodge, is the idol of employes in the populous Arlington building where his group is breaking records in growth and progressive activities.

Postettes.

Samuel Rose (*), Contact Section, Veterans' Administration, has been elected commander of Stuart Walcott Post, No. 10, American Legion.

Mrs. Mabel P. Hollister, National Herbarium, Smithsonian Institution, has returned from a three weeks' vacation spent at her summer place in northern Wisconsin.

John Culliton (*), Compliance Division, NRA, has returned from a vacation trip to Atlantic City and points in Pennsylvania, ready to resume an active part in the fall and winter program of the Pennsylvania Democratic Club of Washington. Mrs. Culliton and daughter stopped off in Trenton, N. J., and will return to Washington this week.

E. C. Hooper, Treasury, secretary-treasurer of Local No. 262, National Federation of Federal Employes, announces that his union will meet Monday night at 710 Fourteenth street northwest to map plans for the fall and receive nominations for new officers.

Miss Mary Frame, Sales Tax, Internal Revenue, is recovering from a major operation at Emergency Hospital and is able to receive visitors.

Miss Jane Burns, Sales Tax, Internal Revenue, has just returned to her desk after a brief illness.

Mrs. Ruth W. Zeitler (*), Income Tax unit, Internal Revenue, is enjoying a visit from her mother, Mrs. H. J. Warner, of Plainville, Conn.

Miss Rosella Moser, Finance, War, has returned to her desk after an absence of two months in Minnesota, and found that she had been promoted.

Harold Harman, Bureau of Statistics, ICC, is convalescing after an operation at the Wilmington General Hospital.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The paradox frog, which lives in South America, is one of nature's strangest examples of normal growth. The frog actually grows backward. In the immature stage the tadpole is normally about 10 inches long. The tail accounts for two-thirds or more of this length, but the body itself is generally about three inches long.

As the tadpole develops into the adult frog its tail shrinks to nothing, as in other frogs, but in addition to that the body also grows smaller until, when fully grown, the frog is only about two inches in length—a mere one-fifth of its length as an infant.

Strange as it seems, the one and only world series baseball game that Howard Ehmke ever pitched resulted in a new and so far unbroken record for strikeouts. Ehmke, pitching for the Philadelphia Athletics in the series of 1929, fanned 13 Chicago players, winning 3 to 1.

Back in 1837 when R. H. Welch, Salt Lake City, was married in Logan, Utah, the usual wedding cake was served. Part of it was kept as a memento of the ceremony. Forty-five years later, in 1933, when R. F. Welch, a son of R. H. Welch, was married a piece of the cake was served. The elder Mr. Welch still has the rest of the cake—saving it for future marriages in the family.

'The Human Side,' Starring Adolphe Menjou, Opens Week's Engagement at Rialto

Theme Excels Treatment; Promotions at Fox; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE HUMAN SIDE." Universal picturization of a play by Christine Ames, adapted to the screen by Ernest Pascal and Frank Craven, starring Adolphe Menjou, with Doris Kenyon, Betty Lawford, Reginald Owen, Joseph Cawthorn, Charlotte Henry and Dickie Moore. Directed by Eddie Buzzell. Reviewed Thursday morning.

The basic elements of this comedy-drama of "show business" and the home, it seems to me, are considerably better than the treatment they have been accorded.

In many of its aspects "The Human Side" deals with directness and some force with the fundamentals of life and its relationships. It is primarily a triangle drama, with a divorced theatrical producer still in love with his wife and family on one point, his wife and children on the second, and the wealthy "actress," who backs his shoddy plays as the "menace" occupying the third. An additional fillip is provided the action by the fact that Gregory Sheldon's divorced wife is on the verge of marrying a man of wealth to insure adequate support for her four children. There was opportunity here for a play with all the polgnance of "Mothers Cry" and at least an approximation of the comedy that characterized the brisk developments of "Twentieth Century."

"Written on the Cuff."

Yet "The Human Side" gives the impression of having been hastily and sketchily written on the cuff while filming was in progress. It lacks that closely knit dramatic fiber that creates a sense of realism and conviction and never quite achieves the cohesiveness necessary to grip and hold an audience by its illusion of actuality. The members of the cast are always merely "play acting."

The conflict upon which the dramatic episodes of the story are based, of course, springs from the jealousy that Alma Hastings, who seems to be the world's best bad actress, feels toward Mrs. Sheldon and her brood of kiddies, and the resentment felt by Sheldon toward the rich gentleman who is about to become the second husband of his divorced wife. It would be futile to pretend that many amusing complications do not arise from these preliminary situations, for many do.

Some Clever Clowning.

There is the scene, for example, when Sheldon has returned "home" surreptitiously to toss a monkey wrench into the pretended "romance" of his former wife—who yields to the protestations of her ardent suitor prompted solely by the economic plight of her household—and a "Daniel Boone" supper is being prepared before the fireplace. There is some clever business here, even more cleverly balanced against a succeeding scene that is one of the most violent in the play.

The play, indeed, is spotty with these occasional bursts of skilled writing and direction, alternated with intervals of crass banality. It spots a hit rating a few too many of the latter to ring the bell.

Adolphe Menjou is the irresponsible theatrical man who is always just about to produce a sure-fire hit, but never does. He plays the part with a forced enthusiasm that seems something like a confession that he didn't believe in it himself. Doris Kenyon, as the wife, and Betty Lawford, as the "other woman," suffer for want of lines that might be spoken by someone who had passed, possibly, the sixth grade in school. Joseph Cawthorn is wasted in a small part and Reginald Owen, like Menjou, seems not too intrigued with his assignment.

Juveniles in Support.

The adolescent Sheldons are played by Charlotte Henry and Dick Winslow with no great display of juvenile inspiration and the two small sons by George Ernest, who is rather the best thing in the picture, and Master Dickie Moore, who, I regret to report, is rapidly losing the baby charm that made him one of the most popular of the screen youngsters of a year or two ago.

An extensive bill of subsidiaries surrounds the major feature. The Universal News deals interestingly with the suspect, Hauptmann, the yacht races, the Londos-Strangler Lewis wrestling bout, the President Cup races and other timely items; "Stranger Than Fiction" follows in the footsteps of Ripley and John Hix, and "Gus Van and His Neighbors" introduces the singing comedian of the old team of Van & Schenck as a master of ceremonies who presents a lively revue participated in by Jane, Ruth and Gail, dancers; Armida, Mexican singer and dancer; the Danny Dare Girls and Jean, DeQuincey and Lewis in their burlesque adagio.

Some of these are more on the human side than "The Human Side," which, even so, has its moments.

Now that that midnight preview of "Belle of the Nineties" is out of the way, the Mae West excursion into the deviltries of the Victorian era will be presented six times today and every day throughout the remainder of the week at the Earle, except Sunday, when it will be screened only four times, owing to the shorter box-office day. This elongated daily schedule means that there will be five stage performances instead of the habitual four. The complete schedules of both screen and stage presentations will, as usual, be found in the "Film Time Tables" appearing elsewhere on this page.

Changes at Fox.

It will come as a surprise to many who follow the theater closely that Everett Steinbuch, for the past several months house manager at Loew's Fox in this city, is relinquishing his F street post to assume managerial duties in Cleveland, Ohio, key city, as I recall it, of the territory to which Col. Harry Long, former Eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., was elevated when City Manager Carter Barron was promoted to the Eastern division managership.

Mr. Steinbuch, according to trustworthy report, will be succeeded at Loew's Fox by Gene Ford, recently production manager at the Capitol Theater in New York and more recently serving in the same capacity in association with Carter Barron in Loew's Eastern division territory, with headquarters in Washington.

It was Gene Ford, it will be recalled, who staged both last year's and this year's all-Washington "Going Native" revues, as well as the seventh anniversary bill that attracted such extraordinary business to Loew's Fox last week when the theater's birthday was being celebrated.

Both Popular Here.

The new manager of Loew's Fox—and I have it on consistently reliable authority that these changes will be officially corroborated almost any minute now, although as this is written they have not as yet been officially announced—therefore, already is somewhat of a Washingtonian who numbers a wide circle among his friends in the Capital. He will be welcomed to the little world of Washington's theater just as the Gargantuan Mr. Steinbuch, towering 6 feet 5 or 6 inches into the air and weighing something in excess of 250 pounds, will be missed.

During his comparatively short incumbency at the Fox, Everett Steinbuch has won a high place in the regard of Washington theatergoers. He is a genial and a jovial gentleman whom we shall miss from his habitual haunts. In welcoming Mr. Ford, we would not give the impression of hastening Mr. Steinbuch on his way. It would be nice to have them both here.

Dots and Dashes.

Dick Powell, one of the most popular screen stars ever to make a week of personal appearance on a local stage, left Washington last night by train for Cincinnati, whence he will fly by plane to Little Rock, Ark. . . . In Little Rock, he will tarry long enough to stage the benefit for the Boys Club, fostered by the chamber of commerce, in the auditorium of the high school he attended when a lad in his teens. . . . From Little Rock he will fly directly to Hollywood, having canceled the stop at Fort Worth, Tex. . . . During a half-hour goodby visit yesterday afternoon, his dressing room at the Earle was all cluttered up with Marty Collins and Harry Peterson, a fair working minority of dramatic editors, beautiful young women seeking autographed photos by the bale, Warner executives and a few mere innocent bystanders. . . . Hundreds were killed in the crush! . . . . Dick has personally autographed an average of 1,500 photographs a week for the three weeks he has been on tour. . . . His fountain pen was on the verge of a nervous breakdown yesterday. . . . A swell fellow, Dick Powell. . . . Like John Boles and too few others. . . . The Boswell Sisters are last-minute additions to the cast of Reliance's "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," to release through United Artists. . . . Jack Benny, Nancy Carroll and Gene Raymond are the stars. . . . Having completed his fifth annual musical for Sam Goldwyn, Eddie Cantor is en route to New York by boat. . . . After some broadcasting, he plans to take a holiday in England about December 1. . . . George Gaul and his celebrated orchestra, playing the President's Birthday Ball, the Inaugural Ball, the Bal Boheme and other leading Capital functions, is in the field again for the new season. . . . George is, or was, also librarian of Dr. Hans Kindler's National Symphony. . . . He likewise composes a little in his off hours. . . . He'd have to. . . . On accounta because all Gauls are divided into three parts, or something.

The Old Maestro Himself, Yowsah!

This should not be construed as an indication that Ben Bernie's music is only a shadow of its former self, but rather that the Old Maestro is immensely pleased with the tooting and twanging of "all the lads." Just look at the expression he is wearing—exactly like the cat that just dined on the canary! The Bernie and his orchestra open a week's engagement today at Loew's Fox, where they furnish the complete stage entertainment. Yowsah and a couple of cheerios!

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Sept. 27.—Much talk from time to time regarding Lawrence Tibbett's return to pictures. Edward Small, of Reliance, is known to have negotiated with the famous opera star and one deal was even settled, then called off. There now is reliable evidence that Tibbett will appear in five Reliance productions, made at scattered intervals.

NOAH BEERY.

It is easy to see in all this that the Grace Moore song feature, "One Night of Love," is exerting a strong influence on the producer mind.

Wanger Bids High.

Walter Wanger's entrance into the production field assumes more formidable proportions, what with talk about Greta Garbo joining his organization. He already has under contract Charles Boyer, the French actor, and the newcomer, Peggy Conklin.

Remaking of "Beau Geste" is on Wanger's schedule. He supervised the making of this film during silent days. It has never been done as a talkie. Most of the original picture was made on location in Arizona. Herbert Brenon directed it, with Ronald Colman, Neil Hamilton and Ralph Forbes as the Brothers Geste, and William Powell, Noah Beery and others featured.

Singing Cop Again.

Phil Regan, still known about the studios as the "singing cop," will do the juvenile in the show sequence in "Sweet Adeline," which means he will have several songs with Irene Dunne, as well as one solo number. It will be his best vocalizing opportunity to date in pictures.

Woman Director Expected.

Leontine Sagan, who has made a record as a directress of pictures, is en route to Hollywood, due here within two or three weeks, allowing for a stopover in New York. Miss Sagan directed "Maedchen in Uniform." Nothing is exactly settled for her in the picture line here.

Chinatown Thriller For Bela Lugosi.

Still another mystery picture! They're a routine. But this one is interesting, as it concerns San Francisco Chinatown and is called "The Mysterious Mr. Wong." The cast will include Bela Lugosi, Wallace Ford and Dorothy Lee, while William Nigh is directing. Lugosi will play a Chinese role.

Film Pageant In Review.

Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton are to be teamed in an untitled musical picture starring Joan Crawford, William Powell and Franchot Tone.

Busby Berkeley will take about three months to shoot "Golddiggers of 1935." The cast so far includes Dick Powell, Winifred Shaw, Dorothy Dare and Hugh Herbert.

A major threat of British film makers is indicated by the fact that "Chu Chin Chow," produced by British-Gaumont, was booked into the Roxy Theater for a two-weeks' engagement. Anna May Wong, star of the picture, has left for New York to visit the Roxy during the showing.

Credit for writing the "Carioca" in "Flying Down to Rio" goes to Vincent Youmans. Whether this young composer will be able to write for pictures again soon is problematical. He is recovering from illness at Colorado Springs.

Alan Dinehard is returning to appear in "Lottery Lover." Dinehard went to New York to do a stage play, "Alley Cat," which he wrote. It closed after a short run.

Religious School Opens Maryland Session Today

Berlin, Md., Sept. 27 (Spl.).—The Standard Cooperative Training School will open here tomorrow night and continue for the next six consecutive Friday nights. This school is a religious school for Sunday school teachers and is sponsored by the Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant and Presbyterian Churches in Pocomoke City, Snow Hill, Newark, Berlin and Ocean City.

The school will offer three courses—"The Study of Childhood," taught by Miss Pauline Albertson, Eastern Shore representative of the Maryland-Delaware Council of Religious Education; "The Life of Christ," taught by the Rev. E. M. Sheckley, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Selbyville, Del., and a special course, "What Will We Do With the Missionary Work?" taught by Prof. E. L. Crees, Berlin, Md.

Film Table

Virginia Mines Get NRA Rule In Coal Dispute

Semianthracite Units Not Under Bituminous Code, Is Decision.

NRA announced yesterday that the Virginia semianthracite operators are outside the bituminous coal code.

The ruling was given on the request of the Pulaski Anthracite Co., Parrott, Va.; the Merrimac Morgan Coal Co., the Great Valley Anthracite Corporation, the Blue Ridge Coal Co., of East Radford, Va.; Virginia Anthracite Co. and the Pulaski Coal & Briqueting Co.

There is no anthracite or semi-anthracite code.

Deputy Administrator Wayne P. Ellis informed the Virginia companies that "the Virginia semi-anthracite coal operators do not come under the provisions of the bituminous coal code; therefore, such operators will not be required to comply with any of the provisions of the code, and, conversely, can not receive any of the benefits of that code."

Shortly after the bituminous code became effective the six companies were placed under jurisdiction of the Southern subdivision, No. 1, of the Bituminous Code Authority. At a meeting of the operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, called to arrange wage schedules, no agreement was reached. The union insisted on the basic rate of $4.20 a day of seven hours, and a minimum outside common-labor rate of $3.20, with an understanding that other classifications would be increased proportionately.

Pointing out that the price of their products must be kept below that of Pennsylvania anthracite in order to compete with that product on the market the Virginia operators informed NRA they could not pay the high wages asked by the union.

Stocks Display Quiet Strength; Market Rises

Early Dullness Overcome as Sales Jump to 796,570 Shares.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Quiet strength ruled in security markets today, both stocks and bonds averaging moderately higher.

Slowly returning confidence was apparent along most of the financial front. Wall Street looked forward hopefully to President Roosevelt's scheduled "fireside talk" Sunday night, but traders continued to exercise caution.

Some market students professed to see a "sound money" pattern evolving from the recent movement of securities and commodities. Their argument was strengthened in course of the day by weakness in silver and gold shares, outstanding favorites of inflation-minded speculators in recent months, contrasting with firmness in other industrial groups and in rails and utilities.

Dollar Is Firm.

The dollar was firm against the leading European gold exchanges and commodities barely held their own.

Recent signs of a little seasonal business improvement, combined with talk of a rightward shift in Administration policies and anticipation of "liberal" margin rules by the Federal Reserve, helped to sway sentiment in speculative quarters toward the bull cause.

Extreme early dullness in the share market was followed by a quicker trading tempo as some sizable buying orders flowed into selected issues.

Day's Turnover Larger.

The day's turnover, at 796,570 shares, was slightly larger than yesterday. A gain of seven-tenths of a point lifted the Standard Statistics Co. index of 90 selected stocks to 72.9, the highest since September 5.

A drop of 4½ points in U. S. Smelting paced the decline in nonferrous metals. McIntyre Porcupine dropped 3 points, to within a fraction of 44, and Dome, Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting yielded for losses of fractions to more than a point.

Merchandise, tobacco and motors, as well as a number of shares representative of heavy industry producing durable goods, were in better demand. Gains of 1 to 3 points were scored by American Locomotive preferred, Columbian Carbon, Continental Can, Corn Products, Allied Chemical, American Car & Foundry preferred, Baldwin Locomotive preferred, International Shoe, Hercules Powder, Gillette, R. H. Macy, National Steel and U. S. Steel preferred.

Rails did as well as the general list, although estimates appeared forecasting a small contra-seasonal decline in the weekly carloadings report tomorrow, and August earnings statements for the most part were disappointing.

Exchange to Close.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The board of managers of the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange has voted to close the exchange on Saturday, October 13, the day following Columbus Day, which is a legal holiday.

Late Rallies Enable Bonds To Close Firm

Federal Loans in Larger Supply; Sales Rise to $12,243,000.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Prices were somewhat irregular in today's bond market, but a late rally in the rails enabled the list to close with a fairly firm tone. It closed one-tenth of a point up.

United States Government loans were in larger supply, but the activity in other groups was about the same as in the previous session. Transfers approximated $12,243,000, par value, compared with $11,748,000 yesterday.

Of the total Federals accounted for some $4,150,000, as against $3,140,000 on Wednesday.

There was little news that might have stimulated bonds generally. Most divisions were a little heavy in the early dealings, but late improvement in the carriers aided sentiment materially.

Among the better transportation issues with advances of a point or so were some liens of Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, Louisville & Arkansas, Louisville & Nashville, New Haven, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Wabash and Western Maryland.

Paramount bonds were active, with gains ranging from nearly 2 to 6 points, as reorganization hopes for the company grew brighter. The Paramount issues were at their highs for the year. On the other hand, Kelly Springfield 6s dropped 6¼ points to 30½.

United States Governments generally pointed downward, with losses ranging from 1-32 to 10-32 of a point. The new home loan 2¾s managed to hold a gain of 2-32. Liberty first 4¼s, Treasury 4¼s and Federal Farm 3¼s also held small advances.

The foreign section was quiet.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed; Volume Lags

Specialties Are Improved as Trading Drops to 142,000 Shares.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Specialties improved in curb exchange dealings today, but the rank and file of shares finished rather narrow. Utilities showed small gains, while oil and alcohols were steady.

Metals displayed easier tendencies, in sympahy with heaviness in that group on the big board. Bunker Hill & Sullivan lost 2 points in a small turnover. Pioneer Gold, Newmont, Teck Hughes & Wright Hargraves sold slightly lower.

Mead Johnson gained nearly 2 points, while Singer Manufacturing, Atlas Corporation, American Maize, Parker Rust Proof and Pepperell were up around a point each. Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric were fractionally higher, as were International Petroleum, Swift & Co., Swift Internacional and Hiram Walker. American Cynamid B, Aluminum Co. of America, Creole Petroleum, Lake Shore and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams were steady.

Transfers approximated 142,000 shares, compared with 152,000 the previous session.

Wool Markets.

Boston Sept. 27 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—The larger part of the very moderate call for spot wools in the Boston market was for types suitable for woolen manufacture. Most of the sales were of wools that had been scoured. Buyers continued to survey the market for information on the greasy combing domestic wools offered for sale. A few bids have been made on greasy French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags, but most of them have been lower than acceptable prices.

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—Offerings at the wool auction today amounted to 9,373 bales, of which 8,397 were sold. The heavy offerings of crossbreds sold well to the home trade, and the fewer greasy merinos placed on the market were all sold. Scoured types offered for sale were less heavy and met with a fair demand.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Credit rather than currency is receiving most attention in Wall street financial circles these days.

Renewed talk of currency "war" between the dollar and the pound, or of possible steps toward stabilization, have not evoked much interest. Most Wall street experts regard the international situation as too unstable.

The potential effects of the devaluation of the dollar on domestic affairs, however, is a subject of lively conversation.

John T. Madden and Marcus Nadler, writing in the current issue of Economic Forum, assert that "the greatest and most lasting effects of devaluation of the dollar have been on the Treasury, on the Federal Reserve banks and on the money market in general."

Drs. Madden and Nadler, who are director and assistant director, respectively, of the Institute of International Finance, conducted by the Investment Bankers Association and New York University, conclude that the international aspect of devaluation of the dollar is not very important at this time. But the huge surplus of gold created, providing a basis, a gigantic expansion of credit, they find extremely important.

The basis for a credit inflation which might conceivably become a "debauch," according to these experts, has been laid. Whether the credit inflation will develop, they say, depends upon the future monetary policy of the Treasury, and upon the Federal Reserve authorities. Further tinkering with the currency might again impair confidence and prevent an expansion of credit.

It is a matter of opinion, of course, as to what constitutes inflation, and what is legitimate credit expansion. The Reserve System, severely criticized for its deflationary tactics in 1921 and 1922, has been just as severely censured for its failure to check the 1928-29 boom.

Strike Ending Proves Aid to Textile Plant

Industry Found in Healthier Condition as Stocks Begin Moving.

Ending of the textile strike after slightly more than three weeks' partial stoppage, has, according to sources close to the industry, left the textile trades in a far healthier position than when the strike call was issued.

The looming threat of overproduction which was reaching serious proportions in some lines has been removed, at least for some months to come.

Mill owners at the start of the strike estimated that their supply of goods on hand would last from four to six weeks. During the past week, however, partial depletion of some lines, particularly in the apparel section, forced a revision of these earlier estimates.

It was pointed out that disposal of the surplus stocks will strengthen the general price structure of the trade considerably as price concessions which were being granted to move goods before the strike began will end.

Aside from this, the fact that operators saved in the neighborhood of $15,000,000 in wages during the three weeks' cessation of activities, will unquestionably tend further to stabilize the textile industry's financial structure.

Cleveland Coal Output Seen Largest in Year

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 27 (AP).—Herman M. Griggs, manager of the Ore and Coal Exchange, predicted today that the lake coal movement out of Cleveland and other Lake Erie ports this year will be the largest in four years.

Griggs said that up to last Monday 25,666,000 tons of coal were shipped from Lake Erie ports, as compared with 22,561,000 tons for the entire season last year. He predicted that this year's total will approximate 35,000,000 tons.

Oren shipments are tapering off, said Griggs, who expects the stason's total to be around 21,600,000 tons, the same as last year.

Gilt-edged securities, transatlantic issues, rubber, and oil shares were easier, while home rails held firm on the better coal outlook. Japanese bonds weakened on profit taking. German bonds held steady, and home industrials and kaffirs were generally firmer. West African gold-mining stocks improved. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Rentes, bank stocks, and industrials declined on the bourse today in a session marked by the return of pessimism owing to the European outlook. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—In an irregular market, prices on the boerse recovered today.

Grain Values Turn Higher Under Outlook

Selling Pressure Is Absent, as Upturns Appear in All Grains.

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—With traders on tiptoe for President Roosevelt's talk tonight and his further talk on Sunday night, grain prices tended upward most of the time today.

Advances in quotations were partly stimulated by cold weather, general over the corn belt and giving promise of increased feeding demand.

Furthermore, the fact was stressed that the time when flour demand normally becomes augmented is near at hand.

Absence of Selling Rush.

An absence of selling pressure rather than any special urge to buy was apparent, with wheat closing firm, one-eighth to one-half above yesterday's finish, December new, 1.03¾@1.04; corn, also one-eighth to one-half up, December new, 78⅜@78½; oats, unchanged to three-eighths lower, and provisions unchanged to 20 cents down.

At first, wheat prices averaged lower and corn higher. Frost reports from parts of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Colorado indicated considerable damage to late corn and to forage crops still growing.

In contrast with consequent upturns of the corn market, wheat was temporarily pulled down by reports that wheat and other grain was being offered from a Russian port for shipment to Montreal.

Wheat Buying Develops.

Soon, however, sufficient buying of wheat developed here to overcome early setbacks, and to lift prices to above yesterday's finish.

Wheat bulls emphasized that the domestic cash wheat situation retained its strength, and that the United States movement of wheat from rural sources was meager. Wintry conditions in Canada and steadiness of the Liverpool wheat market were also a subject of notice. Helping the subsequent general upward tendency of wheat in Chicago were gains in securities. Minneapolis mills reported some betterment of flour business.

Offerings of corn to arrive were decidedly light. Oats were inclined to drag, influenced by possible imports from Argentina. Provisions lacked support.

Bankers Meet Today to Study Exchange Act

Thomas and Landis Head Speakers for Session at Willard Hotel.

At the meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association to be held today at 4 p. m. in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel, Vice Governor J. J. Thomas, of the Federal Reserve Board; Commissioner James M. Landis, of the National Securities Exchange Commission; Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, director of division of research and statistics; Dr. Carl E. Parry, assistant director, division of research and statistics, and Walter Wyatt, general counsel, officials of the Treasury Department will informally discuss the securities exchange act of 1934, and the manner in which banks will operate under the rules and regulations issued by the commission and the Federal Reserve Board.

Justin C. Cash was elected president and director of the Union Stock Yard Co. of Baltimore, according to an announcement by Robert L. Showacre, secretary-treasurer, following a meeting of the board of directors of the company held at Baltimore recently. Mr. Cash succeeds the late Jacob H. Baugher.

Mr. Cash, who is 35 years of age, has for about seven years been connected with the Buffalo Stock Yards and for the past three years was superintendent of those yards. Mr. Cash was graduated from Michigan State College in 1925, having majored in animal husbandry and for two years was county agricultural agent in the State of Michigan in charge of animal husbandry.

Mr. Showacre, who has been connected with the yard for 37 years, will continue as secretary-treasurer of the company, the position which he has occupied for many years.

The Union Stock Yards at Baltimore is one of the largest receiving and marketing yards in the Eastern district and handles annually about 127,000 head of cattle, 341,000 sheep, 677,000 hogs, and 77,000 calves.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, in Alexandria yesterday, the following directors were elected for the ensuing year:

Maurice D. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders, Irvin Owings, John M. Riordon, Thomas J. Groom, Joseph H. Milans, Dr. Clarence A. Weaver, Thomas N. Beavers, William L. Bush, J. E. Colliflower, E. T. Chewning, R. L. Elliott, A. S. Gatley, Harry E. Mayer, J. F. Maury, Vernon G. Owen and Frank Owings.

Exchange Lists 10 Outsiders On Committees

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange has chosen ten "outsiders" to sit with it and on its various sub-committees until next July. This was in accordance with an action taken by the committee last June.

The new advisory group includes five partners in New York Stock Exchange firms, one New York City official, one foreign exchange expert, the president of a railroad, the head of a communications company and the president of a leading company in the so-called heavy industries division.

Those appointed were Gayer G. Dominick, of Dominick & Dominick; Donald G. Geddes, of Clark Dodge & Co.; John M. Hancock, of Lehman Bros.; Robert Abercrombie Lovett, of Brown Bros., Harriman & Co.; Joseph R. Swan, of Edward B. Smith & Co., formerly president of the Guaranty Co.; Adolph A. Berle, jr., chamberlain of the City of New York; George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works and chairman of the durable goods industries committee; Fred I. Kent, formerly foreign exchange controller of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; Roy B. White, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., and Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central Railroad.

U. S. Exports Increase as Imports Drop

August Shipments Exceed Value of Same Period in Past 2 Years.

(Associated Press.)

American exports increased in August to exceed the value of the corresponding month in the previous two years for the first time since 1929.

The total value was $171,965,000, as compared with $131,473,000 a year ago, but imports dropped off.

Imports in August were $119,515,000, as compared with $154,918,000 a year ago.

Exports in August, 1932, were $108,599,000 and imports $91,102,000.

Ordinarily, the department said, total exports advanced about 4.5 per cent in value from July to August, slightly in excess of the usual seasonal movement. The gain this year was 6.3 per cent, slightly in excess of the usual seasonal movement.

The decline of 6.1 per cent in value of imports, however, was contrary to the usual seasonal swing. Export values were 49 per cent of the 1923-1925 index, which is used as 100 by the department. Imports were 39 per cent of the base, the lowest point since May, 1933.

Export values were largely accounted for, the department said, by seasonal gains in shipments of tobacco, fruit and grain, and a larger shipment of lumber, iron and steel mill products, machinery, fertilizer and aircraft.

The decrease in imports was mainly due to smaller shipments of tin, crude rubber, inedible oils and fats, raw hides and skins, newsprint and coffee.

RCC Authorizes Distribution of One Per Cent

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The board of directors of the Railroad Credit Corporation authorized a liquidating distribution to participating carriers of 1 per cent, as of September 30.

President E. G. Buckland of the corporation, who made the announcement, said the return, which is the tenth that has been made, will amount to $734,000, of which $343,500 will be in cash and $391,000 in credits on obligations due the corporation.

With the liquidating announced, the corporation has authorized distributions amounting to $17,696,000, or 24 per cent of the pooled emergency freight charges, since it began liquidating on June 1, 1933.

Cotton Prices Decline Under Liquidation

October Closes at 12.35 as General Market Drops 7 to 10 Points.

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Cotton again sagged into new low ground for the movement today under liquidation and Southern selling, with demand limited, but fluctuations were over a narrow range.

Hesitancy to buy was attributed to quietness of textiles and spot cotton and larger crop ideas. December sold off from 12.58 to 12.47 and closed at 12.49, with the general market ending steady at net losses of 7 to 10 points.

The market opened unchanged to 1 point lower with moderate trade and commission-house buying absorbing Southern and local selling, which was influenced by relatively lower Liverpool cables.

Trading was on a limited scale during the morning, as traders for the most part appeared disposed to hold off fresh commitments pending expected announcements from Washington in the near future regarding Administration policies, as well as publication of the private end-September crop estimates.

The first of these reports which appeared placed the condition at 56.8 and pointed to an indicated crop of 9,667,000 bales, compared with the Government's September 1 estimate of 9,252,000 bales. Some trade buying orders were uncovered as September approached the 12½-cent level during the morning, but liquidation appeared on rallies on 1 to 3 points above the previous closing levels.

Eased Under Selling.

During the afternoon the market slowly eased under reselling by earlier buyers as well as offerings from the South and New Orleans. October sold off from 12.45 to 12.35 and May from 12.77 to 12.67, with final prices at or within a few points of the lows.

The volume of business increased somewhat on the late afternoon decline. Failure of the steadier tone of the stock and wheat markets to bring in more support was said to have been disappointing to earlier buyers.

The weather was generally favorable as Western Belt areas escaped overnight threats of frost and warmer temperatures were predicted for that section.

Exports today 22,386, making 633,221 so far this season. Port receipts 27,192. United States port stocks 750,719.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was less active today, but showed firmness and closed around the best for the day and from 3 to 7 points above the previous close. There was some pressure early, but values rallied later on renewed covering and commission-house buying, promoted by the better tone to grains, stocks, lard and hogs, as well as crude oil and the advance in tallow and sperm. Sales were 63 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; October closed 7.98; December, 8.00; January, 8.05; Michigan, 8.18; May, 8.30.

Britain Sets Mark In Colonial Sales

Exports to Empire Exceed World Trade for First Time in History.

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Empire Industries Association announced today that this year, for the first time in history, Great Britain's exports to the empire were exceeding her exports to foreign nations.

In the first eight months of the year the exports to empire countries increased by more than $60,000,000 over last year, or 14.2 per cent. Exports to foreign countries increased by $13,750,000, or 2.9 per cent.

The net effect was to bring the empire exports $3,315,000 higher than exports to foreign countries.

The British Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution urging the government to take opportunity of the King's silver jubilee celebrations next year, when leaders from the dominions will be in London, to call another imperial economic conference similar to that at Ottawa in 1932.

Record Year For Production Of Rayon Seen

New York, Sept. 27.—Synthetic fiber, celebrating its fiftieth year of existence, will reach a record world production figure of 744,000,000 pounds in 1934, an increase of 83,445,000 pounds, or 13 per cent, over 1933, it is estimated by Textile World, in a special issue celebrating rayon's golden anniversary.

United States production for the year is placed at 195,000,000 pounds, compared with 208,000,000 pounds in 1933, a drop of 6 per cent. Available data, Textile World adds, seem to indicate that consumption of synthetic fibers this year in the United States should be about 187,000,000 pounds. In 1920 only 50,000,000 pounds of synthetic fiber were produced throughout the world, 9,000,000 of which were produced here.

Textile World's rayon production estimates for all producing countries, prepared with the assistance of its Manchester (England) correspondent, and compared with 1933 production, follow. It is to be noted, the publication states, that the United States estimate was prepared before the textile strike started.

Raw sugar was quiet today, but the undertone was firm and it was revealed that yesterday's local refiner bought 14,000 bags of Cubas from store here at 2.92, an advance of 2 points from the last previous sale. This was the only business actually reported, but it was the impression that local refiners were still interested at this level, and it was rumored that an outport refiner paid 2.94 for Cubas from store at Norfolk. Warehouse supplies here continue to dwindle with the total now down to 1,002,880 bags, or 552,120 bags below a month ago, as against 714,000 a year ago.

Refined was unchanged with a moderate business reported both in the way of withdrawals and new buying. Prices were listed at 4.75 for fine granulated by refiners, with second hands at 4.65.

Price Index Tends Upward After Decline

1934 Figures Stand at 14.8 Per Cent Above Last Year.

New York, Sept. 27.—Following the rather sharp dip to 117.20 on September 14, the lowest level since August 6, the Dun & Bradstreet daily weighted price index advanced irregularly to stand at 118.02 on September 20, or at about the same position it held one week earlier. The latest index compares with 119.31 on August 20, a decrease of 1.1 per cent, but shows a rise of 14.8 per cent above the corresponding days of last year when it stood at 102.76.

Six of the 30 items entering into the index advanced as compared with a week ago, including butter, hogs, steers, lambs, silk and silver, while the commodities declining during that period were wheat, corn, rye, oats, flour, lard, cotton, wool, rubber, zinc, tin and steel scrap.

The following table presents the Dun & Bradstreet daily weighted price index of 30 basic commodities compiled from quotations furnished by the United Press, since August 1, 1934, and the corresponding periods of the preceding year. (1930-1932=100):

Filer & Co. Suspended by Stock Exchange

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today announced the suspension of Filer & Co. from membership on filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy by the firm.

The committee on business conduct of the exchange announced that it had been advised by the firm "that no losses will be sustained by the public because no customers are involved."

The firm was described in stock exchange quarters as small. The partners made their offices with another firm and had no branches out of town. It was the first stock exchange firm to be suspended for insolvency since January, 1932.

It has three general partners, Leo J. Filer, Albert Kastan and Wilfred H. Fritts, the last named holding the stock exchange seat, and two special partners, J. Manheimer and Aletta E. Filer.

The New York Curb Exchange later suspended the firm from an associate membership in that market.

Wholesale Commodity Prices Advance Slightly During Week

Gains Found Mostly in Foodstuffs; Cattle and Hogs Move to Higher Ground; Wheat and Cotton Join Ranks of Losers.

Wholesale commodity prices advanced slightly during the week, according to the index of the National Fertilizer Association. As was the case during the preceding week, the gain was due principally to increases for prices of foods.

The general index advanced 2 points, moving up from 76.4 to 76.6. (The three-year average, 1926-1928, equals 100.) During the preceding week the index advanced 4 points; two weeks ago it advanced 1 point, and three weeks ago it advanced 9 points. The latest index number, 76.6, compares with 75.0 a month ago and 69.4 a year ago.

During the latest week 6 of the 16 groups in the index were affected by price changes. Four groups advanced and two declined. Foods, grains, feeds and live stock, fats and oils and miscellaneous commodities advanced. Textiles and metals each declined 1 point.

Prices for 26 individual commodities advanced while the prices for 28 declined during the latest week. For the most part the commodities that advanced showed larger gains than the losses in the prices for declining commodities. During the preceding week there were 24 advances and 30 declines. Two weeks ago there were 28 advances and 22 declines.

Wheat declined from 2 to 3 cents a bushel during the latest week. Corn declined about 1 cent a bushel. Cotton declined about one-fifth of a cent a pound to slightly below 13 cents a pound. Cattle prices advanced materially. Heavy hog prices moved up slightly.

The list of advancing commodities included lard, butter, cottonseed oil, peanut oil, corn oil, pork, sweet potatoes, dried beans, canned tomatoes, raisins, apples, lambs, cotton sheeting, cotton yarns, silk, silver and hides. Declining commodities included burlap, linseed oil, eggs, ham, flour, oats, barley, zinc, tin, coffee middlings and rubber.

Dun's Insolvency Index Drops During First Half of September

New York, Sept. 27.—Dun's Insolvency Index for the first half of September makes a further drop to 53.6 from 54.2 for August. The decline was slightly less than seasonable for the first fall month. It compares, however, with 74.7 and 129.2, respectively, for the first half of September in the two preceding years, continuing the heavy reduction heretofore noted. For this year to date there has been a reduction each month with the exception of April and June. The decline from January this year to August has been 28.2 points, equivalent to a reduction of 34.2 per cent.

For the year 1933, the decline from January to August was 92.7 points, or 51.6 per cent. Relatively, the reduction was greater in 1933 than during this year, but the Insolvency Index in that year was higher. The five-year average, covering the years 1925 to 1929, inclusive, may be considered more nearly normal in the matter of seasonal decline. The reduction for the period from January to August in those years averaged 48.6 points, equivalent to a falling off of 34.8 per cent. It is apparent that the decline this year has been about seasonal.

The Involvency Index for the past eleven months is compared below for several years, the figures being computed on the basis of the number of commercial insolvencies to each 10,000 firms in business:

Farmers' Income for August Is Advanced to $572,000,000

(Associated Press.)

Cash income of farmers during the month of August was reported yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to have totaled $572,000,000.

Of this, $499,000,000 came from the sale of farm products, $47,000,000 from AAA rental and benefit payments and $26,000,000 from emergency purchases of cattle by the Government in drought areas.

The total income was an increase of $78,000,000 over July and $159,000,000 over August, 1933.

Income from all sources during the first eight months of this year totaled $3,642,000,000, or $717,000,000 more than in the corresponding period of last year.

The bureau said the high point of farmers' cash income will be reached as usual in September and October this year, but the increase over preceding months may be smaller than in past years. This is expected to result from the crop reduction programs and drought damage.

Virginia Power Capital Up to $78,839,983

(Associated Press.)

The fixed capital of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. increased from $21,047,032 to $78,839,983 between July 1, 1909, and December 1, 1933, according to testimony this week at a Federal Trade Commission hearing on the company's financial structure.

Examiners conducting the hearing said that company publicity would be delved into at this time, as has been done with other companies of the Stone & Webster group.

The publicity angle, they said, might be taken up later.

Financial Structure Duscussed.

In a voluminous report Examiner Charles R. Taylor discussed the financial structure of the company from the time it was incorporated as the Virginia Railway & Power Co. on June 29, 1909, by Frank J. Gould and associates up to the close of business for the last calendar year.

Since 1925, the report showed, a controlling interest in the company has been held by Engineers Public Service Co. of Delaware, a Stone & Webster holding company.

The physical property and water rights of the company were appraised at $38,503,104 as of January 1, 1920, in a check-up of the property completed in 1922.

Increase of Capital.

Taylor said the increase in fixed capital was due to acquisition of new construction and betterments.

He named the principal acquisition of the company since 1920 as: Norfolk & Portsmouth Traction Co., Richmond Railway Viaduct Co., Spotsylvania Power Co., Williamsburg Power Co., Roanoke Rapids Co. and the Roanoke River Development Co. The latter two are North Carolina corporations.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Bonds and notes maturing in October total $34,079,500, compared with $40,357,610 in September and $58,872,000 in October, 1933, according to compilations made by a statistical organization. Railroad maturities total $14,598,690, public utilities, $6,217,190, and industrials $13,263,620.

The board of directors of the Delaware & Hudson Corporation have voted to affiliate with the newly formed Association of American Railroads, of which J. J. Pelley, formerly president of the New Haven, will be chairman.

According to final returns received by the American Institute of Steel Construction, August bookings of fabricated structural steel recorded a 28 per cent recovery from that of July, the low point of the summer. This estimate was based on reports from 82 per cent of the industry.

The Iron Age composite on steel scrap has receded from $9.58 to $9.50 a gross ton. The composites on pig iron and finished steel are unchanged at $17.90 a ton and 2.124 cents a pound, respectively.

Announcement was made today by the trustees of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway that on and after October 1 they will be prepared to purchase at not more than face value, without interest subsequent to their respective maturities, equipment trust certificates, series BB, which matured February 15, together with interest coupons maturing on that date from all outstanding series BB certificates. Also interest coupons which matured March 1 from equipment trust certificates series AA.

The Portland (Oreg.) General Electric Co. is requesting holders of its first and refunding mortgage bonds, 4½ per cent series, due 1960, to take prompt action to enable the elimination from the indenture of the provision which prohiibts the extension of the company's first mortgage bonds due July 1, 1935. The company says it believes this action necessary since "the refunding of the maturing bonds will be difficult if not impossible" and an extension will be required.

Chicago Listed For Largest Housing Unit

37 Blocks in Windy City to Be Rebuilt Under Federal Aid.

The way was opened for Chicago to receive the employment and special benefits of the largest single Public Works Administration low-cost housing and slum-clearance project yet undertaken by PWA with the start of condemnation action in the Chicago Federal Court today.

Acquisition of 37 blocks in the southwest section of Chicago was sought by the Government in one of the largest urban real estate transactions ever undertaken in the United States, it was announced by Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

Community Aid Expected.

Utilization of this land for good inexpensive metropolitan housing to replace dwellings causing a low standard of health and living in this area will depend upon the cooperation given the Government slum-clearance and low-cost housing program by the community, Administrator Ickes explained.

Full cooperation permitting PWA to overcome obstacles and acquire the necessary land at fair prices will result in carrying out the project with resultant benefits to the community. It is expected that Chicago as a whole will stand back of this project.

Sales of Properties.

Inaugurating the project, the Department of Justice today filed suit for the condemnation of the site in the United States District Court in Chicago. The area named in the suit is bounded by Racine and Ashland streets on the east and west, and Harrison street and Roosevelt road on the north and south.

Property owners within the site now will be given opportunity to negotiate options of sale through conference and agreement with the Government.

The Chicago project is part of the National program for slum clearance and low cost housing being carried on by PWA. The housing division of PWA is working out a $150,000,000 program calling for construction of low cost housing to replace blighted areas in many cities with modern, healthful living quarters at moderate rents.

It is estimated that this Chicago project will cost around $12,500,000 and will accommodate 3,000 families. The money will be taken from a fund of $25,000,000 budgeted for a PWA housing program in Chicago, of which this will be the first project, provided the community cooperates to secure the employment and social benefits of the proffered Federal aid.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Wool—Unusual activity on the wool top futures market during the past week was belived in local trade circles to represent hedges placed by Boston wool merchants against their warehouse stocks of raw wool. Offerings were said to have been well absorbed by trade and commission houses.

Oil—The warm weather over a rather wide area was said to be disappointing to some trade factors in the heating oil market. The heavy consuming season is still a few weeks off, but it has been the custom, it was said, to begin making inquiries for requirements along this time, which so far has not been done.

Copper—A resolution has been presented to the State highway commission in Arizona requesting that recently advertised bids for steel automobile plates for the State be rescinded and new bids calling for copper plates advertised. Copper plates were said to have given one of the State's principal industries much favorable publicity in the past.

Dried fruits—Reports to the trade indicate that shipments of dried fruit against contracts are holding up satisfactorily on the Pacific Coast and prices are well maintained. There was some evidence, it was said, that several lines are being ordered out ahead of specifications, indicating an increase in demand in Eastern markets.

Pig iron—According to a survey made for the trade, 30 per cent of loans under the new Federal housing act have been made for heating and plumbing equipment, which was said to hold forth much promise for the pig iron trade inasmuch as cast iron is an important material in all heating equipment.

U. S. Pipe & Foundry Co., with a bid of $348,250, was the only bidder on the 7,469 tons of pipe for the San Francisco high-pressure system. The company has received award for 168 tons from South Pasadena.

This is a selling job and a good one. No investment on your part whatever. We start you in business for yourself, and furnish the capital and equipment, and we offer you one of the greatest opportunities to become independent and make your future secure.

Sales ability not essential. We will discount sales experience in favor of a genuine desire to work hard and learn.

Walt Mason

The welfare workers come around, on good and kindly errands bound; they wish to raise a roll of cash, to furnish hungry people hash, to buy good shoes for little kids, and also farthingales and lids for worthy wives and mothers sad, who find the luck supremely bad. The kindly welfare workers come, and ask me to dig up a sum that will assist in helping those who are submerged in darkest woes. And I explain, with swinging jaws, why I can't help this worthy cause. If I should hand them out a cent, I fear it won't be wisely spent; it's too much like the British dole; in helping people from the hole, you only push them further in, by handing them this unearned tin. And then (I spring the ancient wheeze) I have my private charities; a score of people look to me for hats and shoes and pie and tea; and when I give to folks with those, I know just where the money goes; no middlemen can make me sweat, no agents can a rake-off get. This giving to the village chest won't keep away the vagrant guest, who comes pirooting to my door, and asks three pies, and sometimes four. And then the taxes I must pay! They break my heart, they make me gray; our grinding taxes should provide for those who are not well supplied. And as I make my lurid spiel, its futile emptiness I feel. I know I'm merely talking bosh, my dreary arguments won't wash; they're bearded chestnuts, they've been sprung by countless tightwads, old and young. The daughter of the horse leech heard this sort of bunk from some old bird, with ample kopecks in his vest, before there was a village chest.

Hikers Embark Sunday on Last Swim of Season

Wanderbirds to Explore Scotts Island and Bullneck Run.

By Robert Shosteck.

The gorgeous scenic beauty of Bullneck Run and the Potomac River near Scotts Island once more lures the Wanderbirds Hiking Club for the last swim of the summer. Many of the first signs of autumn—the maple leaves turning scarlet and the falling walnuts—will greet the hikers on this 4-mile trip down the gorge of Scotts Run, along the Potomac trail and up Bullneck Run after a refreshing swim and exploration of the wild Scotts Island.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 11 a. m. Sunday for the bus trip to Swinks Mill, Va., where the hike begins. The round trip fare is 40 cents, reservations being required of all who plan to go. Telephone National 4200 by 11 p. m. Saturday. The buses will return to The Post Building about 6:30 p. m.

Starting from the mill, the hikers will follow the excellent trail on the east bank of the run to Scotts Falls. Here, in the idyllic setting of a miniature Great Falls, amid scores of ancient hemlocks growing among the giant boulders, the group will lunch. This is the largest stand of hemlock to be seen anywhere near Washington. Below the falls, in the meadow bordering the Potomac, the golden aster and golden rod vie with the lavender Joe-Pye weed and the cerulean mistflower in attracting autumn butterflies and hikers.

At this point the river is a roaring series of rapids known as Stubblefield Falls. The trail meanders along the river's edge for over half a mile to the mouth of Bullpeck Run, the scene of the swimming party if the weather permits. Hikers interested in painting will be eager to make the acquaintance of Mr. Lynn, a young artist who lives in a cabin nearby, and has painted most of the wild flowers, birds, and reptiles found in the vicinity. There is a fine spring a short distance from his cabin.

Those interested in geology and natural history will take an excursion to Scotts Island, either swimming the shallow river or by canoes, if these are available. Besides a rich flora of rare ferns and herbs, this island is covered with huge boulders and outcrops which bear a great variety of minerals.

From Lynn's cabin the group will follow the trail up Bullneck Run, visiting the abandoned gold mine and following some of the old sluices—mute testimony of the vain hopes of a group of gold seekers many decades ago. Bullneck Run, as rock and picturesque as Scotts Run, contains a fortune in gold available to the panner with enough patience to sift the precious glittering bits of metal from the tons of rocky silt.

The dogwood with its bunches of orange-red berries is one of the most attractive autumn trees. Only later in the season does it meet serious rivals. The walnuts are nearly bare and dropping most of their nuts, while the hickories are hardly aware of the end of summer.

Emerging on Great Falls road, the group will go along the highway about 1 mile to the buses awaiting them at the bridge over Scotts Run. Club members are urged to bring along song books to entertain the drivers on the return trip.

Coming Events.

Saturday, September 29, 7:30 p. m.—Courts at McLean, Va.

Monday, October 1, 5:45 p. m.—Scout swim and life saving, Y. M. C. A.

Thursday, October 4, 7:45 p. m.—Life saving demonstration, Shoreham pool.

Following the fad inaugurated last year by the "White House" Division, eight more divisions have given themselves names. Those registered at Scout headquarters are:

Second, Takoma-Silver Spring Division; Three A, Piney Branch Division; Three B, Rock Creek Division; Seventh, Potomac Division; Eighth, Cathedral Division; Ninth, Chevy Chase Division; Tenth, Capitol Division and Twelfth, Redskin Division.

Starts Tenth Year.

The tenth annual application for charter of Troop 43 is being prepared for submission to the local council in October. It reregisters about 40 Scouts and two assistant Scoutmasters: Clarence R. Fernald and John D. Chandler, both of whom have come up through the ranks of 43. A new addition to the office of assistant Scoutmaster is Capt. George L. Myers. Each of these assistants will take the elements of Scoutmastership course now being held. Louis B. Grening, a veteran of ten years, continues as Scoutmaster. Besides a new troop committee, the office of chaplain will be added to the roster.

Troop 43 has set a record for civic good turns, leading the city in this respect with 150 boy hours in the past three weeks. A troop paper, the Pioneer, will shortly be issued under the direction of James and Robert Riedel and Elmer Wallace as the editorial staff.

Troop 23 Plans Advancement.

Troop 23, headed by Scoutmaster Ira Gulickson and Assistant Scoutmaster Donald Baus, plans an extensive advancement in merit badge work. Next week there will be an archery contest to help the boys get archery merit badges. The judges will be officers of the troop. The contest will be held in the evening and bows and arrows have been made by the boys.

Troop Prepares for Winter.

Troop 82, located at the Brookland Methodist Episcopal Church, Fourteenth and Lawrence streets northeast, has begun extensive preparations for the winter season. Elections of the senior and junior officers of the troop will be held tomorrow evening. Committeeman William J. Weber has arranged for a series of short talks and demonstrations that will appear regularly at the troop meetings. The talks will be on such subjects as "Safety," "Fire Prevention" and "First Aid," and be given by men who have made a life work of such subjects.

Meetings Resume Oct. 5.

Troop 42's meetings will not resume until October 5. Although most of the Scouts of that troop are away during the summer, the remaining boys have done a large part in preparing for the oncoming year. They are painting their furniture, building places for their tools in the workroom and fixing their benches.

Leaders' Course to Be Held.

Patrol leaders and other junior leaders of the troops of the Capital division, will hold a one-evening session to discuss the patrol leaders' job and ways of "putting it across" successfully, at the training room at Scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue, on Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m.
